SEND FOR A PRICE LIST OF JOHN BLAKE'S PATENT SELF-ACTING HYDRAULIC RAMS,

For Raising Water for the supply of Towns, Villages, Irrigation, Railway Stations, Mansions, Fountains, Farms, etc.

No Cost for Motive Power, which is obtained from the Stream of Water passing through the Rams.

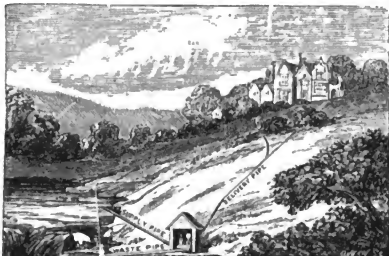

NO OILING OR PACKING REQUIRED.

Made in sizes to raise from 200 to 500,000 Gallons per day. Will force to a height of 1,500ft.

Special Rams for High Falls to send up Two Gallons out of every Five Gallons passing through them.

This Ram will force a part of the same water that works it, or will force clean water from a well or spring whilst worked by a stream of impure water. Rams on this principle can be supplied to force to a height of 1,500 feet.

This View represents Fig. A Ram forcing up a part of the same water that works it, which is supplied from a spring. Special Rams of A make can be supplied to force to a height of 600 feet.

TESTIMONIALS.

From T. H. SIDEBOTTOM, Esq., Etherow House, Hadfield, February 22nd, 1882.

"Induced by the good report of my cousin, Mr. J. A. Sidebottom, as to the working of the Hydraulic Ram he had from you, I ordered the one you fixed here a year ago, which I am pleased to say has since worked well night and day. Yet the two rams you fixed at Snow's Hill Manor, Gloucestershire, for my brothers and myself, are, I think, a still more remarkable example of your success. We had a Ram fixed by a well-known firm, which proved a miserable failure and which your Rams displaced. They are forcing the water through three-quarters of a mile of delivery pipe, a little in excess of the quantity you guaranteed, to an elevation of 340 feet, and without the slightest hitch to the time of the last report from our tenant."

From V. F. BENETT-STANFORD, Esq., M.P., Pyl House, Tisbury, Wilt. August 20, 1880.

"I have no hesitation in saying your Self-acting Hydraulic Ram and apparatus for extinguishing fire, which you laid down here, including about one mile of pipes, are very satisfactory. The Ram forces upwards of 5,000 gallons per day to a service reservoir holding 25,000 gallons, at an elevation of 290ft., being 70ft. above the roof of the house, from which reservoir the water is distributed to the house, stables, home farm, and several cottages; and in case of fire, four jets can be thrown on the house from different sides at a great force and large volume. I consider your work has been done well and efficiently, and does you credit."

From Mr. HENRY ROBINSON, Engineer to the Stockport District Waterworks Co., September 8, 1883.

"Dear Sir,—I can now report well of the two Hydraulic Rams we have fixed to your instructions for the supply of Disley Village. 40,000 gallons per day was the quantity you promised they would force to a height of 68 feet, but on testing them I am convinced that 50,000 gallons is not the limit of their power, whilst the quantity of waste water used in driving them is not equal to half the capacity of the 6-inch pipe by which they are fed, and I am inclined to the belief that a more simple and efficient pump cannot be found."

From the Right Honourable the EARL OF GRANARD, Castle Forbes, March 1st, 1880.

"The Hydraulic Ram erected for me at Castle Forbes has answered perfectly. Considering the very small fall obtainable by the nature of the ground, it is a great success, and throws up water to a cistern on the top of a tower 80 feet high. When Mr. Blake first proposed to put it up I doubted the possibility of its succeeding, owing to the nature of the ground, but I have been most agreeably undeceived.—GRANARD."

From the Right Hon. the EARL OF ROMNEY, 86, Eaton Place, S.W. June 12th, 1880.

"Sir,—In reply to your inquiry, I have pleasure in stating that the Hydraulic Ram which you erected for me at Gayton does its work remarkably well, and is a great success. I think the work is especially creditable to you on account of the very small fall of but 3 feet with which you laid to deal, and I shall always be glad to recommend you.—Yours faithfully, ROMNEY."

From Captain TOWNSEND, Wincham, February 10th, 1877.

"In answer to your inquiry, I am glad to say the Hydraulic Ram you sent me in November, 1876, is working exceedingly well, and gives no trouble. It will work when quite immersed, as it has been several times during the floods this winter, forcing up water through a delivery pipe 900 yards long at the rate of 80,000 gallons per day, although you only promised 50,000."

From Captain GANDY, Castle Bank, Appleby, Feb. 11, 1880.

"The Self-acting Hydraulic Ram you erected for me is an excellent example of strength and good workmanship. Whilst working with 3ft. 4in. fall, it forces water 73 feet high, and so far gives me every satisfaction. It will do more work in one day than the old Ram of another make could do in a week."

Blake's Rams have been supplied

PREFACE.

MESSRS. KELLY, in submitting to their Subscribers and the Public this Edition of the DIRECTORY OF THE COUNTIES OF BEDFORD, HUNTINGDON AND NORTHAMPTON, trust that it may be found equal in accuracy to the previous Editions.

Every effort has been made to render it as perfect as possible; lists of Hundreds and Poor Law Unions are given; it is stated under each Parish in what Hundred, Union and County Court District it is situated, as well as the Diocese, Archdeaconry and Rural Deanery; and the College and University of every beneficed Clergyman have been given as far as they can be ascertained. The population from last Census and the names of the Parish Clerks are given under each Parish; lists of Farm Bailiffs of Gentlemen farming their own land have been added; the Money Order and Telegraph Offices and Post Office Savings Banks and Government Annuity and Insurance Offices are noticed; a Map of each County, specially engraved, is prefixed to the Work, with the lines of Railways laid down and corrected to date.

The Parliamentary information given throughout the Work applies to the law under which the present Parliament was elected, but in the introductory matter to each County the changes effected by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, have been carefully enumerated.

A sketch of the Geological features of the County, by Mr. W. J. Harrison, of the School Board, Birmingham, is added.

The Proprietors have to thank those Clergymen, and other Gentlemen, who have given the work the benefit of their local knowledge, by correcting the proofs submitted to them, and also the Clerks of the Peace, who have supplied the lists of Magistrates and other information.

* * The letters S.O. and R.S.O. at the end of Addresses in various parts of the book are abbreviations adopted by Her Majesty's Post Office, to represent Sub-office and Railway Sub-office; and if these Initial letters with the name of the County are added to these addresses in lieu of the usual name of Post Town, the delivery of such letters will be accelerated.

NOTICE.

Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay v.c., k.c.b. has been (July 24th) gazetted a peer by the title of Baron Wantage, of Lockinge, in the county of Berks; as this gentleman's name appears throughout the Directory as a landowner, his new title should be substituted for his former description.

BEDFORDSHIRE.

BEDFORDSHIRE takes its name from the shire town of Bedford, and lies in the southern part of the Midlands, about 50 miles north from London; it is a very small shire, of irregular shape, its greatest length being $36\frac{1}{2}$ miles from north to south, and its greatest breadth 22½ miles from east to west. The number of acres is 295,582, or 463 square miles, or about half the average size of a county: there are only three smaller counties—Hunts, Middlesex and Rutland. The population in 1831 was 95,483; in 1841, 107,936; in 1851, 124,478; in 1861, 135,287; in 1871, 146,257, and in 1881, 149,473, viz:—males, 70,354; females, 79,119. The county is bounded on the north-west by Northamptonshire, on the north-east by Huntingdonshire, on the east by Cambridgeshire, on the south-east by Herts, and on the west and south-west by Bucks: it belongs to the basin of the Midland Ouse, all but a small corner in the south, which is watered by the Lea, a feeder of the Thames. The chalk downs, named the Chiltern Hills, cross it in the south; a range of sand hills run in the middle by Ampthill; and in the northern part are other hills. The Ouse, rising in Northamptonshire, winds through North Bedfordshire, passing by Bedford, whence boats can go down the river to the sea at Lynn; the average depth of the Ouse is considered to be about 10 feet, and it is fordable in several places. The Ivel, with its feeder the Hiz, waters the south-eastern part of the county, and falls into the Ouse, after turning many mills in a course of 30 miles: it is navigable for barges from Shefford and Biggleswade. The river Lea rises at Leagrave and flows through Luton, thence across Hertfordshire, afterwards forming the boundary between Essex and Middlesex in its course to the Thames. The Grand Junction Canal skirts the western border, running through flusks.

The Midland Railway Company's main line from St. Pancras through St. Albans enters the county by Luton, thence proceeds northward by Ampthill to Bedford, Sharnbrook and Leicester: from Bedford this company has a branch through Shefford to Hitchin, where it joins the Great Northern; it also has a branch from Bedford to Northampton. The Great Northern main line passes through Hitchin, Biggleswade and Sandy, and from Hatfield it has a branch via Luton to Dunstable. The London and North Western Railway passes by the south-western border of the shire near Leighton Buzzard, sending off a branch to Dunstable, where it joins the Great Northern Railway, and another from Bletchley and Fenny Stratford to Woburn and Bedford; and there is a line from Bedford to Cambridge, crossing the Great Northern at Sandy, in continuation of that from Oxford via Bletchley to Bedford, thus opening a direct communication between the two Universities and with every part of England; the Northampton and Peterborough branch skirts the north-western part of Bedfordshire.

The soils are chalk, chalk marl and green sand, with Oxford clay, cornbrash, limestone and oolitic clay. The air is mild and dry; the soil generally good, fruitful and well tilled. The produce is coarse limestone, lime, fullers' earth from Woburn, coprolites, brick clay and bricks, coppice and brushwood, wheat, barley, oats, beans, hay, vegetables, fruit, fat oxen, sheep, poultry, game, rabbits and eels. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of lace, straw plait, straw bonnets and hats, bonnet blocks, bricks and tiles, pottery and agricultural implements, and there are important coprolite diggings at Sandy, Shillington, Sutton and Ampthill.

Bedfordshire seems to have been first held by the Britons, then by the Belgians, called Catteuchani, or Cassii, who at the time of Julius Cæsar's landing were under the rule of Cassibelanus. In the time of the Emperor Claudius the Romans overcame the Belgians and occupied the county: their great roads, since named Watling Street and Kenilford, or Ikening Street, run through this county: they had stations named Durobrivæ, and Forum Diance (Dunstable); Salenai, or Salina, another town, is thought to have been at Sandy, 3 miles north from Biggleswade: near this place is a large camp of 30 acres, called Cæsar's Camp. On the Romans leaving, the Britons again came into power; and the country became the field of bloodshed until the English landed, defeated the Britons, and brought in their own people.

The West Saxons made the first inroad, and between 571 and 580 Cutwolf, their king, beat the Britons at Bedford and took four of their towns, of which Leighton Buzzard, under the name of Lygeanburgh, is thought to have been one. The Mid-English afterwards utterly turned out the Britons and took the country, which they brought under their kingdom. The great Offa, king of the Mid-English, was buried at Bedford, but his grave was swept away by a flood of the Ouse. The Danes did great harm to Bedford, but it was rebuilt by King Edward I., the elder son of Alfred the Great; this Edward also took Tempsford, or Tempsford, from the Danes: these latter, however, over-ran the shire in 1009 and 1010, when Ethelred II. was king, and they burned Bedford and Tempsford. It is supposed that all the baronial castles in the county of any note, with the exception of that at Bedford, had been destroyed in the reign of King John; and it is perhaps owing to this that we read of so few occurrences in Bedfordshire during the Wars of the Roses.

The shire has nine hundreds:—Stodden, Willey and Bedford, in the north; the liberty, half hundred, or borough of Bedford, in the north midland; Redbournstoke (Ampthill), in the west; Wixamtree, in the east midland; Biggleswade and Clifton (Shefford), in the east; Manshead (Woburn) and Flitt (Luton), in the south. Bedfordshire contains 134 civil parishes, with parts of two others, is in the Midland circuit, diocese of Ely, and archdeaconry of Bedford, which is sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Ampthill, Bedford, Biggleswade, Eaton, Dunstable, Felmersham, Fleete, Haynes, Luton, Risley and Shefford. Bedford is the shire town and seat of the assizes and quarter sessions, and chief place of election. The municipal boroughs are Bedford, population in 1881, 19,533; Dunstable, 4,627, and Luton, 23,960. The chief towns are Bedford, on the Ouse, in the north midland, having celebrated public schools and extensive works for the manufacture of agricultural implements; Luton, on the Lea in the south, with very extensive manufactures of straw hats and bonnets; Leighton Buzzard, on the Ouzel, and London and North Western railway, population, 5,991; Biggleswade, on the Ivel, and Great Northern railway, 4,947; and Dunstable, in the south, a chief seat of the straw bonnet trade: all these towns are engaged in the corn trade, the shire growing much wheat. Other market towns are Woburn, at which is Woburn Abbey, population, 1,316, the seat of the Duke of Bedford K.G.; Pottun, 2,006; Ampthill, 2,257; Harrold, on the Ouse, 1,024, and Shefford, on the Ivel, 1,070. The county is most remarkable for its tillage.

The following is a list of the hundreds in the county, with the several parishes in each:—

Hundred of Barford:—Colmworth, Eaton Socon, Goldington, Great Barford, Ravensden, Renhold, Roxton and Wilden.

Hundred of Biggleswade:—Astwick, Biggleswade, Chicksands Priory, Cockayne Hatley, Dunton, Elsworth, Everton, Eyeworth, Langford, Little Barford, Potton, Sandy, Shefford Hardwicke, Sutton, Tempsford and Wrestlingworth.

Hundred of Clifton:—Arlesey, Campton, Clifton, Henlow, Holwell, Meppershall, Shefford, Shillington (part of), Stotfold and Upper Stondon.

Hundred of Flit:—Barton-in-the-Clay, Caddington (part of), Clophill, Flitton, Hawnes, Higham Gobion, Lower Gravenhurst, Luton, Pulloxhill, Shillington (part of), Silsoe, Streetsley, Sundon and Upper Gravenhurst.

Hundred of Manshead:—Aspley Guise, Battlesden, Billington, Chalgrave, Dunstable, Eaton Bray, Egginton, Eversholt, Harlington, Heath and Reach, Hockliffe, Holcot, Houghton Regis, Hushborne Crawley, Leighton Buzzard, Milton Bryant, Potsgrave, Salford, Staubridge, Studham (part of), Tilsworth, Tingrith, Toddington, Totternhoe, Westoning, Whipsnade and Woburn.

Hundred of Redbornestoke:—Amphill, Cranfield, Elatow, Flitwick, Houghton Conquest, Kempson, Liddington, Marston Moretaine, Maulden, Millbrook, Ridgmont, Steppingley, Wilshamstead and Wootton.

Hundred of Stoddon:—Bolnhurst, Clapham, Deas, Keysoe, Knotting, Little Staughton, Melchbourne, Milton Ernest, Oakley, Pertenhall, Riseley, Shelton, Tilbrook and Yelden.

Hundred of Willey:—Biddenham, Bletsoe, Bromham, Carlton, Chellington, Farndish, Felmersham, Harrold, Odell, Pavenham, Puddington, or Foddington, Sharnbrook, Souddrop, Stagsden, Stevenon, Thurleigh, Turvey and Wymington.

Hundred of Wixamtree:—Bhunham, Cardington, Cople, East Cotts, Muggerhanger, Northill, Southill, Warden or Old Warden and Willington.

Borough of Bedford:—St. Cuthbert, St. John, St. Mary, St. Paul and St. Peter.

The Three Counties' Lunatic Asylum (Beds, Hunts and Herts), situated in the parish of Stotfold, is a very extensive and elegant building; it holds 1,000 inmates. Edward Swain L.R.C.P. Edin. medical superintendent; Rev. J. Downes Hawksley B.A. chaplain; S. E. De Lisle and D. T. Evans, assistant medical officers; Miss Webb, matron; Francis George Butler, clerk to committee of visitors; Thomas Lester, clerk and steward to the asylum.

H.M. Prison is situated at Bedford; it was rebuilt in 1849 upon the principle of the model prisons, so as to carry out the separate and silent system; there are 176 cells for males, and 8 for females; the governor's and chief warder's houses are attached; the cost of the building was about £23,000. The visiting justices meet weekly to transact the general and financial business of the prison. Robert Evan Roberts, governor; Rev. Henry Waters T.A.K.C.L. chaplain; Robt. Hy. Kinsey, surgeon; Mrs. E. Maria Anderson, matron.

The Bedfordshire Reformatory, certified April 9th, 1857, is situated at Turvey; the boys are maintained and instructed in agricultural pursuits on a farm of 50 acres; John Jones, superintendent; Mrs. Jones, matron.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

PARLIAMENTARY REPRESENTATION OF THE COUNTY OF BEDFORD.

Down to the present time the borough of Bedford has returned two members, the present representatives being Samuel Whitbread esq. of 10 Ennismore gardens, Prince's gate s.w. & Southill, Biggleswade, Beds; & Charles Magniac, of Chesterfield house, South Audley street, 3 Lombard street n.e. & Colworth, Bedford; & the county has returned two, viz.:—James Howard, of the Reform club & Clapham park, Bedfordshire; & the Marquess of Tavistock, of 37 Chesham place s.w., Woburn abbey & Oakley house, Bedfordshire; but by the Redistribution of Seats Bill now passing through parliament, it is proposed that in the future the borough of Bedford shall return one member only, & the county of Bedford shall return two, in two divisions, whereof No. 1, the northern or Biggleswade division, shall consist of the sessional divisions of Bedford, Biggleswade & Sharnbrook, & the parishes of Amphill, Clophill, Cranfield, Hawnes, Houghton Conquest, Liddington, Marston Moretaine, Maulden & Millbrook, all in the sessional division of Amphill & the municipal borough of Bedford; No. 2, the southern or Luton division, shall consist of the sessional divisions of Leighton Buzzard, Luton & Woburn, so much of the sessional division of Amphill as is not comprised in division No. 1, & the municipal boroughs of Dunstable & Luton.

The places in each sessional division are given under the place giving name to the division in this directory.

POLLING PLACES for the county, appointed pursuant to "The Ballot Act, 1872," on August 6th, 1872:—

THE GEOLOGY OF BEDFORDSHIRE.

THE rocks of Bedfordshire have been carefully examined by different geologists, to whose thorough and minute work we owe our knowledge of the geological structure of the county. The beautiful maps, coloured so as to show exactly where each stratum reaches the surface, issued by the Geological Survey in 1864 and '65, were chiefly the work of Messrs. Hull, Whitaker, Green, Bauerman and Howell, and it is to be regretted that they are not accompanied by full descriptive memoirs. Mr. Saunders, of Luton, has done good work in the Chalk district, and the coprolite beds have been well described by Mr. Teall. To the surface geology Mr. J. Wyatt, of Bedford, has made most valuable contributions, and we also owe much to Professor H. G. Seeley, Dr. J. Mitchell, and others. The general structure of the county is plainly owing to the fact of the central line being occupied by a broad band of clay, to the north-west of which we have undulating ridges of limestone, while on the south-east rises the chalk escarpment; thus the town of Bedford is 100 feet above the sea level, whilst Luton is 351 feet, Dunstable 483 feet, and Dunstable Downs 799 feet respectively. As is usual, the oldest beds are found in the north-west of the county, and we shall commence with them.

THE OOLITES.—The lower oolitic strata do not enter the county; the well-known white limestone which we find in the north-west corner is of Great Oolite age, being of the same age as that which at Bath and elsewhere in the West of England furnishes such excellent building stone. We can trace it from Cold Brayfield by Carlton and Harrold, northwards to Puddington and Farnish and eastwards along the Ouse valley to the western suburbs of the town of Bedford, where it is seen in a stone-pit on the north side of the Ouse, towards Kempston; it is a compact stone, got in some places for lime burning, but good sections of it are rare; it is associated with bands of Great Oolite Clay, which form a cold, unkindly, but often well-wooded district. One or two small species of oyster, as Ostrea subrugulosa and O. Sowerbyi are common in the fossil state.

The Cornbrash.—This very continuous band of reddish rubbly limestone can be traced from Newton Blossomville by Turvey Farm, to just west of Pavenham; here it turns south, the outcrop having been worn back by the river Ouse, but at Wick End, about a mile north of Stagsden, it ceases to be traceable. We find it again on the east side of the Ouse in some brick-pits and lime-kilns, whence it curves round by Clapham to Oakley Hill, where it is cut off by an east and west fault, re-appearing at Milton Wood about a mile eastwards; thence it runs northwards out of the county by Milton Ernest and Souldrop. The width of the outcrop is remarkably even, averaging one-quarter of a mile. The beds appear nearly horizontal. Ostrea Marshii is the most frequently occurring fossil.

Oxford Clay.—This is a bluish clay, weathering yellow, and several hundred feet thick, which occupies all the central and northern portions of the county. At the base sandy beds locally occur, known as Kellaway's Rock, forming a link between the Cornbrash, which was accumulated in shallow water, and the Oxford Clay, which was a deep sea deposit. The latter forms a stiff retentive soil which is largely in pasture, but it is often so deeply covered by surface deposits, as to be noticed further on—as not to exercise any influence on the character of the soil; it forms all the substratum of the Fens further north, and Professor H. G. Seeley has proposed the name of Fen-clay for it, a term, however, which is only locally used; it is largely dug for brick-making, and for claying the soil of the fens. The band of gritty limestone known as the Coral Rag is absent in this district, so that there is no well-marked line of division between the great mass of the Oxford Clay below, and the Kimmeridge Clay above. The latter has not in consequence been mapped by the Geological Survey in this county, but it is probably represented on the eastern side. Local geologists must determine this by carefully collecting and noting the localities of the fossils found in their neighbourhood. From a good section near Ampthill fossils have been obtained, which shows that the beds of clay there are near the transition line from the Lower to the Upper Clays; they are about the horizon of the Coral Rag. In the Oxford Clay proper, Grypha dilatata, a wide thick-shelled kind of oyster is very common; bones of reptiles, fish-teeth &c. also occur.

THE CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—As the Upper Oolitic beds—the Purbeck and Portland strata—are here absent, we pass at once from the thick Oolitic Clays to those rocks of which the Chalk is the most distinguished member.

The Lower Greensand.—This bed presents a complete contrast to those last noticed, being a light buff-coloured or reddish-brown sand, often showing false bedding and full of fragments and concretions of brown peroxide of iron; it enters the county at Leighton Buzzard and Linslade, and passes by Little and Great Brickhill and Wavendon Plantations to Ridgmont, Eversholt and Flitwick, constituting here the well-known Woburn Sands. Fullers' earth has been dug at Wavendon, where the beds have a thickness of from 150 to 200 feet; thence by Ampthill and Shefford the sands extend to Biggleswade, Sandy and Potton, where they pass out of the county. In the South, near Little Brickhill, these beds are 250 feet in thickness, and they occupy a belt of country 4 miles wide; at Millbrook, near Ampthill, the thickness is not more than one-tenth of this amount, or 25 feet, the upper portion having probably been removed by denudation; near Potton the series is about 100 feet thick, and is capped by about 35 feet of Carstone (or Quern stone). At Sandy these Lower Cretaceous beds form a very picturesque escarpment on the right bank of the Ivel; between Sandy and Potton they are well exposed in the cuttings of the Cambridge and Bedford Railway. The land is so barren in some parts as to produce little except plantations of Scotch fir; but where it is mixed with clay, as along the western side of the Great Northern line, the result is a sandy loam of great productiveness, in which onions, potatoes, and market produce generally are grown with great success. Over the greater part of its extent this rock forms a range of undulating hilly ground with beautiful woodland scenery. Economically the Lower Greensand is celebrated for the band of phosphatic nodules which occurs at the base; this varies from 6 inches to 2 feet in thickness, and is full of water-worn fossils, including many saurian and fish remains, and the rounded shapeless masses, generally termed coprolites. In the pits at Potton we see under the surface soil about 9 feet of yellowish sands, and then the coprolite bed, about 2 feet thick, under which again is a considerable thickness of sand, a well 50 feet deep not having passed through it; sometimes the nodule bed is as much as 6 feet thick; numerous pebbles of quartz occur, which have to be picked out. The word coprolite should properly only be applied to the fossil dung of reptiles, fishes &c. but most of the masses which go by that name are pieces of wood mineralized by infiltration of phosphatic matter, casts of shells, bones &c. and from their worn and rolled appearance they seem mostly to have been washed out of earlier deposits, as the Oxford and Kimmeridge Clays. They contain 49 per cent. of phosphate of lime, and 7 per cent. of carbonate of lime, according to an analysis by Dr. Voelcker; at Millbrook there is only 15 feet of sand below the phosphate bed, and at Little Brickhill it rests upon the Oxford Clay. In 1879 there were raised 5,000 tons of Coprolites from the lower green sand of Bedfordshire, the value being 28s. per ton.

The Gault is a bed of bluish-grey clay, 200 feet thick, which rests upon the Lower Greensand; it decreases in thickness as we follow it north-eastward into Cambridge-shire. From Eggington and Eaton Bray, we can trace it by Milton Bryant, Toddington, Westoning, Shillington, Arley, Shefford, Duntun, Wrestlingworth and Cockayne Hatley. It furnishes a soil known as "black land," and forms part of the plain which stretches from the foot of the chalk escarpment; it is largely dug for bricks, and in the excavations at Arley a face of 50 or 60 feet in height is exposed; fossils are tolerably numerous, Avicula and Plicatula being the commonest species.

Upper Coprolite Bed.—At least two well-marked seams of "coprolites" occur in the Gault, south of Barton. North of this place, the upper band forms a line between the gault clay and the lower marly beds of the Chalk; the nodules are dark-coloured and very rich in phosphate; this is the same band which is so largely worked near Cambridge, and it has been supposed to represent the Upper Greensand. Mr. Jukes-Browne has shown, however, that it is a result of the denudation of the Gault, and agrees with Mr. Whitaker in considering it to be the base of the chalk marl. Rock-fragments occur in it, some of which seem to show signs of ice action.

The Chalk.—The lowest beds are comparatively soft, and are termed the Chalk Marl. This bed is about 80 feet thick, and forms undulating rising ground: its top is marked by a hard band about 6 feet thick, generally in two layers, and called the Totternhoe Stone, because it is well seen near the village of that name; it is a hard and rather brownish sandy chalk, with dark grains. In South Bedfordshire it has been along the sides of the valleys; good sections may be seen in the railway cuttings near Dunstable and Luton. Here Mr. Saunders obtained many fossils, but of few species, Terebratula and Inoceramus being the common shells. Near Leagrave station there is a cutting more than a mile long, reaching to the lower escarpment, at its southern end the Chalk is capped by a gravelly soil and hollows full of gravel, but further north, where deeper, it gives a good section of the Lower Chalk. On the road from Streetley to Sharpenhoe we find an exposure in the road-cutting of the hard beds near the top; they contain large but broken fish vertebræ. That rare plant, Aucoume pulsatella grows plentifully on some of the slopes of the chalk rombs in this neighbourhood; it occurs chiefly on the south-west slopes, especially near Barton, where its pretty purple flowers cover the hillsides.

The Chalk Rock is a thin, hard, cream-coloured bed, containing green-coated nodules, and about 4 feet thick; it is regarded as the top bed of the Lower Chalk, and by its superior hardness forms the top of the high escarpment known as the Royston and Luton Downs; it contains numerous fossils, about twenty species having been collected from the railway cutting at St. George's Wood, Chiltern Green station &c.

The Upper Chalk with Flints hardly enters the county: its fossils are mostly Echinodermus (sea-urchins), Sponges, and Pentacritites; it may be seen in many pits where it is dug for lime-burning, whilst the flints are used to repair roads and for glass making. It forms a barren tract of land, covered with short turf, and its swelling rounded outlines, usually destitute of trees, are easily recognizable from a distance. Between Sundon and Pilton, and above Barton-in-the-Clay, the chalk scenery is very fine; Deacon Hill and Lilley Hoo are conspicuous objects, and the "lynchets" or terraces on the sides of some of the combs are very remarkable objects; they are well seen east of Chalgrave.

THE DRIFT.—The beds of rock we have been describing, especially those in the centre and north of the county, are often concealed by a thick covering of what is commonly termed Boulder Clay; it is a stiff, brownish or bluish tenacious clay, full of subangular fragments of all kinds of rocks, mostly such as are not found in Bedfordshire; north of Bedford it is about 50 feet thick, and covers over the Oxford Clay from Coldington to Eaton Kiseley and Shelton; it lies thick, too, between Wootton, Carlton and Cranfield. Often by cultivation it has become incorporated with the Oxford Clay beneath, and we can only recognize it by the presence of scattered boulders. Fragments of granite, syenite, quartzite &c. are common, with lungs of hard chalk and limestone; liassic and oolitic fossils are of frequent occurrence. All this heterogeneous mass is probably the deposit of a great glacier which pushed southwards down Lincolnshire from the Cumbrian and Scottish hills. In part it may result from the droppings of icebergs detached from the determination of such a glacier.

River Deposits.—The valley of the river Ouse is narrow so long as it is confined by the oolitic limestones in its course through the north-western part of Bedfordshire as far as Oakley; here it enters on the softer tract of Oxford Clay, and we can trace its deposits of gravel over a width of from 2 to 4 miles. At the junction with the Ivel the gravel deposit again narrows, and continues about 1 mile wide, to the northward; the Ivel and Iliz have formed similar gravel beds, but of less extent, along their course. The Ouse seems to have cut itself down through the Drift, and near Bedford it has also cut through the Oxford Clay to the underlying Cornbrash. The material of the gravel appears to have been in the main washed out of the Boulder Clay, and it occurs in terraces at considerable heights above the present river bed. The Ouse has also deposited much alluvium or river mud, which forms rich pasture ground.

Traces of Pre-historic Man.—It was in the old river-gravels of the Ouse at Biddenham, near Bedford, that Mr. James Wyatt F.R.S. first found those rudely chipped flint implements which are the earliest indications yet known of the presence of man on the earth. At Biddenham the beds of drift-gravel form a capping to a low hill, which is nearly encircled by one of the windings of the river; the floor of the pits is 40 feet above the present stream. Numerous freshwater shells also occur, one of which, Hydrobia wauginata, has never been found alive in this country. Numerous bones of large mammals, as the mammoth, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, reindeer &c. are also found. Flint implements of this old kind have also been met with at Harrow-worked for centuries by means of galleries driven into the escarpment which it forms. Edlesborough church stands on a conical hillock, all round which this hard band crops out. Passing Maiden Bower, where it is exposed in the railway cutting, we trace the Totternhoe Stone by Houghton Regis, Upper Sundon, Sharpenhoe and Barton, out of the county. Ammonites varians is common. The bed commonly forms a ridge or shelf, along the chalk escarpment.

The Chalk without Flints comes next; and is, perhaps, 100 feet thick; it rises from above the Totternhoe stone to within a small distance of the top of the high escarpment, forming the slopes of the combs, and running eastward den, Carlington, Kempston, Summerhouse Hill, and Honey Hill, all within a radius of 4 miles: they are usually pointed, and from 3 to 9 inches long. Possibly they were used as weapons, or for digging, or breaking holes in the ice for fishing, as the Esquimaux do at the present day; a similar tool was found near Henlow.

Of other flint and stone implements which belong to a

Leighton Buzzard, and in Miller's Bog near Pavenham: one formed of greenstone, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, is from Kempston.

A thin perforated stone, 6 inches by 3 inches, found near Luton, may be a hammer-stone, used in the fabrication of implements from flint nodules or cores. A beautifully-shaped flint skinning-knife, oval in form and neatly chipped, later time, and which often exhibit great skill in their manner of formation, numerous examples have been found in the county. At Maiden Bower, near Dunstable, there is an old British Camp, and here Mr. John Evans met with a small nearly triangular flint hatchet, several scrapers, cores, flakes or knives, spear-heads, arrow-heads and chisels. A celt, or axe-head, was found by Mr. Whitaker at Waulud's Bank, near Luton, and others at the foot of Dunstable Downs, but not polished, was found at Kempston, with a blade or spear-head 6 inches long and $2\frac{1}{2}$ wide.

Thus from the important discoveries already made, it is evident that good work may be done in Bedfordshire in connection with the question of the history of man. Should these flint tools ever be found in or beneath the Boulder Clay itself, it would conclusively prove the existence of man in Bedfordshire prior to or during the last glacial Epoch.

AMPHILL, is a market and union town, head of a county court district, and polling place for the county, centrally situated in the county, 45 miles from London by road and 8 south from Bedford. The Midland Railway Company's line from Bedford to St. Pancras passes through and has a station 1 mile north of the town; the Ampthill (Marston) station on the Bedford and Blechley branch of the London and North-Western railway being 3 miles south-east, in the parish of Marston (Morteyne): it is in the hundred of Redbournstone, rural deanery of Ampthill, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The town is clean and well built, and is situated on high ground, shielded from the north and east by hills, and open to the south: it is lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water, and its position on a dry sandy soil renders it very healthy, while the picturesque scenery of the neighbourhood affords most beautiful walks and drives. The Alameda, situated just outside the town, on the Woburn road, is a double avenue of limes, planted by the celebrated Lady Holland, in imitation of that at Madrid. Ampthill was constituted a manor-royal by Henry VIII., under the title of the Honor of Ampthill, and confers the title of baron on a branch of the Russell family. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient structure, in the Early English, decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch, with sacristy over it, and a tower containing 5 bells: the interior of the church was restored and re-seated in 1846, and again in 1877, at a cost of £2,300, of which £1,000 was contributed by his Grace the Duke of Bedford K.G.: it contains a mural monument to Richard Nicolls, of Ampthill House, who was killed in the engagement between the fleets of England and Holland, May 28th, 1672; the cannon ball which occasioned his death is laid in the marble, with the inscription, "Instrumentum Mortis et Immortalitatis;" there is also a marble pillar to the memory of the Earl of Upper Ossory, and a brass to Sir Nicholas Hervey kn., one of the knights of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, and in the suite of Katharine of Arragon when she resided at Ampthill Castle: the ancient sacristy over the porch is now used as a clerical library. An addition of one acre, the gift of the Duke of Bedford, was made to the churchyard in 1883: the Duke also bore the entire cost of enclosing it with iron railings. The church will seat 700 persons. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £250, gross yearly value £300, including 47 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1875 by the Rev. John James Tall Wilmot M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There are Congregational, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. The Baptist Chapel, situated in Dunstable street, is a brick structure, and seating 400 persons. The Wesleyan Chapel, Dunstable street, completed in 1884, at a cost of £3,500, is an edifice of grey brick, with stone dressings, erected from the designs of Mr. Charles Bell,

Clerk to the Magistrates, Frederick Thomas Tanqueray, Market place

Petty Sessions are held at the County Court hall every alternate Thursday at 11 a.m.

The following are the places included in its jurisdiction:—Ampthill, Chickands, Claphill, Cranfield, Flitton, Flit-architect, of London: it will seat 800 persons, and has attached a schoolroom and 6 class-rooms, with vestry. The old chapel in Woburn street, erected in 1813, is now disused. The County Court hall, situated in Church street, is an imposing structure of brick. The extensive brewery of Messrs. Morris and Co. is now (1885) undergoing considerable alteration and improvement. The iron works of Mr. Alfred Hetley have been considerably enlarged, and now comprise an extensive iron foundry, fitting and erecting shops, and employ a large staff of workmen: the works cover an area of about two acres. The market day is on Thursday; and fairs are held on the 4th of May and 30th of November for cattle, and a statute fair September 29th. At Little Park, about a mile from the town, are almshouses, founded by the Rev. John Cross D.D. and vested in five trustees, members of the University of Oxford; they are for nine men and four women: each of the former receives £30, and the latter £20 yearly. Near the church are the feeble almshouses, for twelve widows, each of whom receives £10 yearly; the other charities amount to about £40 yearly. Ampthill Park, the property of the Duke of Bedford K.G. was erected by Lord Ashburnham in 1694, and has been the residence of Lords Upper Ossory and Holland, the former of whom considerably improved the house and surrounding grounds: the park, though not large, is one of great beauty, and has long been celebrated for its majestic oaks; many of these trees are supposed to be upwards of 1,000 years old, and two of the most noted are more than 36 feet in circumference in the trunk: in the garden front of the mansion is one of the finest avenues of lime trees in England. At a short distance to the south-west formerly stood Ampthill Castle, the retreat of Queen Katharine during her trial, which circumstance is mentioned in Shakespeare's "Henry VIII.," Act iv. Scene 1:—

"The Archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles
From Ampthill, where the princess lay."

This spot, which commands most extensive and beautiful views of the Vale of Bedford and the surrounding country, is marked by a stone cross, erected by the Earl of Upper Ossory, with an inscription by Horace Walpole. Near here are the ruins of Houghton House, supposed to have been erected by Hugo Jones, about the year 1620, for Mary (Sidney), Countess of Pembroke, daughter of Sir Henry Sidney K.G. and sister to Sir Philip Sidney, who is said to have written his "Arcadia" in the park in which this mansion stood. The Duke of Bedford K.G. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The population in 1881 was 2,257 including 93 officers and inmates in the workhouse: the area is 1,928 acres; rateable value, £9,694.

ARLSEY (or ARLESEY) is a village and parish, on the Great Northern railway, 37 miles from London, 12 southeast from Bedford, 4 south from Biggleswade and 5 north from Hitchin, in the hundred of Clifton, union and county district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The village consists chiefly of one street, nearly 2 miles in length; the Great Northern railway has stations at either end. The church of St. Peter is a plain edifice of stone, in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south chapel, south porch and a massive western tower of stone, pebbles and cement, erected in 1877 and containing 5 bells: the font has an octagonal basin, the sides of which are richly panelled and carved; below the basin are figures of cherubim: there are two stained windows in the chancel, and one at the west end; the church contains some fine marble monuments to the Brown and Edwards families. The register of baptisms dates from 1538; marriages and burials, 1559. The living is a vicarage, with the rectory of Astwick annexed, joint yearly value £450 net with residences, in the gift of and held since 1885 by the Rev.
 Richard Curtis Follitt Scott B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels, erected in 1875. Here are large works carried on by the Arlsey Lime and Portland Cement Company, for the manufacture of the highest class of Portland cement and hydraulic limes: the works have a frontage of 2,000 feet to the Great Northern railway, and are laid out on a most complete scale for the production of about 600 tons of lime and cement weekly. There are also extensive brick works, carried on by

ASPLEY GUISE, formerly a town, is a parish and well-built village, a mile and a half from the Woburn Sands station of the London and North-Western railway, 52½ miles from London by rail and 44 by road, a north-by-west from Woburn and 12 south-west from Bedford, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Fleet, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Botolph is an elegant building in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower with crocketed pinnacles, and containing 6 bells: the south aisle was added and the whole fabric greatly enlarged and restored through the exertions and almost at the sole expense, as well as under the superintendence, of the Rev. J. Vaux Moore, formerly rector : all the windows, twenty-eight in number, are stained : there is a memorial window in the vestry to the late Prince Consort, placed in 1862, and three memorial windows in the south aisle to the Moore family ; in the north aisle is an altar tomb, with fine brass effigy of a knight in plate armour, worn over a hauberk, to one of the Guise family, circa 1490, from whom the village derives its adjunct ; there is also an ancient slab, from which a floriated cross and marginal inscription are lost, but at the foot are figures in brass of a priest kneeling and St. John the Baptist standing, c. 1410 ; another marble monument is in memory of the Rev. J. V. Moore, and there is also a tomb with life-sized effigy in stone to Sir — de Tyrington, 1400 : the pulpit is richly carved in oak, representing the principal incidents in the life of Our Lord : the church was restored in 1855, and in 1884 the upper portion of the tower was rebuilt at a cost of £150, and the peal of 4 bells increased to 6. The burying-ground has been enlarged by the addition of an acre, situated on the opposite side of the road, the gift of the Rev. H. R. Moody, late lord of the manor. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a rectory, tithe-rent charge £18, net yearly value £200, including 86 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford K.G. and held since 1880 by the Rev. James Chadwick Maltby M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. There are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. The village of Aspley contains a number of good houses, and is very beautifully situated on and below a range of sand hills, which rise to a height of about 420 feet above the level of the sea, commanding very extensive views of the surrounding country : it is much sought after as a place of residence by visitors during the summer season, who find accommodation in good and quiet lodgings. The library of the late W. F. How esq. at the residence of Mrs. How, is very extensive and contains a number of very rare and curious works, including some manuscripts. The atmosphere is dry and salubrious, and the temperature equable : there is a plentiful supply of pure, soft, spring water. Adjoining the village are large plantations of firs and evergreens, to the growth of which the soil is peculiarly adapted ; some of the holly hedges are nearly thirty feet in height, and upwards of 150 years old. Avenue House, the residence of Lt.-Col. Robert Unwin J.P. and Mrs. How, is approached by an avenue of Scotch pine dating from the battle of Culloden (1746). The Rookery, the residence of Carlisle Spedding Parker esq. J.P. situated on a hill opposite the church, is an ancient structure surrounded by trees. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford K.G. F. Moody esq. who is lord of the manor, Miss Smith, Henry Hugh Arthur Hoare esq. of Wavenham Manor, Mrs. G. W. Mahon, Mrs. W. F. How, Douglas Ellis esq. Henry Paul Harris esq. and the Rev. J. C. Maltby M.A. rector. The soil is sand on the hills and clay in the lower parts of the parish ; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,936 acres ; rateable value, £4,722 ; the population in 1881 was 1,445. The ecclesiastical parish of Woburn Sands has been formed partly out of this parish and partly out of Wavendon, Bucks, and will be found under a separate heading.

GREAT BARFORD is a large scattered village, 1½ miles north-west from Blunham station, on the Great Northern road, 5¼ north-east from Bedford, 6 south-west from St. Neots, 7 north-west from Biggleswade and 52 from London, in the hundred of Barford, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Eaton, archdeanery of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, situate on the river Ouse, which is here crossed by a bridge of 16 arches to Blunham.
The church of All Saints is a handsome structure chiefly in the Perpendicular style, with some Early English remains, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles and a small lead-covered spire, containing 5 bells: in the chancel is a mural monument to Thomas Ansell, his wife, and family, 1591, with figures in high relief: there is a brass, with effigies, to John Fitzgeffrey, 1535, and his wife, lately refixed: and one loose: attached to the chancel is the tomb of the Franklin family, and on a marble slab are recorded the names of those deposited therein: the stained east window, erected in 1864, is a memorial to the late Mr. Arnold, of Great Barford House: the font, of Early English date, is octagonal and supported on four low shafts: the church was repaired and enlarged in 1849 and 1860, and will seat 430 persons. The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a vicarage with that of Roxton annexed, joint gross yearly value
about £450 (including £70 given by Trinity College) with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Carleton Greene M.A. of that college. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. W. Pedley
esq. bequeathed in 1827 £100, the interest of which is applied for the benefit of the Sunday school: the sum of £200 was bequeathed in 1843 by Mr. Franklyn, the interest of which is distributed to the poor in bread: there

BEDFORD.

BEDFORD is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market and union town, head of a county court district, and the principal polling place for the county: it is in the liberty, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Bedford, diocese of Ely, 47½ miles from London by the Midland railway and 63 by the London and North Western railway, 33 from Aylesbury, 47 from Banbury, 16 from Bletchley junction, 15½ from Hitchin, 23 from Kettering, 21½ north-east from Leighton Buzzard, 20 north from Luton, 33½ from Market Harborough, 27 from Northampton, 47½ from Oxford, 49 from Rugby, 12 south-west from St. Neots, 16 from Wellingborough, 12 north-east from Woburn and 20 from Wolverton. The Midland railway has an important station here, midway between Leicester and London. The London and North Western railway branch, from Bletchley to Cambridge, to join the Great Eastern system, passes through Bedford, and affords direct communication at Bletchley with the northern and western parts of the kingdom; and at Sandy this line also communicates with the Great Northern railway.

Bedford is a corporation by prescription of very high antiquity, probably of Saxon origin. The Britons were overthrown here by Cuthwulf, or Cuthwold, the Saxon, in the year 572. The place was of such importance as to attract the devastating inroads of the Danes, and being destroyed by them was repaired by Edward the Elder, who annexed a village on the south bank of the river Ouse, called Mikes gate, now incorporated with it, and a ford from which it probably derives its name, in Saxon, Bedicanford, "a fortress on a ford," or as interpreted by some writers—"beds on a ford." In the year following the Danes were repulsed by the townsmen of Bedford; but in 1050 they were more successful, and burned the town. William Rufus gave the barony of Bedford to Pain de Beauchamp, who built a strong castle on the north-east side of the town: this structure was surrounded by a vast entrenchment, as well as by a high and thick wall. During the contest between the Barons and King John, in 1216, William de Beauchamp being then possessed of the barony of Bedford, took part against the King, and delivered the castle up to the former; it was, however, very shortly afterwards wrested from the Barons by Fawkes de Brent (or Fawkes de Breante), to whom it was given with the barony by the King as a reward for his services: the castle sustained three severe sieges previously to its being demolished by order of Henry III.: the foundations of the keep can still be traced, but the site has been converted into a bowling-green and ornamental flower grounds, attached to the Swan hotel.

The town is divided for municipal purposes into two wards, called the East and West Wards: the corporation consists of a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with a recorder, town clerk, and the usual officers. The corporation act as the urban sanitary authority. The borough has a commission of the peace and a separate court of quarter sessions. Bedford has sent two members to Parliament since the 23rd of Edward I. The constituency consists of the freemen, and inhabitant householders not receiving alms, whose rights were reserved by the Act of 1832, in addition to the new qualifications created by the Representation of the People Act. The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive.

The town is pleasantly situated in a fertile valley, watered by the river Ouse, which passes through and divides it into two parts, connected by a handsome stone bridge of five elliptical arches, which is 306 feet long and 30 feet wide: the original bridge was of remote antiquity. Upon the demolition of the castle, in the year 1224, a new bridge was erected, which having fallen into decay after the lapse of 600 years, was taken down and replaced by the present structure, designed and executed by John Wing esq.: the first stone was laid on the 26th of August, 1811, by Francis, Marquis of Tavistock (afterwards the celebrated Duke of Bedford), on the solid rock, below the piles upon which the foundations of the ancient bridge were placed: it was completed and opened for public use on the 1st of November, 1813, and thrown open to the public, free of toll, on the 1st of July, 1835. There is now a second bridge, the foundation of which was laid by the Marquis of Tavistock M.P. on the 7th of November, 1833: it consists of three wrought-iron segmental arches, with ornamental cast-iron spandrels and parapets, the width of the river being 200ft. The piers and abutments are of concrete, with stone and brick facings: the roadway is 40ft. wide between the parapets, with new approaches at the north and south sides of the river of about 200 yards each. The cost of the bridge and approaches, designed by Mr. John J. Webster, Assoc. M. Inst. of Liverpool, was about £10,000, and it was opened to the public by the Right Hon. Earl Cowper K.O. 21st October, 1884, Joshua Hawkins, mayor. The principal street of the town crosses the river, and is above a mile in length, intersected by smaller streets: the streets generally are wide, and from the numerous trees and shrubs with which it has been planted, the town presents an attractive and semi-rural appearance, and is remarkably clean, very compact, and well supplied with clear, fresh water from a shaft sunk into the rocky beds of the oolite, at the northern boundary of the borough, and from thence pumped into a reservoir on a neighbouring hill: the pressure being sufficient to give an adequate supply to the highest buildings throughout the town: the waterworks, on the Clapham road, are the property of the corporation, and were erected in 1866 at a cost of about £20,000. There is also a thorough system of drainage on modern principles: the outfall works are about one mile east of the town (locally in Goldington), where the sewage is pumped and applied to about 183 acres of land, laid out for that purpose: the cost of sewage works, pumping works, farm buildings, and laying out irrigation works, was about £27,000. The town is supplied with gas from works erected by a company in 1864. Along the north margin of the Ouse an embankment has been made, along which a fine roadway extends to Newnham (Goldington parish), nearly a mile eastwards of the town: the land lying between the roadway and the river has been laid out with walks and ornamental flower-beds, and is well planted with trees and shrubs, thus forming a handsome promenade. Regattas are held on the river Ouse, which is navigable from Bedford to King's Lynn, but the traffic has nearly ceased.

The town consists of five parishes, viz., St. Paul, St. Cuthbert, St. Mary, St. John, and St. Peter, and an ecclesiastical parish of the Holy Trinity.

St. Paul's church, situated in the square of that name, is a building of stone, in the Early English, Decorated, and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, spacious aisles, transepts, north porch, south porch with parvise, and an embattled tower with spire containing 8 bells: it was a collegiate church previous to the Conquest, and retained this rank until between 1148 and 1170, when its prebends were transferred to Newnham, in the parish of Goldington, by Simon de Beauchamp, who was buried in this church in 1205; the stone slab, said to have marked his grave, still remaining : the edifice was rebuilt in 1224, on the site of an earlier structure, the greater part of which had been pulled down by order of King John, in order to fortify the castle : in the latter part of the fifteenth century, the church, then consisting of double chancel and nave, was materially altered by the addition of a clerestory and the raising of the arcade ; north and south porches being added and the north transept removed ; the two chancels were also enclosed with oak screens, and the whole building covered with an oak roof finely carved : the original chancel roof still exists, but those of the naves were entirely renewed in 1848, the figures and enrichments of the former roofs being, however, retained ; much of the ancient screen-work was destroyed during the renovation of the chancel at the same date, but the rood screen, though not now in situ, still exists : in the reign of Henry VIII. the church became the cathedral of a suffragan bishop, and there is still a suffragan in the diocese of London whose title is derived from this town : in 1868 the tower and spire were rebuilt, the design of the tower being modified and its plan enlarged, and the old spire re-erected upon it ; a new north transept was also built in place of that removed in the fifteenth century : in 1878-9 the north and south walls of the chancel were converted into arcades opening into the aisles, a clerestory, vestries and other additions made, the roof raised and repaired and a new east window inserted : in 1884 a new aisle, corresponding in every respect with the south nave, was built on the north side of the nave proper, and the north porch rebuilt, all the original windows and ornamental work being preserved and reset ; the church, as thus enlarged, was re-opened by the Lord Bishop of Ely, 4th Dec. 1884 : the work was carried out under the direction of Mr. John Day of Bedford, architect and diocesan surveyor : the church contains some fine monuments, including one to Thomas Christie esq. and one to Sir William Harpur kt. and alderman of London, a great benefactor to the town : a new chiming apparatus, playing 14 tunes, was put up by public subscription in the tower of this church in 1879, and opened 1st January, 1880 : there are two barrels with seven tunes pricked on each : a stained glass east window has been recently inserted to the memory of Sir. William Harpur and Dame Alice his wife : the cost of the window was defrayed by public subscription, principally by past and present scholars of the Harpur Schools in this town : a stained window in memory of the late Sir Richard Thomas Gilpin bart. was unveiled by the Duchess of Bedford, in January, 1885. The register dates from 1550. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £350, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1877 by the Rev. Robert Edward Reginald Watts M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

St. Cuthbert's church, situated on the south side of the town, is a stone building, in the Anglo-Norman style, erected in 1247, at a cost of £2,100, on the site of the former church, which dated from the eighteenth century : it consists of chancel, nave, transepts, aisles, and a low central tower containing 1 bell : at the end of the north transept, outside, is a clock : the aisles were built in 1865, at a cost of £16,000, and the edifice was enlarged in 1877, and an organ-chamber erected on the north side of the chancel, at a cost of about £1,350 : the fittings are of oak, from Chicheley Park, Bucks ; the east window of three lights is stained : there are sittings for 800 persons. The register dates from 1607. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £310, including 36 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Howard Kempson M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, and chaplain of Bedford union.

St. Mary's church is an ancient building of stone, chiefly in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts, and a tower containing 6 bells and a clock : the tower is a very good example of Norman work : the north aisle was built of the materials of a church called St. Peter Dunstable, which formerly stood in St. Mary's square : in 1853 a vestry and south aisle were added by subscription : the east and west stained memorial windows are very handsome, depicting scriptural subjects ; there are numerous mural tablets : in 1882 the chancel roof was renewed by the present rector, and one window of the chancel re-opened and restored. The mortuary chapel, on the north side of the chancel, was also enlarged, and a new roof, corresponding with that of the chancel, placed upon it : this chapel is now used as an organ chamber : the church will seat 550 persons, including 100 children : the church plate includes a chalice, dated 1570, and a paten dated 1685. The register dates from 1540. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £43, in the gift of the Bishop of Lincoln (two turns), and of Balliol College, Oxford (one turn), and held since 1869 by the Rev. Charles Brereton

M.C.L. late fellow of New College, Oxford, hon. canon of Ely, rural dean of Bedford, and surrogate.

St. John's church, situated in St. John street, is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles and was thoroughly restored by subscription in 1869-70, at a cost of about £1,000, and re-opened in June of the latter year : it consists of chancel and nave, and a tower containing 1 bell : on the south side of the chancel are piscina and sedilia, discovered and restored during the repair of the church : there are upwards of 250 sittings, of which 60 are free. The register dates from 1669. The living is a rectory, annexed to St. John's hospital, gross yearly value £450, in the gift of the trustees of the Hospital, and held since 1835 by the Rev. Henry Pearse M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, who was presented by the corporation of Bedford. Under the provisions of the Municipal Act, corporators are no longer qualified to present ; the right of presentation is with Frederick Howard esq.

The church of St. Peter, situated on the north-west side of St. Peter's green, is a building of stone, consisting of chancel, with vestry, nave, aisles, and a low tower, containing a clock and 5 bells : the church was originally outside the walls of the town of Bedford, and was called "St. Peter's-in-the-Fields" : it acquired the title of St. Peter's de Merton to distinguish it from St. Peter's de Dunstable, which stood below the bridge, in what is now St. Mary's square : the Norman doorway of this church is said to have belonged to the latter : many of its stones are ancient, but much of the doorway is of soft Bath stone, and is fast decaying : the tower, like that of the adjoining parish of Clapham, is undoubtedly Saxon, and is built of rubble and cement : it contains fine examples of what is called long and short work ; the triangular arch, a Norman feature, was, however, added to the upper part some years ago, and belfry windows, copied from St. Mary's, were introduced on three sides of the tower : the effects of the fire, when the church was partly burnt by the Danes in 1010, may be seen, especially on the east side of the tower, many of the stones having become calcined, cracked, and of the colour of brick : the foundation, and much of the north wall of the chancel is also Saxon : it originally ended in an apse, but on its restoration in the thirteenth century the area was reduced, and a triple lancet window inserted, for which the present decorated east window was substituted when Dr. Hunt was rector : the church was enlarged in 1846, and again in 1853 : the north aisle was lengthened westward in 1882, and the organ chamber and vestry, and a bell turret built in 1883 : it is proposed to lengthen the south aisle forthwith : for many centuries the walls of St. Peter's externally and internally were coated with plaster ; this has now been cleared off, and the original rubble masonry, and the Early English repairs are clearly displayed : the east window of three lights, erected in 1786, is a memorial to Mrs. Chapple and her son. The south-east window of the chancel, and the tower window are also stained : there are sittings for about 600 persons. The register dates from 1572. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £5, net yearly value £360, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1871 by Rev. William Hart Smith M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, and surrogate.

The ecclesiastical parish of the Holy Trinity was formed from that of St. Paul in 1860 : the church, situate in Bromham road and erected in 1839-40, is a spacious edifice of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, and a lofty tower containing a clock and 1 bell : it has an undivided interior, with galleries : a lancet in the chancel is filled with stained glass to the memory of the late vicar : it was opened as a chapel of ease to St. Paul's in 1841 : there are sittings for 1,400 persons, of which 500 are free. The register dates from the year 1841. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £380, with residence, in the gift of the vicar of St. Paul's, and held since 1880 by the Rev. George Arthur Willan, M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

A temporary iron church has been erected in Castle road, as a chapel of ease to St. Cuthbert's, and contains 400 sittings.

The Catholic church, of The Holy Child and St. Joseph, situated in Midland and Brereton roads, is a lofty building of stone, in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave and aisles : provision has been made for extending one end of the church, and when complete it will have a fine tower with broach spire : the altar, erected in 1864, by subscription among the children of the school, is of Bath stone, with the figures of King David, St. Gregory the Great, St. Andrew, and St. Nicholas, each in a niche with canopy and elegant pinnacles : over the high altar is a stained window, also the gift of children and exhibiting incidents in the life of Our Lord : attached to the church is a presbytery: the Very Rev. Provost Warinoff is priest in charge.

There are also places of worship for the following denominations viz., Baptists, Catholic Apostolic, Particular Baptists, Congregationalists, Moravians, Huntingdonians, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists and The Brethren.

The Bunyan chapel (Union of Baptists and Congregationalists), situated in Mill street, was rebuilt in 1849, on the site of the former chapel, known as the "Old Meeting," itself erected in 1707, on the site of the building of which John Bunyan was the minister: his chair is preserved in the vestry, and a tablet on the south side of the chapel records that he was many years a prisoner in Bedford Gaol: this chapel was established in 1650: in 1876 the Duke of Bedford gave two massive bronze doors for the principal entrance; these have 10 panels, each of which represents, in bold relief, some scene from "The Pilgrim's Progress:" John Bunyan was pastor here from 1672 until the time of his death in 1688. In the village of Elstow, one mile south-west from Bedford, Bunyan was born, and during the twelve years of his imprisonment in the Bedford Gaol he wrote his allegory, "The Pilgrim's Progress." A large school was attached to this chapel in the year 1866.

The school room belonging to St. Paul's Wesleyan chapel is a noble edifice, with an Assembly room, 71 feet long, and 32 feet wide: on the ground floor are numerous class rooms, a committee room and convenient rooms for tea and other social meetings. The building was erected from designs by Messrs. Usher and Anthony, architects, Bedford, at a cost of about £2,500.

The Cemetery, Foster's hill, opened in 1855, covers an area of 18 acres, and has two mortuary chapels of stone, in the Gothic style, under one roof: the ground is laid out with great taste, and contains a valuable collection of the best varieties of cedar, cypress, yew and other ornamental trees. It is under the control of a burial board of 40 members.

At the south-west corner of St. Peter's green, on a square pedestal of granite, stands the statue of John Bunyan, presented to the town by his grave the Duke of Bedford: the figure, which is about 10 feet high, was designed by Mr. J. E. Boehm and cast from cannon and bells brought from China: it contains about 2½ tons of bronze. The idea which the sculptor has striven to work out is embodied in an inscription at the back of the pedestal, taken from Bunyan's description of the picture Christian saw hung against the wall in Interpreter's house of "a very grave person:" the figure, clad in the Puritan costume of Bunyan's day, stands in a natural position, with an open bible in the left hand, and the likeness is reproduced from a contemporary painting by Sadler; at the feet of the statue is a broken fetter, typifying the imprisonment to which he was doomed for the offence of preaching; on the front and two sides of the pedestal are scenes, in bold relief, from "The Pilgrim's Progress," representing Christian's fight with Apollyon; Evangelist directing Christian to the wicket gate; and the Pilgrim met by the Three Shining Ones; the statue is surrounded by 8 stone pillars and iron chains, and was unveiled on June 18th, 1874, by the late Lady Augusta Stanley.

The local charities include Christie's Almshouses, for eight unmarried persons; a school for 40 children, now incorporated with the general schools; and the Hospital of St. John the Baptist, founded in the reign of Edward II. for a master and ten co-brethren, the mastership being annexed to St. John's rectory. There are 20 almshouses, each with four rooms, for aged and decayed housekeepers (ten for either sex), with a weekly allowance; but under the new scheme of 1873, these houses will not be fitted up upon the death of the present holders: there are also 46 other almshouses for aged couples, and a sum of money distributed yearly for the relief of decayed housekeepers: there are numerous other charities.

One of the most important features of Bedford is the Grammar school, endowed by alderman Sir William Harpur, and the several other schools in connection therewith. The Grammar school is one of the sixteen schools licensed by letters patent of King Edward VI. and its foundation dates from 1552. Sir William Harpur (who was a native of Bedford, a liveryman and alderman of the city of London and Lord Mayor in 1561), together with Dame Alice his wife, in 1566 granted to the corporation of the Free Grammar school at Bedford, an estate then consisting of 10 acres and 1 rood of land situate in the parishes of St. George the Martyr (Queen square, Bloomsbury) and of St. Andrew, Holborn, which had been purchased by him for the sum of £180, for the purposes of the Grammar school: this estate from its position became exceedingly valuable and has all been built over. The following are some of the streets, now existing on the estate:— Bedford row (west side), Lambs Conduit st. Theobalds road, Harpur st. and New North street. Many of the houses having been required for improvements in the neighbourhood, have been compulsorily taken, and the proceeds invested by the trustees in the funds. The annual rent of the remaining houses, mostly let on leases of 30 years, is estimated at £14,000. The trustees also own some houses in St. John's and St. Paul's, Bedford, producing a further annual rental of £150. The trusts of the charity were reconstituted by a scheme of the Endowed Schools Commissioners approved by Her Majesty in council in 1873, and dating as from 30th May, 1871. The governing body consists of twenty-seven persons, of whom six are ex-officio, viz. the Lord Lieutenant, the Mayor and the members for the Town and County; nine are nominated for five years, viz. Sir T. Erskine May K.C.B. Rev. Canon A. F. Kirkpatrick M.A. John Storror M.D. Rev. Canon C. Evans, J. E. White esq. Alfred Robinson esq. M.A. Philip Magnus B.A., B.Sc. J. P. Piper M.A. and J. Carter M.R.C.S., J.P.; also twelve representative governors holding office generally for three years.

The schools established by the trustees in addition to the original Grammar school, with a preparatory department, are the MODERN school for boys, lower or junior MODERN school, a HIGH school for GIRLS and a MODERN school for GIRLS; also ELEMENTARY schools for boys and girls residing in Bedford. At the Grammar school boys are instructed on the classical side in the usual branches of a public school education, there being in this department about 350 boys; there is also a Civil and Military side, in which the boys are also instructed in modern languages and natural science, and in drawing, music, gymnastics and drill: on this side there are 180 boys, and in the preparatory department 70 boys, making a total of 600 boys. The fees are: day boys under 13, £3 per term; and over that age, £4 per term; entrance fee £2. For boarders under 13, £24 per term; and over that age 25 guineas, per term. All boys residing with their parents, grand parents and uncles and aunts, under certain conditions, or legal guardians, are eligible for admission as long as the parental or other residence is bona-fide during term time; and this residence may be in lodgings, and is not confined to the town; boys are admitted from the age of eight, and may remain till they are nineteen. Two exhibitions of £70 and £60 a year are awarded annually, tenable for four years at any university, or other place of liberal and professional education approved by the governors; these are competed for annually, and are open to all who have been two years in the school, either as day boys or boarders. The Modern school is divided into the Higher Modern side, the Military side, and the Commercial side and the Preparatory school. The Modern and Lower Modern school now number about 500 boys. The Preparatory school is intended for boys between the ages of seven and ten, and is under the care of mistresses. It is separated from the rest of the school, and great pains are taken to give the boys a good grounding in English, French, and arithmetic, and to attend to their comfort and happiness. (b) The Junior school: boys pass through this department on leaving the Preparatory school, and are placed in it if they enter the school between the ages of ten and twelve, unless they are exceptionally forward for their age; they may remain in it until thirteen years of age, if they do not obtain their promotion earlier. French, elementary Latin, English history, geography, and arithmetic are taught, and great attention is paid to writing and spelling. Above this, the school is divided into three departments: (c) the Higher Modern; (d) the Military; (e) the Commercial. (c) On the Higher Modern side, boys are prepared for the Universities (except in Greek, which may not be taught), for London University matriculation, the Civil Service, Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations, and professional or higher business life. The subjects taught are religious knowledge, Latin, French, German, mathematics, natural science, political economy, English language and literature, history, geography, vocal music, perspective, geometrical and freehand drawing, book-keeping and shorthand. (d) On the Military side (which does a considerable portion of its work with the Higher Modern side), boys are specially prepared for admission to Woolwich and Sandhurst. (e) The Commercial side is intended for those who are likely to leave school for business or other employments at a comparatively early age. On it extra lessons in English, French, book-keeping and writing, are substituted for Latin and German. There are good chemical and physical lecture rooms, and a library to which boys in the upper part of the school have free access. There is also a well-arranged chemical laboratory, a workshop and a smithy. The fee for instruction in these is 10s. a term each, or for a boy attending both workshop and smithy 7s. 6d. each, payable in advance. Special arrangements may be made for learning the piano, organ and other instruments. Candidates are admitted at the age of seven, and may remain till they have attained that of seventeen: boys who have reached their eighteenth year may remain in the school, but are not eligible for exhibitions. There are two exhibitions of £55 and £45 yearly, tenable for three years at any university, or any other place of liberal and professional education approved by the governors, who have also power to establish exhibitions in the school, providing that, in half at least, preference be given to boys educated at the elementary schools of the town. The schools occupy a central position facing St. Paul's square, Harpur street, Horne lane and Midland road; attached to the Grammar school are houses for the first and second masters. In a niche over the old entrance of the Grammar school is a statue of the founder, Sir William Harpur, knight, in his robes as alderman of the city of London; and inserted in the wall at the base of the statue is a marble slab, bearing the following Latin inscription:

"Ecce, Viator! Corpora Effigies
Gulielmi Harpur, Equitis Aurati,
Scholæ istius
Quam cernis amplam et ornatum
Manificētissimi Fundatoria.
Si Animæ Pieturam spectare velis,
In Chartâ Beneficiorum invenias Delineatam."

"Lo here is, traveller, a bodily representation
Of Sir William Harpur, knight,
The munificent founder of this school,
Which you see so spacious and adorned;
If you wish to behold a picture of his mind
You may find it delineated in the record
Of his benefactions."

He died in 1573, and his tomb is in St. Paul's church of this town.

THE High school for girls, situated in Bromham road, Miss Belcher, head mistress, provides the most liberal education at comparatively low fees. The school course includes religious instruction, reading, writing, the English language, literature and composition, Latin, modern languages, history, geography, arithmetic, mathematics, political economy, natural science, drawing, class singing and harmony, domestic economy and the laws of health, gymnastics, needlework, and such other subjects as the governors may from time to time prescribe. No pupil is admitted under eight years of age, or without passing an entrance examination suitable to her age. The school fees are: entrance fee £2; term fees £3 a term for pupils under thirteen years of age; and £4 a term for pupils over thirteen years of age. Pupils are only received who are living with their parents, grand-parents or guardians (or uncles or aunts under certain conditions) unless they reside as boarders in boarding houses licensed by the governors. A gymnasium, laboratory and cooking school are attached to the school; the number of pupils in attendance is a little over 200.

THE MODERN school for girls, Bromham road, Miss Porter, head mistress. Subjects taught: religions instruction, reading, writing, the English language and literature, French, history, geography, arithmetic, mathematics, political economy, natural science, drawing, class singing, domestic economy and the laws of health, needlework and such other subjects as the governors may from time to time prescribe. Fees.—Entrance fee £1; £1 6s. 8d. a term. The rules and regulations of the High school are applicable to the Modern school, except that pupils are admitted at seven years of age instead of eight, as in the High school; attendance about 200.

ELEMENTARY schools, for boys and girls residing south of the river Ouse, were erected in 1875-76, on the west of the Amphilh road, close to the town at a cost of about £4,500: these are of red brick with Bath stone dressings, and form three sides of a quadrangle, with classrooms, one half being occupied by boys and the other by girls; attendance about 2,210.

A large number of retired officers, widows of clergymen and professional men, reside in or near Bedford, in order to secure the educational advantages afforded by these schools, and many houses have been built to suit their requirements in the outskirts of the town.

The Bedford County School Company (originally called the Bedford Middle Class Public Schools Company) was formed in 1866, with a view to give boys of this and adjoining counties a first class modern education: the school, situated on the Amphilh road, in the parish of Kempston, and opened in Midsummer, 1869, is an extensive structure of red brick, in the Elizabethan style, with a clock tower in the centre of the south-east front, and occupies, with the playground, an area of 22 acres: it is exclusively a boarding school, and is designed to hold 300 boys between the age of eight and seventeen; the cost of the buildings, including purchase of land and fittings, was about £28,000; these include a head master's residence, class-rooms, a separate room for each master, a large dining hall, chapel, library, lavatories, dormitories, an excellent gymnasium and a swimming bath.

In the market place is a stone drinking fountain presented in 1870, as a memorial to the late T. W. Turnley esq. of Bedford.

A market is held every Saturday for corn, cattle, and general produce. The cattle market is held in the Commercial road, near the centre of the town; and there are also private sale yards for holding stock sales on the Saturday weekly market days, which are in the occupancy of Messrs. Stafford and Rogers. Fairs are held on the 21st and 22nd of April; first Tuesday in July, for wool; August 21st, October 12th, and December 19th, all of which, with this exception of the wool fair, are principally for cattle, and are well attended; the two fairs of April and October are also pleasure fairs. The wool fair is held in the Market field, Commercial road, and attracts a large number of dealers in that commodity. Races are now discontinued.

The Britannia Iron Works, the property of Messrs. James and Frederick Howard, occupy an area of about 20 acres, and form one of the most interesting objects of the neighbourhood. The style of architecture is Italian, and the entire structure is, perhaps, one of the most handsome and complete in the kingdom. Throughout the whole establishment, the arrangements are such as to economise labour to the utmost; tramways extend all round the works for the conveyance of materials to and from the different departments: the largest of these departments is the Foundry, a rectangular building, more than 250 feet long, and covering about an acre; the departments for fitting, forging, finishing, painting, and forwarding are also large and admirably adapted to the various purposes; about a dozen engines supply the motive power throughout the works, at which are produced various descriptions of agricultural machinery, all on the newest and most improved plans, such as ploughs, steam cultivators, horse rakes, harrows and hay-making machines, adapted for every style of cultivation and for various soils throughout the world; steam ploughs for heavy land, turning over 14 inches of soil; the Cape plough, to be drawn by bullocks, and ploughs for the Kentish cultivation, effecting the complete conversion of the soil; the heavy ploughs with bent wood beams, still in use in Bulgaria and South Russia, and along with these is the toy-like instrument for use by the amateur with his pony, and the market gardener with his cob machines for sowing, hoeing, reaping, binding and thrashing. There are probably, few places on the globe where the instruments of Messrs. Howard are not known; and they maintain an honourable competition with other English manufacturers, such as Messrs. Ransomes, Garrett, Hornsby, Fowler and Shettleworth. Other manufactures of the same description of implements, as well as of brick and tile making machines, belong to Messrs. E. Page and Co. of High street and St. Cuthbert's. There are also several breweries, maltings, and cake factories: shoes, straw plait, and pillow lace are made here.

The New Corn Exchange, occupying a prominent position on the north side of St. Paul's square, is an edifice of white brick with Bath stone cornices and Pennant stone dressings, in the Italian style, and was built at a cost of about £9,000, exclusive of site, and opened by His Grace the Duke of Bedford, April 15th, 1874. It contains a spacious assembly room, snapper room and several offices: the hall is 100 feet long and 85 feet wide, and is lighted and ventilated by three glazed domes; it is used for balls, entertainments, and public meetings, as well as for the corn market. In front of the building, carved in bold relief, in stone, are the arms of the borough: in the course of excavations for the structure, a number of bones, skulls, and other human remains were discovered. The building in St. Paul's square, in the Græco-Italian style, originally designed for a corn exchange, was built in 1849, at a cost of £2,000.

Her Majesty's Prison, situated in St. Loyes street, was rebuilt in 1849, at a cost of about £23,000, upon the principle of the model prisons, so as to carry out the separate and silent system: there are 176 cells for males and 8 for females; houses for the governor and chief warder are attached.

The Borough Police Station is in Silver street.

The County Police Station is in Gadsby street, and is also the headquarters of the County Constabulary.

The Shire Hall, in St. Paul's square, was erected in 1753, and rebuilt 1879-82, at a cost of £20,000, from designs by A. Waterhouse, A.R.A. architect, of London.

Five newspapers are published here, viz. the "Bedfordshire Times & Independent," the "Bedfordshire Mercury," the "Bedford & County Record," "Bedfordshire Herald," and the "Bedfordshire Standard."

The Bedford General Infirmary, situated on the Amphil road, and erected in 1803, with funds bequeathed chiefly by Samuel Whitbread esq. is a large brick building, consisting of a centre and two wings, and has a museum and medical library: it is available for 60 in-patients; but the average number exceeds this. The Fever Hospital, erected in 1846, and situated in spacious park-like grounds, with a good avenue of trees, sheltering the approaches from the Kempston and Amphil roads, is detached, and will hold 50 patients; the Hospital Committee holds weekly meetings on Fridays, and the General Board meets once a quarter.

The old building of the County Lunatic Asylum, Amphil road, has been pulled down and removed, and the site built over, forming a part of the suburb called South End. The present County Asylum is at Stotfold.

The Bedford Rooms, in Harpur street, originally built by a company, is a fine building, with classic portico supported by four fluted pillars, and has an assembly-room 72 feet long, 32 wide and 28 high, used for concerts, public meetings and lectures. The Bedford Literary and Scientific Institute and General Library, which occupies part of the same building, was established in 1830, and its committee became the owners of the whole of the buildings in 1884. The valuable library comprises about 12,000 volumes, and there is also a public news room, where most of the daily and many weekly papers are provided, and a large number of periodicals. In the same building are the rooms of the Bedford Archaeological and Architectural and Natural History Societies; the former issues a yearly volume in association with kindred societies in the neighbouring counties; there is also an Agricultural Society, the meetings of which are held at the Swan hotel; there is a subscription bowling green in the De Parys Avenue.

The Working Men's Institute, Harpur street, is a building of red brick with stone dressings, in the Gothic style, erected in 1856, at a cost of £1,383, and contains a reading room, well supplied with newspapers, a library containing over 2,000 volumes, a lecture room 45 feet long by 30 feet wide, and also chess and bagatelle rooms. The reading rooms, which has recently been doubled in size, is open to the public on payment of one penny per visit; and to artisans on low rates of subscription for different periods.

Bedford is the headquarters of the Regimental District No. 16, comprising the 1st and 2nd battalions (late 16th foot), 3rd battalion (Bedfordshire Militia) and 4th battalion (Herts Militia). The Bedford Brigade Depot Barracks, situated on the Kempston road, about one mile west of the town, were erected by Government in 1875-6, at a cost of about £50,000; the buildings form three sides of a quadrangle, and occupy 23 acres, enclosed by a high wall, 13 of which serve as an encampment, drill and recreation ground; the east and west wings of the north front are connected by a central block with four massive towers, holding upwards of 3,000 stand of arms and accoutrements, in addition to a powder magazine, clothing and bedding stores; the west wing includes the officers' mess, and quarters for eleven officers and their servants: the east wing consists of canteen, reading and recreation rooms, sergeants' mess, four non-commissioned officers' quarters, workshops, and stores; the sides consist of two blocks available for 288 soldiers (single), and eight sergeants; besides a hospital for 28 patients, four out-rials, residence for hospital sergeant and cook, and detached infectious ward and mortuary; there are also married soldiers' quarters for 31 families, with an infant school attached.

Bedford is also the headquarters of the 1st Bedfordshire Rifle Volunteers.

The Liberal Club, belonging to a company, and occupying a prominent position on the south side of the Midland road, is a building of red brick, with red Mansfield stone dressings, in the Queen Anne style, erected from the designs of Messrs. Usher and Anthony of this town, at a cost of about £3,000, a prominent feature being the two fine circular bow windows to both floors. On the ground floor is a spacious lecture room, 45 feet long and 30 feet wide, which can be divided by shutters into two reading rooms; there is also a committee room and kitchen, and in the rear a caretaker's house; on the first floor is a lofty and well ventilated billiard room, and smoking and card rooms.

The principal hotels are 'The Swan,' 'The George' and 'The Lion.'

The cloisters and refectory of an ancient house of Grey Friars, founded in 1311 by Mabel Pateshull, now form part of a farm-house, situated in Priory street. A monastery existed here in the Saxon period, and was selected by Offa, King of Mercia, for his burial place, but a sudden and unusually high inundation of the Ouse swept away his sepulchre; there was also a hospital dedicated to St. Leonard, founded in the time of Edward I. At the bottom of a yard, leading out of High street, are the remains of a building of considerable interest, erected in the fourteenth century, which some have supposed, from tracery in the windows and other ornaments, to have been a monastic establishment: it was, however, part of the Old George inn, an important house of entertainment for travellers in ancient days. About two miles from Bedford, and on the south side of the Ouse, is a meadow called "King's Mead," and a very ancient possession of the corporation, but was sold by them a few years ago to Mr. S. C. Whitbread.

The population of the Municipal and Parliamentary borough in 1881 was 19,533; viz.: males, 8,666; and females, 10,867.

* Including 85 in the general infirmary.

† Including 117 in H. M. prison.

† Including 277 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

The population of Bedford has considerably increased since the census in 1831, and is probably now (1885) about 23,000.

BIDDENHAM is a small pleasant village and parish, almost surrounded by the River Ouse, 2 miles west from Bedford, and 8 north from Amphill, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. James is a stone edifice, in the Norman and

Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled central tower with small spire, containing a clock and 6 bells: over the communion table, in a fair state of preservation, is a piece of tapestry, bearing date 1542: there are two hagioscopes and piscine: inserted in the north wall of the chancel is a quaint monument of alabaster and marble to the Boteler family, dated 1621: there are several mural tablets and some curious brasses. The register dates from the year 1663. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value about £150, derived from 43 acres of land, £13 from Queen Anne's bounty, and £8 tithes with residence, in the gift of Edward Rhys Wingfield esq. and held since 1865 by the Rev. Henry Wood M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Boteler's charity of £15 yearly, derived from land in Cranfield, is distributed in beef to the poor; there is also £5 yearly from the Biddenham lordship. Pillow lace is made here. Edward Rhys Wingfield esq. of Barrington Park, Bedford, Oxon, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. This parish has become celebrated by the discoveries of remains of the extinct mammalia of the post-glacial period in the gravel beds: the further discovery here of flint implements in 1861 has made this locality familiar to foreign as well as English geologists. The soil is clay; subsoil, limestone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and peas. The area is 1,556 acres; rateable value, £3,470; the population in 1881 was 308.

Parish Clerk, Samuel Fuller Green.

BIGGLESWADE is a market and union town, head of a county court district, polling place for the county, and station on the Great Northern railway, 45 miles from London by the high road and 41 by rail, 10½ south-east from Bedford and 12 north from Hitchin, in the hundred and rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, bordered on the west by the river Ivel, which is navigable from its junction with the Ouse at Tempsford, distant about 4 miles. The town is well lighted with gas. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient and venerable structure of sandstone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a tower containing 5 bells: the chancel, rebuilt in 1467, retains its piscina and sedilia, and has a beautiful altar-piece, representing the Last Supper, presented by Charles Barnett esq. in 1765: a reredos was added in 1877: there are several brasses, one of which, with the representation of an angel conversing with death, commemorates John Ruding, a former archdeacon of Bedford: the stained east window was erected in 1878 to the memory of Charles Barnett esq. of Stratton Park, and there are other memorial windows to the late Mrs. Lindsell, of Fairfield, and various members of that family: the fine reredos of Venetian mosaic was designed by Mr. Withers, architect, of London. There are sittings for 800 persons. The register dates from the year 1670. The living is a vicarage, title rent-charge £312, gross yearly value £370, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Henry Thellusson Wood M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church of St. John the Baptist, situated at the north end of the town, was built in 1883, at a cost of £2,985, exclusive of the site, and is an edifice of red brick from the designs of A.W. Holmfeld M.A. architect, consisting of chancel, nave and south aisle, and will seat 420 persons: the stained east window is a memorial to Sir Charles Talbot K.C.B. and Lady Talbot. There are places of worship for Calvinists, Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists and Brethren, with Sunday schools connected therewith: the Wesleyan chapel is in Shortmead street; the Primitive Methodist chapel also in Shortmead street. The cemetery, situated at some distance from the town, covers an area of 2 acres, and was laid out and enclosed at a cost of £1,500;

there are two mortuary chapels, connected by a tower with spire upwards of 90 feet in height; the cemetery is under the control of a burial board of 6 members. The Town Hall a substantial building in the Roman-Doric style, was erected in 1814, at a cost of £800, J. T. Wing esq. of Bedford being the architect: it is used for the petty sessions and county courts, and serves also for balls, concerts and other public entertainments. The market is held on Wednesday for corn and pigs, and on Wednesday and Saturday for plait. There are fairs on February 14th, Saturday in Easter week, Whit Monday, September 27th, and November the 8th, for horses and live stock. Sir John Cotton, in 1752, bequeathed £1,800 for charitable uses, which he directed to be laid out in the purchase of land subsequently acquired at Flitwick, near Ampthill; two-ninths of the rental is appropriated to a schoolmaster, one-ninth to the vicar, two-ninths to the vicar of St. Neots, two-ninths to the vicar of Conington, and two-ninths to a schoolmaster at Holme, Huntingdonshire. Seven other charities, producing £35, are yearly distributed. Francis Lovell esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Fitz-Roy Barnett esq. of Stratton Park, Charles Samuel Lindsell esq. J.P. of Holme, Lieut.-Colonel Robert Henry Lindsell D.L., J.P. of Fairfield, and John Nathaniel Foster esq. D.L., J.P. of Sandy. The country is picturesque, and the soil fertile and very productive, being celebrated for the extensive growth of cucumbers, onions and other market-garden produce. The parish contains 4,310 acres; rateable value, £24,111; the population in 1881 was 4,947, 23 in the vagrant ward of Luton workhouse.

STRATTON is a scattered hamlet belonging to Biggleswade, and distant a mile and a half south-east. Stratton park, the seat of Charles Fitz-Roy Barnett esq. is a large brick mansion, surrounded by a park of 160 acres, beautifully wooded with fine elm trees, and distant one mile and a half east-south-east from Biggleswade.

HOLME with Holme Green, is also a small hamlet, situated one mile south from Biggleswade, to which parish it belongs. Charles Samuel Lindsell esq. D.L., J.P. who resides at Holme, is master of the Cambridgeshire hounds. Parish Clerk, William Alexander Medlock, Shortmead st later rectors, and to Arabella, wife of C. C. Vivian esq. 1637; in June, 1882, a new reredos was erected in the style of the chancel, by the Rev. the Hon. Edmund Tudor St. John, M.A. late rector: the reredos occupies the whole width of the chancel, the central portion being divided into three compartments by marble columns, and finished with pinnacles and carved finials: a white alabaster cross on a marble background occupies the centre, and on either side in the other two niches are figures of St. John and the Virgin Mary: under canopies on each side of the reredos proper is an arcade of four arches: the whole has been carried out by Mr. R. L. Boulton, of Cheltenham: a new organ has been recently placed in the church, at a cost of £200 raised by subscription. The register dates from the year 1582. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £332; gross yearly value £410, including 35 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Lord St. John, and held since 1851 by the Rev. Frederick Henry Bolingbroke M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Pillow lace is made here. Of Bletsoe castle, originally built as a quadrangle, only the north side, standing at a short distance north of the church, now remains, and is now occupied as a farmhouse by Mr. Henry Campion; at the east end is a spacious staircase. Queen Elizabeth was once entertained here, and James I. visited Bletsoe no less than six times. Lord St. John is lord of the manor (from which he takes the title of Baron of Bletsoe) and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, gravel, clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 2,239 acres; rateable value, about £2,817; the population in 1881 was 341.

BLUNHAM is a parish, large village, and station on the Bedford and Cambridge line of the North Western railway, 7 miles east from Bedford, 6 south from St. Neots, 5 north-west from Biggleswade and 50 from London, in the hundred of Wixamtree, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, situated between the rivers Ouse and Ivel. The church of St. Edmund is a building of sandstone, partly of the Norman period, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a lofty tower containing a clock and 5 bells: in the south wall of the chancel is a monument with recumbent effigy to Susanna (Grey) daughter of Charles, 7th Earl of Kent of that family, and wife of Sir Michael Longueville, seventeenth century; there are also memorial slabs to the Bromsall family, including one to Margaretta Bromsall, 1664; the church was restored and entirely re-seated in 1860, and in 1862 the organ was considerably enlarged at the expense of Miss Polhill of this place, who also contributed largely to the refitting of the church; the church plate includes a paten of silver given by Dr. Archer, of Blunham, in 1862. The register dates from the year 1571. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £650, including about 235 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Earl Cowper M.A. and held since 1872 by the Rev. Thomas Marlborough Berry M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There are two Baptist chapels. Blunham formerly had a market and a fair at the festival of St. James, granted to John Lord Hastings in 1315. BROMHAM (or BRUMHAM, anciently Bromelham or Bromelam) is a parish and beautiful village, situated on the north bank of the river Ouse, and on the Northampton road, 3 miles north-west from Bedford and 2 south from Oakley station, in Willey hundred, Bedford union and county court district, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The village is on the Northampton road, and on the river Ouse, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of 26 arches. The church of St. Owen, situated in Bromham Park, is an ancient edifice of stone, in the Gothic style of the thirteenth century, and consists of chancel with vestry on the north, nave, north aisle, north and south porches, and a lofty embattled tower containing 6 fine-toned bells, bearing the motto of the Dyve family, who were the donors both of the bells and the communion plate: in the Dynevor chapel is an elaborate memorial window to the late Lord Dynevor; in the south wall of the chancel is a piscina, and on the opposite side an ambury; on a slab in the chancel pavement is a very handsome palimpsest brass, originally representing a man and his two wives of the early fifteenth century, but, as now reversed, it commemorates Sir T. Wilde, his wife and mother, with the date 1535; against the wall of the aisle is a monument of alabaster, with recumbent effigy, clad in armour, of Sir Lewis Dyve, 1603, who was commander of the King's forces for the Newport Pagnell district, during the Great Rebellion; there are also other interesting monuments: over the south porch is a small library, and inserted in the wall outside the room is an incised slab, recording the foundation of the library by Thomas Lord Trevor in 1740; against one of the piers of the nave is an ancient alms box: in 1868 the church was restored by the parishioners, the chancel rebuilt at the cost of the Hon. Miss Rice-Trevor, and a chapel erected over the Dynevor family vault by the CADDINGTON is a village and parish, partly in Beds and partly in Herts, 2 miles west from Luton, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Luton, rural deanery of Luton, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is a building chiefly of the late Decorated or Perpendicular styles, with considerable remains of Norman and Early English work, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and a western embattled tower, containing 6 bells; it was thoroughly restored, and a vestry added in 1876, at a cost of £2,500, from designs by Mr. Ewan Christian, of London: the chancel is fitted with seats of solid oak: there are brasses, with effigies, to John Hawtt, 1505, and his wife, Elizabeth, with 8 children; and to Edward Dormer, yeoman, 1578, and his wives, Joan and Elizabeth, with 14 children. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £320, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and held since 1862 by the Rev. Thomas Prescott M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, and rural dean of Luton. There are Wesleyan, Baptist and Union chapels. The charities amount to £16 yearly, of which Martha Coppin, of Markyate Cell, left £6; David Fullerton, of Markyate Street, left the interest of £242; and another person left 30s. which is distributed in bread, meat, and clothing to the poor. Caddington Hall (in this parish) is the seat of Rear-Admiral Mark R. Pecheil, and is surrounded by a park and grounds. The principal residence in the parish is Markyate Cell, which, during the reign of Edward VI, was a nunnery of the Benedictine order, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; the site was granted by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's in 1145, but the chief benefactor was Geoffrey, abbot of St.

There is a charity, consisting of 13 acres of land, left for the repair of chancel, by an unknown donor, with other charities, liberally supplemented by the Hon. Miss Rice-Trevor and others. Bromham hall, the residence of the Hon. Miss Rice-Trevor, is an interesting gabled building of brick, situated in a valley on the north side of and immediately adjacent to the river Ouse; the approach is through a long and picturesque avenue of elms and sycamore trees; the mansion stands in an extensive park, planted with a great variety of shrubs and stately trees. The Hon. Miss Rice-Trevor, who is lady of the manor, and Eton College, are the principal landowners. The soil is gravelly, with a strong clay subsoil, mostly cold. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, mangold wurtzel, turnips and kohlrabi. Pillow lace is made here. The area is 1,798 acres; rateable value, £5,212; and the population in 1881 was 327.

CAMPTON is a small village and parish, 10 miles south-east from Bedford, and 1 mile south-west from Shefford station, in the hundred of Clifton, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Shefford, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is a building of stone, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, and a Perpendicular tower at the west-end of the south aisle, containing 4 bells; the chancel is decorated; in the nave is a brass to Richard Carlyll esq. and Joan, his wife, both of whom died Feb. 14th, 1489; the church contains several monuments and the mausoleum of the Osborn family: Bloomfield, the poet, who died at Shefford, Aug. 19th, 1823, was buried here. The register, including Shefford, dates from the year 1568. The living is a rectory, with Shefford chapelry annexed, joint net yearly value £375, with residence, in the gift of Sir George Robert Osborn bart. and held since 1870 by the Rev. George Montague Osborn M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. An addition of 1 acre was made to the churchyard in 1857, under the control of a burial board of 5 members. The Manor House, now the residence of Miss Osborn, was, in 1645, the seat of Sir Charles Ventris, whose narrow escape from assassination is recorded in the following inscription, still preserved on a panel, which, having received the contents of a musket, has never been repaired. CADDINGTON is an extensive parish and picturesque village, with station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, 45 miles from London, 23 south-east from Bedford, 8½ west-by-north from Biggleswade and 9 north-by-east from Ampthill, in the hundred of Wixamtree, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely: it is bounded on the north by the river Ouse. The church of St. Mary is an edifice of stone, chiefly, with the exception of the tower, in the Perpendicular style, and consisting of chancel, with aisles, nave with clerestory, south aisle, and a central Early English tower containing a clock and 8 bells: in the north aisle of the chancel is a mural tablet to John Howard, the philanthropist; there are also several handsome marble monuments by Weekes and Bacon to the Whitbread family: under the arcades of the chancel are two canopied altar tombs with brasses, one to the family of Sir W. Gascoigne, chancellor of the household to Cardinal Wolsey, and the other is to Sir Jarrate Harvie: the stained east window was erected by friends to the memory of W. H. Whitbread esq.: in the south wall of the chancel is a piscina. The register dates from the year 1574. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £250, net yearly value £365, including 22 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1856 by the Rev. Edward John Hillier M.A. formerly fellow of that college. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, erected in 1823. The village is very finely timbered; Caddington Cross, designed by Chantry, is prettily situated in the picturesque approach from Bedford, which is through a noble avenue of elm trees, about three-quarters of a mile in length. The Whitbread almshouses, on the Green, are for four poor widows, and have an endowment of £50 yearly. Near the railway station are two cottages for widows, founded by John Howard, and under the management of the overseers of the poor. Forster's charity, founded in 1661, and amounting to £30 yearly, is derived from land at Cotton End: £5 is distributed among the Caddington poor, and the rest on Shrove Tuesday among Ventris, knight banneret, created by King Charles for his valour in the Civil Wars, was, in the night time, by Oliver's party, shot at as he was walking in this room, but happily missed him." Highlands, an elegant building, was erected in 1876, and is occupied by Henry J. R. Osborn esq. J.P. Many interesting Roman and Anglo-Saxon antiquities have been discovered in the neighbourhood. John Lewis flytche, esq. D.L., J.P. of Thorpe Hall, Louth, Lincolnshire, is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Sir G. R. Osborn bart. of Chicklands Priory, Biggleswade D.L., J.P. and E. Powers esq. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, varied. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas, and ordinary garden produce. The population in 1881 was 555; the area is 1,120 acres, including Shefford township; rateable value of Campton, £1,664.

the poor of Eastcotts. There are also other charities amounting to 50s. yearly. In Caddington proper is an extensive water flour mill; and there is also a brewery. The chief occupation of the women here is the making of pillow lace and straw plaiting. Caddington was at one time the residence of John Howard, the philanthropist, who came to live here about 1765; Howard's Villa, now the residence of General Mills J.P. has been largely added to, but the house still retains its original form, and some of the trees in the garden are of Howard's planting; in the garden is an observatory, fitted with astronomical and meteorological instruments. Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Southill, Biggleswade, is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is chiefly gravel and clay; subsoil, principally clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, peas, turnips and mangold-wurtzel. The area is 5,170 acres; rateable value, £4,227; the population in 1881 was 1,225.

The EASTCOTTS, in this parish, comprising the hamlets of FENLAKE, 1½ mile west; HARROWDEN, 2½ miles west, and COTTON END, 3½ miles south, form a separate district for civil purposes; the population and area given above includes this division but the names of the residents will be found under the heading of "EASTCOTTS."

CHELLINGTON is a parish and village adjoining Carlton, 4 miles from Turvey railway station, 9 north-west from Bedford, bounded on the north by the river Ouse, which is crossed by Harrold bridge, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of

Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Nicholas is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, pleasantly situated on the summit of a hill, and was restored in 1869; it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a Decorated tower with broach spire containing 4 bells: the font, Early English, is a cylindrical basin on circular shafts: there is a parish chest, dated 1667; and inscriptions to William Chaderton A.M. 1724; Rev. Thomas Chaderton A.M. 1735 and to the Bamford family: in the churchyard is a tomb to Sir Robert Darling, kt. who, as a boy, it is said, used to keep cows on Chellington hill; in 1767 he was sheriff of London and Middlesex and in 1768 was elected M.P. for Wendover, as the colleague of Burke; he died 4th August, 1770. The living, consolidated with Carlton, is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £10, net yearly value £430, including 413 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1876 by the Rev. William Henry Denison M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford, who resides at Carlton. The trustees of the late Miss Trevor, CHICKSANDS (formerly extra-parochial) is now a parish, one mile and a half north-west from Shefford, and 40 miles from London by rail, in the hundred, union, and county court district of Biggleswade. The Priory, the seat of Sir George Robert Osborn bart. D.L., J.P. pleasantly situated on a gentle declivity in a well-wooded park of 1,353 acres, consists in part of the original buildings of the ancient priory founded here about 1150; the south and east fronts were re-built by Wyatt towards the end of the last century, but the whole retains much of the monastic appearance, and the cloisters on the south and west sides of the quadrangle are almost entire. The late Sir George Osborn formed a collection of antiquities, and filled the windows with ancient stained glass: there is also a valuable collection of portraits, chiefly of the Osborn family, one of whom, Peter Osborn, was Privy Purse to Edward VI. and one of the Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Affairs in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; another, Colonel Henry Osborn, was slain at the battle of Naseby; and Henry Osborn, Vice-Admiral of Great Britain, was a distinguished naval officer, who died in 1771; there is also a fine full-length portrait of Edward VI. by

CLAPHAM is a village and parish, on the north bank of the river Ouse, 2 miles north-west from Bedford, on the road to Higham Ferrers, in the hundred of Stoddan, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Thomas-a-Becket, rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1861, is a building of native limestone, in the Early English style, from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A. and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and a very Early but massive tower 81 feet high, without buttresses, mentioned by Rickman as one of the best and most remarkable of the remaining examples of Early Saxon work in the kingdom, and containing 3 bells; the two lower stages are of earlier date than the third or upper portion: they are lighted by narrow semicircular-headed openings, equally splayed within and without; the entrance from the outside in the west front is by a semicircular-headed doorway, 4 ft. wide, entirely destitute of moulding, and in the east side from the church by a plain semicircular arch with abacus, to which the arch between the nave and chancel corresponds: the second stage has on its east face a large square-headed aperture or doorway, oval with its construction: the walls of both these stages diminish gradually in thickness from 5 ft. at the base; the third, or upper stage is of Early Norman work, and has a very wide rounded-headed two-light window set near the outer face of the wall and broadly splayed within, divided in the centre by a heavy mullion; about the year 1630 a battlement was set upon the walls, and a new roof added, slightly raised in the middle, and terminated with an iron cross; there are five stained windows in the south aisle to the Dawson family, and in the church is a monument to Thomas Taylor esq. of this place, whose widow founded the charity mentioned below. The register dates from the year 1696. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £57, net yearly value about £224, including 75 acres of glebe in the adjoining parishes of Oakley and Goldington, in the gift of Francis John Tynne esq. D.L., J.P. of Hayes Park, and held since 1851 by the Rev. Jeremiah William Hadlock M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge, Holbein, and a valuable portrait of Oliver Cromwell, by Sir Peter Lely. The state bedchamber, at the end of the north gallery, was built by the late Sir George in imitation of the Chapter House at Peterborough, and contains a state bed, which belonged to James I. richly adorned with crowns and the letters J. R. In the cloisters is an enriched coffin slab, with effigy in relief of an ecclesiastic vested and bearing a pastoral staff and book and inscribed: HIC IACET FRATER THOMAS DE COTWAYE ABBIAS DE PIPPEWELL CUI AIE PPICIEVTR DEVS AMEN: but the inscription is now illegible. The Duke of Bedford K.G. is lord of the manor. The principal landowner is Sir G. R. Osborn bart. D.L., J.P. The soil is sandy; subsoil, gravelly. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is returned with Shefford Hardwicke; rateable value is £1,692; the population in 1881 was 43.

and hon. canon of Ely, who resides at 7 Windsor terrace, Goldington road, Bedford, there being no parsonage. There is a Wesleyan chapel, built in 1876. The only charity belonging to this parish is one founded by Mrs. Ursula Taylor, widow of Thomas Taylor esq. who died in 1724, "to put out and apprentice to some trade every year one or two poor children;" the income, amounting to about £70 yearly, is derived from lands in Marston and Wootton; the trustees are the vicar of St. Paul's and the rector of St. John's, Bedford, with the vicar of Clapham. Her daughter and heiress, Catharine, was married in 1709 to William, the second Baron Ashburnham, both of whom died in the following year without issue. Messrs. James and Frederick Howard, of the Britannia works, Bedford, have an extensive farm in this parish. The manufacture of pillow lace is carried on here. Clapham Park is the residence of James Howard esq. M.P., D.L., J.P.: the house is a noble Elizabethan mansion, charmingly situated on the south side of Clapham wood, about 2 miles north from Bedford. The Woodlands, surrounded by trees, to the east of the church, on the road to Bedford, is the residence of Captain H. E. Browning. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford, Lady Power, Messrs. J. and F. Howard, of Bedford, and the trustees of the late Rev. J. F. Dawson. The soil in the lower part is clay and gravel, but the surface is very fertile, chiefly arable; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans and oats. Lime burning is carried on. The area is 1,982 acres; rateable value, £3,070; the population in 1881 was 608.

CLOPHILL is a parish and village, one mile east from the Bedford station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, and 10 miles south-east from Bedford, in Clifton hundred, Biggleswade union and county court district, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, on the road from Bedford to Baldock, and gives name to the hundred. The church of All Saints is an edifice of sandstone in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, and an embattled western tower, with a castellated turret at the north-east angle, and containing 14 bells, 8 of which are hung for ringing, and a clock with chimes: the church was thoroughly restored and enlarged in the year 1862, and reopened 23rd April, 1863, by the late H. Miles esq. at a cost of about £3,000: the reredos is divided by shafts of Devonshire marble, the centre panel represents The Crucifixion, on either side of which are figures of the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul: the pulpit is of carved alabaster, inlaid with marble; over the chancel arch is "A Majesty" in mosaic work: the west window representing the "Last Judgment"—that at the south-west corner of the nave, "The Nativity": a curious "low-side" window of two lights, in the chancel has for its subject the Annunciation of B. V. M.: there is an alabaster tomb to the memories of Sir Michael and Lady Fysher, beneath which and immediately beside it are effigies in incised brass of John, son of Sir Michael (who died 1528) and his wife: the former being in plate armour worn over a hauberk. Some portions of what has been supposed by some to have been a rood loft, and by others a parclose screen originally surrounding Sir Michael's tomb, with paintings of saints, are now fixed on the north and south internal walls of the tower: there is a small and curious crypt at the south-east corner of the nave: over the porch is a canopied niche with figure of the Good Shepherd. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 289½ acres of glebe £600, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1858 by the Rev. Henry Hugh Miles M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The Particular Baptist chapel was erected in 1853 by voluntary contributions, and has in connection therewith a day school, and also two almshouses and two widows' homes, erected in 1871. There is a flannel charity of £7 8s. yearly derived from £240 consols. The manor was held in ancient times by the Knights Templars. Major Henry Maclean Pryor, who is lord of the manor, and the Rev. H. H. Miles M.A. rector, are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; sub-soil, gault. The area is 1,420 acres, chiefly agricultural and garden ground; rateable value, £3,634; the population in 1831 was 1,458.

CLOPHILL is a village and parish, about 3½ miles east from Amphill, 3½ west from the Bedford station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, and 8½ south from Bedford, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Amphill, deanery of Amphill, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, near the road from Luton to Bedford. The Flitt, a tributary of the Ouse, flows through the parish. The old church of St. Mary (now used for burials only), contains several interesting memorial tablets to the Rev. Chas. Fletcher M.A. 1753, the Rev. William Pierce Nethersole, a vicar of Pulloxhill, 1799, and another to members of the family of Rev. Ezekiel House: the roof is a fine old specimen of oak workmanship, one beam being carved and supposed to date back 800 years. The new church of St. Mary was erected in 1348 by public subscription, of the sandstone peculiar to the West estate: it is in the late Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave and south aisle, with an embattled tower containing 2 bells and octagonal tower attached rising above the former, also embattled: the church is approached by a noble avenue of elms. The register dates from the year 1568. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £450, in the gift of Earl Cowper, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Gustavus Bosanquet M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. There are Sunday schools for both boys and girls, which are attended by upwards of 200 children; in girls are dressed in hats, for which there is a collection in church every year. The charities are about £60 yearly for distribution. Castle Hill, about three quarters of a mile to the south-east of the village, is supposed to have been an extensive Norman fortification, and was used for military purposes during the Civil Wars. Earl Cowper is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is principally sand; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 2,250 acres; rateable value, £3,807; the population in 1831 was 1,108.

COCKAYNE HATLEY is a parish and small village, bordering on Cambridgeshire, 3 miles east from the Potton station of the North Western railway, 6 north-east from Biggleswade, and 9 south-east from St. Neots, in the hundred, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. John the Baptist, erected toward the close of the fourteenth century, is a building of rubble and sandstone, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, and was completely restored in the year 1823 by the liberality of the late rector, the Rev. the Hon. H. C. Cust, and ornamented with exquisite wood carving, brought chiefly from the Low countries; it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and a western embattled tower of three stages, 66 feet in height, with battlements surmounted by pinnacles; in the nave is a piscina removed from the chancel: the chief feature of the chancel is the carved woodwork and stalls; the former, extending to nearly the whole length of the chancel, was brought from the Abbey of Alne, near Charlton, destroyed by the French under General Charbonnais at the end of the last century, and displays sixteen carved medallions in oak, representing the busts, in alto-relievo, of some of the most distinguished of the later saints and writers of the Catholic church; the backs of the stalls, twenty-four in number, are ornamented with different patterns inlaid in black wood, and are all furnished with misericords; the date of the carving is precisely ascertained to have been 1689; the communion rail, also of oak, consists of four compartments, with carved representations in alto-relievo typical of the Holy Sacrament; the chairs are fac-similes of the well-known Glastonbury chair, and were presented to the church by the brother and sons of the late incumbent: the stained east window represents passages in the life of Our Saviour:

COLMWORTH is a parish and very pleasant village, 7 miles north-east from Bedford, 6 south-west from St. Neot's and $\frac{7}{8}$ south from Kimbolton, in the hundred of Bedford, union of Bedford, county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of Eaton, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Dennis is a building of the Perpendicular period, consisting of chancel and nave, and a western tower with lofty and elegant spire, and containing 4 bells: north of the chancel is a vestry, with a double piscina, and there remains another in the chancel, a splendid monument of white marble, in memory of Sir William Dyer, his lady and family, dated 1641; there is also a brass to the wife of Sir Gerrard Braybrook, dated 1389: an organ was placed in the church in 1879, at a cost of £130, and heating stores by John Morrison esq. of Bushmead Priory: the silver communion cup is dated 1731. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1735, marriages, 1736. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £100, in the gift of and held since 1868 by the Rev. Hunter Bird Allen. The poor's land produces £16 yearly, which goes the two side windows of the chancel are filled with stained glass, representing the armorial bearings of the Cockayne and Cust families: the hexagonal carved oak pulpit is a most exquisite piece of workmanship, in the Cinque Cento style, executed in 1559, and decorated with small figures, in basso-relievo, of the Four Evangelists, with their appropriate emblems: the nave is separated from the tower by the organ loft, below which are large oak folding doors, pierced in a rich pattern: at the east end of the north aisle is a window containing old stained glass, representing four saints and Saxon monarchs, and there is also some good screen work; all the windows of both aisles as well as the west window are stained: a description of the church, written by Robert Needham Cust esq. and illustrated by the late rector's four daughters Anna Maria, Lucy, Eleanor, and Georgina, has been privately printed. The register dates from the year 1701. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £194, net yearly value £250, including 53 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Henry J. Cust esq. and held by the Rev. Edward Brickwell T.A.K.C.L. Henry J. Cust esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley, beans and peas. The area is 1,161 acres; rateable value, £1,076; population in 1881 was 107.

CRANFIELD is a parish and large village, situated on a range of hills near the Buckinghamshire border, 7 miles north-west from Amptmill and about 4 north from Liddington stations of the North-Western railway and 9 south-west from Bedford, in the hundred of Redborne-stoke, union and county court district of Amptmill, rural deanery of Fleete, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter and Paul is a building of coarse lime stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, vestry, with chamber over it, and a tower containing 5 bells: the interior was restored by the Rev. George Gardner Harter, late rector, on his presentation to the living in 1845: the stained east window, by Willeumant, was the gift of the late J. C. Harter: the west window, also stained, is filled with heraldic glass: there are also five other stained windows: the church is seated with richly carved oak benches: on the north side of the communion table is a brass to the Rev. James Beard M.A. a former rector, and on the south a sedile and piscina: there are also piscine at the east ends of the aisles and a stoup, anciently used for holy water, just inside the south doorway: the pulpit, of Caen stone and marble, is a memorial to the Rev. George Gardner Harter, late rector, and his wife, and was presented by their children in 1832. The register dates from the year 1600. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £800 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. George Gardner Harter M.A. and held since 1866 by the Rev. Hugh Hornby Birley M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. There is a Wesleyan and two Particular Baptist chapels. The charities consist of Grange's charity of about £22 yearly for apprenticing boys, £5 ss. distributable to the poor on St. Thomas's Day and almshouses for residence of that name, in which Samuel Butler wrote his "Hudibras." The Duke of Bedford K.O. is lord of the manor and owns all the land, with the exception of about 5 acres, and the glebe of 10 acres. The cottages in this village are of an excellent class; nearly the whole of them are modern erections, and very roomy. The soil is clay; subsoil, chiefly gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, peas and turnips. The parish contains 2,109 acres; rateable value, £3,379; the population in 1881 was 459.

DEAN is a village and parish, divided into Nether and Upper Dean, 14 miles north from Bedford, 6 south-east from Higham Ferrers and 4 west from Kimbolton, in the hundred of Stoddon, union of St. Neots, county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Risely, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, situated on the borders of Northamptonshire and Hants. The church of All Saints, situated in Upper Dean, is a building of mixed styles, chiefly Decorated and Perpendicular, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, aisles, south porch and a Decorated western tower, with short octagonal spire relieved by two tiers of small dormers, containing 4 bells and a clock; the chancel, aisles, clerestory and roof are Perpendicular, the chancel arch is Early English, the nave arches Decorated; the roof, a fine open one, has very richly carved bosses and figures of angels, and the wall plates are ornamented with foliage and shields; in the north aisle is a cinquefoiled sepulchral recess and a hagioscope; and in the south porch a holy water stoup; in the south aisle is a piscina, and an altar-tomb with brass to Sir Thomas Parker, prebendary of the collegiate church of St. Mary's, in Shrewsbury, and rector of Dean, who died in 1501; there is also a monument to Francis Dillingham, rector here, and one of the translators of the Bible, dated 1593; and a record of Joseph Neales' educational endowment, left in 1702. The register dates from the year 1566. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £250 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, and held since 1861 by the Rev. Charles Spooner M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford; the Rev. Addeley Bernard Howard M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge, is curate in charge. John William Rawson-Ackroyd esq. is the lay rector. There is a Wesleyan chapel at Nether Dean, erected in 1846, and a Congregational chapel at Upper Dean, built at the sole cost of William Ackroyd esq. in 1863.

DUNSTABLE.

DUNSTABLE is a municipal borough and considerable market town and polling place for the county, on the border of Bedfordshire, in the hundred of Manshead, union and county court district of Luton, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, upon the old road from London to Chester and Holyhead, 33 miles from London, 5 west from Luton, 7 east from Leighton Buzzard and 19 south from Bedford; a branch of the London and North-Western railway from Leighton Buzzard runs to this town; the Great Northern Railway Company's branch from Hatfield, via Luton, terminates here; it is a town of great antiquity and was a British settlement prior to the invasion of the Romans, by whom it was called Forum Diance. Henry I. kept the town in his own hands until 1131, when he granted it to the newly founded priory, where he more than once kept Christmas, as did also King Stephen in 1137; King John was here in 1215; Henry III. in 1247, 1265 and 1267, on which last occasion he was accompanied by Richard King of Germany; Edward I. visited the town in 1275 and the following year; in 1341 came Edward III. and his Queen; in 1457, Henry VI. and Queen Margaret; and in 1572 Queen Elizabeth was entertained here with pageants. The town is intersected by three principal thoroughfares, High street, Church street and West street, formerly the Watling Street and Icknield Street of the Romans. The date of the charter of incorporation is December 8th, 1864; the corporation consists of a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors, who also constitute the Urban Sanitary Authority. The borough has a commission of the peace.

Henry I. in or subsequently to the year 1131, established here a priory of Black Canons dedicated to St. Peter; after its surrender, c. 1534, the greater part of the buildings were pulled down; and the site was granted, 1 Mary (1553), to Sir Leonard Chamberlayne. The portion which remains consists of part of the nave and west front of the conventual church, and now forms the parish church of St. Peter; which consists of clerestoried nave and aisles, a length of about 120 feet, and an embattled tower with a bold octagonal turret rising above it, at the north-west angle, and containing 8 bells; the exterior is chiefly Norman, and on each side of the nave are arcades of six circular arches; the oak roof is entirely new, and is finely carved with knots of flowers; the beams supported by figures of angels; the south aisle has been restored with a groined Norman roof; the north aisle is Perpendicular and was restored in 1876; the west end of the interior exhibits a beautiful stone screen of four arches of the Early English period, but the east end is a plain wall, possibly built when the other portions of the priory were demolished, the two easternmost arches on either side forming the present choir; the west front is one of two principal stages, flanked on the north by the staircase turret of the tower, which is supported by massive buttresses, relieved by Early English niches, once filled with statues of which there are still some remains; on the south side is a smaller embattled turret, with buttresses of equal size; the lower stage has a very fine Norman arch of four orders, with as many columns on either side, the moldings being richly carved; the doorway itself is blocked, and filled with a smaller entrance of Perpendicular work, above which are three niches; the lesser or northern entrance, beneath the tower, is an elegant Early English arch, recessed in five orders; between these is another Early English arch, enclosing a portion of a Norman arcade; the next portion of the first stage is filled as far as the great Norman arch, with an Early English arcade, the arches of which retain pedestals: the second stage displays a lofty open arcade of the same period, leading to the tower, two of the openings over the great entrance being larger than the rest and rising to the parapet: the unequal surface thus created is filled with a small blind arcade, and the whole is finished with battlements; the cominging of Norman and Early English work on this front is very remarkable, and the character of the Norman ornament, though much mutilated, almost matchless: in the Lady Chapel of this church, Archbishop Cranmer, on May 23, 1533, publicly pronounced the divorce of Queen Katherine; over the communion table is a large and handsome painting of The Lord's Supper, by Sir James Thornhill; this and the plate and rich pulpit cloth were presented by two sisters in the year 1722: in the south wall of the nave is a flat arched recess, richly feathered, and enclosing the recumbent effigy of an ecclesiastic, fully vested, with the head resting on cushions, and the hands together: a large slab in the nave contains brass effigies in shrouds, of Henry Fayrey, 1516, and Agnes his wife; below is an inscription and figures of 9 children, partly missing, as well as the circular brasses at the angles: there are other brasses to Laurence Pygot, 1450, and Alice his wife; John Pedder, 1563, and his wives Margaret, Matilda and Agnes; John Blunt, 1502, and his wife Elizabeth, and 15 children; Richard Pynfold 1516, and his wife Margaret, and 4 sons; Robert Alee, 1518, and his wife Elizabeth; Nicholas Purvey, 1521, and his wives Elizabeth and Alys, and children; Richard Fynche, 1640; Thomas Fynche, 1586, Elizabeth Fynche, 1607; and others to civilians, 1460 and 1520: the church was thoroughly restored during the year 1871, under the direction of a committee, at a total cost of £12,000, the south aisle being rebuilt, the whole of the nave walls repaired, and a new roof fixed, the interior renovated, and the open arcade of the west front renewed. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £115, gross yearly value £560, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1833 by the Rev. John Heyrick Macaulay M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Here are Baptist, Congregational, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodist Chapels and a Meeting room for the Brethren. A Cemetery of 10 acres, situated in West street, was laid out in 1863. It has two mortuary chapels, and is under the control of a Burial Board of 12 members. The principal business of the town arises from the manufacture of straw plait and bonnets, in which a great number of females are employed; the manufacture of felt hats has also been introduced; whitening also forms an important branch of trade. On every Wednesday a market is held here for corn, straw plait, cattle and garden produce, and four fairs in the course of the year viz. on Ash Wednesday, the 22nd of May, August the 12th and November the 12th. In 1874 the Old Town Hall was converted into the present building, which comprises Town Hall, Plait Hall and Corn Exchange.

There are six almshouses in West street belonging to Mrs. Ashton's charity, founded in or about the year 1727 by Mrs.

Frances Ashton, for six almshouses being poor widows, and members of the Church of England, each of whom receives yearly £25, together with clothing, three tons of coal and other necessities. Mrs. Ashton also founded a charity for putting out boys as apprentices, and setting them up in trade, amounting to £45 10s. There are six almshouses in High street south, founded in 1736 by Mrs. Jane Cart, for poor widows, members of the Church of England; each occupant has £5 4s. a year, and fuel to the extent of £2, and a further sum of £2 12s. each, at the discretion of the trustees; £5 4s. is also distributed in bread, and there are sums of £20 for preaching a lecture in parish church, £11 3s. 2d. being the dividend on the accumulation, during an old and sitting them up in trade: in Church street are six houses, known as "the Ladies' lodges," for maiden gentlemen in receipt of Blandina Marsh and Mary Lockington's charities. Mrs. Blandina Marsh, by will, dated 25th November, 1730, directed her executors to purchase lands or tenements of the value of £35 yearly for charitable purposes, £5 a year to be distributed by the minister, churchwardens and overseers of Dunstable, among such poor persons of the parish as frequent the service of the Church of England and do not receive alms of the said parish, as her executors and trustees should think fit; also £10 a year for the augmentation of the rectory of Dunstable: small sums weekly are given to the occupants of the almshouses attached to these charities, besides gifts of clothes, fuel, and other necessities annually. The charities given to poor clergymen, and widows and maiden daughters of clergymen in England, over 45 years of age, exceed £1,000 yearly.

Elkanah Settle, of Trinity College, Oxford, a well-known dramatist and political writer, was born here in 1648, and died at the Charterhouse, London, February 12, 1723: a house of Dominican friars was founded here about 1259, but was granted in 1547 to Sir William Herbert; there was also a hospital for lepers, temp. Henry III.

In 1350 the third or smallest of the barrows on Dunstable downs was opened and found to contain horns of deer and bones and teeth of various animals; another contained fragments of a human skeleton; adjoining these tumuli on the north-west is a plateau, which comprises on its north side an ancient camp, called "Maiden Bower," a name conjecturally derived from Magdun-bar, "the fortress on the top of the elevated plain"; this camp forms a nearly circular area of about 9 acres, surrounded by an almost perfect wall of earth, originally much higher. A large number of Roman coins from A.D. 30, and of English coins from Henry I. have been found at different times near the church and in the neighbourhood. Of the cross erected here by Edward I. to mark the spot where the body of Queen Eleanor rested during its transit in 1290, no vestige now exists.

The Queen was formerly lady of the manor, but the corporation have purchased it, and are now lords of the manor. The principal landowners are William Fortham Brown esq. of Felsted, and Alfred Oliver.

The soil is light and chalky. The number of acres is 428; rateable value, £13,684; the population in 1881 was 4,627.

Parish Clerk, John Edmunds, West street.

DUNTON is a parish and village, with the hamlets of MILLOW and NEWTON, 3 miles east from Biggleswade, in the hundred, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The river Rhee separates the parish from Cambridgeshire and Hertfordshire. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone in the Gothic style, consisting of chancel, nave and a tower containing 2 bells: it was rebuilt in 1861, at a cost of £1,600 (£650 of which was given by R. Pryor esq. the owner of Newton farm, and the remainder raised by a rate and subscription); the chancel was restored by the late Earl Brownlow, in 1861. The register dates from the year 1553. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £280 including 50 acres of glebe, in the gift of Earl Brownlow, and held since 1884 by the Rev. John Henry Sandall M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, who resides at Biggleswade.

EATON SOCON is an extensive parish, situated on the borders of Huntingdonshire: the navigable river Ouse, flowing on the east, divides this parish from St. Neots: it is 55 miles from London by road, 11 north-east from Bedford, 10 south-west from Huntingdon and 2½ miles west from St. Neots station: it is in the hundred of Barford, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of Eaton, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is a noble edifice, of the Perpendicular period, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a western embattled tower containing 6 bells and a clock with chimies: the church was restored in 1868, the parishioners and others having subscribed about £2,700 for the work, carried out under the direction of Messrs. Cory and Ferguson, architects, of Carlisle: the roof-loft stairs remain, with some wood screen-work and fragments of stained glass: the font is octagonal and coeval with the church: there are brasses to John Cosgrave and wife, c. 1400: and a female effigy, worn, c. 1450: the communion plate bears date 1609. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £270, gross yearly value £350, including 20 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Edward Horley M.A. rector of Sefton, Lancashire, and held since 1833 by the Rev. Thomas Reginald Horley M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here, the former built 1850. There is a Wesleyan chapel at Honeydon, and at Lower Staplehoe a Gospel Hall. The poor's land of 12 acres produces £52 yearly. Here is a Working Men's Club; and a school class for working men is also held at the Board School once a week during the winter months. Bushmead Priory, surrounded by an extensive park of 80 acres, in which there are the remains of a camp, is the seat of John Morrison, esq.: the priory was founded temp. Henry II. by Hugh Beauchamp, for Canons of the Dominican order, and dedicated to St. Mary: it was valued at from £71 to £81, and was granted 20 Henry VIII. (1537-8), to Sir William Gascoyne: much of the conventual buildings remains, but the front of the mansion is of modern date. Near the church are some mounds of earth where a castle is said to have stood. Frank Day esq. of St. Neots, who is lord of the manor, W. H. Wade-Gery esq. Edward Reynolds esq. J.P. of Paxton Hall, St. Neots, Arthur John Thornhill, esq. M.P. of Diddington Hall, Buckden, Thomas Alexander Edwards Addington esq. of Heulow Grange, Biggleswade, and Miss Fanny Squire are the principal landowners. The soil is a rich loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 7,530 acres, a great part being cultivated by market gardeners: rateable value, £12,617. This parish contains 20 miles of road. The population in 1881 was 2,365, including 144 officers and inmates in St. Neots workhouse.

BROWAY 3 miles west-by-south, BUSHMEAD 2½ west-by-north, and CROSS HALL 1½ north on the road from London, York, are portions of this parish.

DULOE 1½ miles north, EATON FORD 1 north-by-east, HONEYDON 2 west, LOWER STAPLEHOE 2 north-west, UPPER STAPLEHOE 2 north-west and WYBOSTON 1½ south-west are hamlets.

ELSTOW (formerly called Helenstow) is a parish and pleasant village, situated on the road from Bedford to Luton, one mile south from Bedford, in the hundred of Redbornestoke, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of SS. Mary and Helena, anciently attached to the Benedictine Abbey, is chiefly a building of the Norman period, with some portions of Early English date, and consists of a chancel, or choir, with clerestory, lofty clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch, a vaulted chamber on the north-west and a noble detached tower on the north-west with low spire, containing a clock and 5 bells: there are several ancient monuments and two marble mural tablets in memory of the two co-heiresses of the late William Hilliersdon esq. the former owner of the manor, whose ancestors possessed it for many generations: there are brasses to Elizabeth Hervey, the last abbess, and of one of the nuns: the beautiful Early English vaulted room, called the Chapter house, has a slender marble column in the centre: the north porch is an interesting example of Norman work: the font and ceiling are Perpendicular: in 1882 the church was thoroughly restored at the expense of Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P. the patron, under the direction of S. J. Jackson, of Bedford, the cost being upwards of £5,000: a very handsome stained memorial window has recently been placed at the east end of the south aisle to the memory of Bunyan. The register dates from the year 1640. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £70, including 22 acres of glebe, in the gift of Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P. and held since 1857 by the Rev. James Copner M.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, who resides at Newnham road, Bedford. Here is a Congregational chapel. There are two large fairs for cattle held here annually on May 15th and November 5th. On the village green are remains of a stone cross. FELMERSHAM with RADWELL.

FELMERSHAM is a village and parish 2½ miles south-west from Sharnbrook railway station, 7 north-west from Bedford, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The village is situated on the south bank of the Ouse, over which there is a bridge of five arches to Sharnbrook. The church of St. Mary, regarded as the finest village church in the county, is a noble cruciform structure of stone, chiefly in the Early English style, furnishing a most interesting example of that period, and consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, transepts, south porch and a central embattled tower, with turret, containing 5 bells: the western entrance is very fine, and exhibits a richly-moulded west doorway, on either side of which is a panelled arch, enclosing two others: over this is an Early English arcade, and above this a triplet: the clerestory, which is lofty and embattled, is Perpendicular, to which date also belongs the upper part of the tower: the chancel is separated from the nave by an ancient and celebrated oak screen, richly painted, and at one time used as a ringing loft: it is of Perpendicular date, and was erected, as appears by the inscription upon it, by Richard King and Annette his wife: the east and west windows are stained, and there are many other stained windows in this church, some of those in the north aisle containing early fragments: the chancel retains a piscina, but the organ was introduced in 1872 at a cost of £328: the church was restored in 1853-5, at the cost of the late Thomas Abbott Green Esq. and further improvements were made in 1867-9, by the Rev. Richard Rawle M.A. then rector: there are memorials to John Leach, 1687, William Leach, 1735, Rev. H. D. Ward M.A. 19 years rector, 1846; and to the families of Dypa, Randa, Ferth, Aspin and others: in the nave is a monument to Richard Otway, 1621, and in the south aisle a tablet to the Rev. Tho. Orlebar Marsh, vicar of Steventon, 1749-1831, and others of his family. The register dates from 1660; the older ones have been destroyed. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £130 with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Chas. Geo. Dinton M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford: the advowson of the living, with that of Pavenham, was given by King Edward III. in the year 1342, to King's Hall, now Trinity College, Cambridge. The only charity is an allotment of 5a. 11b. in "Rowland-field," made at the time of the enclosure, and the profits are assigned to widows, poor families and the church: £3 from the alms of Trinity College, Cambridge, are usually distributed at Christmas by the steward, Mrs. Tucker, who is lady of the manor, and Trinity College, Cambridge, are the principal landowners. The soil is mixed; the land is chiefly arable; subsoil, limestone and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, oats and root crops. The area is 1,920 acres; rateable value, £5,652; and the population in 1881 was 489.

RADWELL is a large hamlet, about one mile east, near the river Ouse, over which there is a bridge of four arches. The old Hall was taken down in November, 1825. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel, built 1807. The population in 1881 was 200.

GOLDINGTON is a village and parish, pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Ouse, and on the road from Bedford to St. Neots, 2 miles north-east from Bedford Bridge, 10 south-west from St. Neots and 12 north-west from Higgleswade, in the hundred of Barford, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary, situated on high ground, is an edifice of stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, eleve-restored nave, aisles, south transept and porch and a tower containing 4 bells: there is one stained window, a few brasses, and some monuments: in 1859 the church was thoroughly renovated, and in 1876 the chancel was restored and new roofed, at a cost of £145; in 1879 a new organ was introduced at a cost of £170, raised by voluntary subscription. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, title rent-charge £233, net yearly value £147 including 4 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford K.G. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Edward Wilson Cook M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge; the trustees under the will of the late Dr. Bowers, dean of Manchester, are the inappropriators. The Congregationalists (Bunyan Meeting) have a chapel here. In this parish on the banks of the Ouse are still to be seen a portion of the boundary walls of the priory of Newnham; this religious house was founded in 1247, temp. Henry III. by Roise de Beauchamp, and hither were brought some Austin canons from the collegiate church of St. Paul at Bedford; at the Dissolution there were 16 canons, and the revenue was estimated at £293; the priory afterwards fell into private hands and the manor was added to the Honor of Amptphill: the principal portion of the land belongs now to the Duke of Bedford. There are charities amounting to £14 tos. 4d. yearly, which is distributed on St. Thomas's day, in bread and clothing to widows. Goldington Hall, a fine Elizabethan mansion, charmingly situated, is the residence of the Misses Harvey and William Marshall Harvey esq. Goldington Grange, a modern brick house, is the seat of Charles Livius Grimshawe esq. D.L., J.P. About three-quarters of a mile east, on the north side of the river Ouse, is a high conical mound, the only remains of an earthwork called "Risinghoe Castle." HARROLD (formerly called HAREWOLD, or HAREWOOD) is a small market town and parish, near the Bucks border, 4 miles south-west from Sharnbrook railway station, 9 north-west from Bedford, 6 north-east from Olney, 11 north-east from Newport Pagnell and 60 from London, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felthorpeham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The town is situated on the road from Kimbolton to Olney and on the north bank of the river Ouse, which is crossed by a bridge to Chellington. The church of St. Peter is an edifice of stone, in the Transitional, Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel with north chapel, clerestoried nave, aisles and a western tower, with pinnacles and spire, and containing a clock and 5 bells; one chancel belongs to Earl Cowper K.G. the other to George Farrer esq.; the font is circular, supported on four shafts, and there is a niche in the north or manor chapel; the rood screen remains, and the pulpit and prayer desk are both partially constructed of old carved oak: in the chancel is an ancient mural monument, with bust, to Anne, Lady Jolliffe, who founded six almshouses in this town for six aged widows: on the south side of the chancel is an altar tomb to Oliver Boteler esq. 1657; there is also a memorial to Anne, second wife of the distinguished physician, Dr. Richard Mead, inscribed stones to James Boteler, 1690, and Judith his wife, 1712; and other memorials to the Alston, Jolliffe, Gymbon, Fisher and other families: the church plate includes a chalice dated 1699, a paten given by the Hon. Anne Jolliffe in 1728; and a flagon presented by the Hon. Lady Temperance Wolstenholme in 1726; all of silver. The church will seat 400 persons. The register dates from the year 1598. The living is a vicarage, title rent-charge £105, gross yearly value £205, including 40 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Earl Cowper K.G. and held since 1869 by the Rev. John Steel M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. The Congregational chapel was enlarged in 1863, and a mission hall opened in 1876. There are six almshouses for poor widows, founded by the Hon. Mrs. Anne Jolliffe, three of these being erected during her lifetime, and the remainder by her niece, Mrs. Mead, in accordance with her will, dated 4th August, 1723; the inmates each receive one loaf weekly and 10s. yearly for fuel. Mrs. Mead left in 1736 land now producing about £34 yearly for bread and fuel for the poor, and for the repair of the almshouses, and to the vicar, for an afternoon lecture or service in the church. Anthony Clark, by will in 1738, left land, now yielding £3 yearly for fuel. Ann Franklin, by deed in 1738, left land, now producing £6 yearly, for the poor, and the interest of £100 for the minister. An unknown donor in 1761 left £15 the interest for the poor. In the centre of the town, facing the schools, is a small octagonal Market House. Cattle fairs are held in the market on the Tuesday before May 13th, the Tuesday before July 6th, and the Tuesday before the 11th of October.

Lace making is carried on here, also leather dressing. Close to the bridge over the Ouse stands an ancient mansion, called Harrold Hall, the property of Crewe Alston esq. and occupied by his son, Rowland Crewe Alston esq. J.P.; it was enlarged and altered in 1816 by Thomas Alston esq. and about 1730 was the residence of Dr. Mead, above mentioned. In the house are portraits of Dr. Mead, one of his wife by Sir Godfrey Kneller, and also one of George II. when Prince of Wales: the staircase displays some good Jacobean carving and balustered work, and has a stately appearance. An ancient house with gabled wings, erected by Francis Farrer about the end of the sixteenth century, is now converted into cottages, but has the arms of Farrer over one of the fireplaces. Here was formerly a small priory, founded by Sampson le Furte, in the reign of Stephen, for nuns of the Augustinian order, and dedicated to St. Peter. It was valued at £40, and was granted, 35 Henry VIII. (1543-4) to William, Lord Parr, and eventually became the property of the De Greys. On the site of the priory is a farm-house belonging to Mrs. Gambier, of Ware, Herts: the refectory, in modern times used as a barn, was taken down in 1840, but a small Early English doorway remains. Earl Cowper K.G. who is lord of the manor, Mrs. Gambier, Crewe Alston esq. and George Farrer esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay, gravel and rock. The chief crop is wheat. The area is 3,240 acres; rateable value, £4,300; the population in 1881 was 1,024.

HAYNES (or HAWNES) is a parish and village, 4 miles north-east from the Amptill station of the Midland railway and 6 south from Bedford, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Amptill, rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary, rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, and enlarged in 1850 by the late Rev. Lord John Thynne, is now an elegant structure in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north chancel aisle (or mortuary), with vestry beyond, south transept, south porch and an embattled tower: the east window is stained: the church is uniformly seated with oak benches: beneath the south aisle is the vault of the Carteret family. The register dates from the year 1506. The living is an endowed vicarage, gross yearly value from tithe rent-charge £524, net £430 with residence, in the gift of Sir George Robert Osborn bart. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Arthur Edward Danvers Osborn B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are Wesleyan and Baptist chapels here. Francis John Thynne esq. D.L., J.P. and Sir George Robert Osborn bart. D.L. of Chicksands Priory, Biggleswade, are the principal landowners. Haynes Park is the seat of Francis John Thynne esq. D.L., J.P.: the house is a handsome and capacious mansion, standing in a well-wooded park of 800 acres: this estate passed from the hands of the Newdegate family to Sir George Carteret, known in history as the Royalist defender of the island of Jersey against the Parliamentary forces; his heir was created Lord Carteret, from whom the estate has descended in the female line to the present proprietor; it was for some time enjoyed

HEATH AND REACH form a hamlet in the civil parish of Leighton Buzzard, and a separate ecclesiastical parish, 2 miles north from Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Manshead, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, situate on the borders of Bucks. The village is remarkable and picturesque, covering several hills and valleys, with pleasant landscapes stretching away into the distance with beautiful woods and plantations. The church of St. Leonard, rebuilt in the year 1829 (with the exception of the tower), is a plain, modern building in the Gothic style, consisting of chancel and nave, and a low embattled western tower containing 1 bell: the chancel was added, and the whole church newly seated in 1866. The earlier register is included in that of Leighton Buzzard, which dates from 1562: there is a separate register from the year 1813. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £25, net yearly value £350, including 1 acre of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the vicar of Leighton Buzzard, and held since 1803 by the Rev. Joseph Orlando Stallard M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The vicarage house was built in 1852, and enlarged in 1869. There are Baptists, Primitive Methodist

HIGHAM GOBION is a village and parish, 8 miles north from Luton, 6 south-west from Shefford, 7 south-east from Ampthill, 6 south-west from Henlow station on the Midland railway, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Ampthill, rural deanery of Ampthill, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary or St. Margaret is a plain but good example of the Decorated style, erected in 1880, consisting of chancel and nave, and a low embattled modern tower containing 1 bell: in the chancel is a good monument of freestone and black marble, with a Latin inscription, to Dr. S. E. Castell S.T.P. placed by himself in the year 1674, and at the foot a line in Arabic, which has been translated: "Living, here he chose to be buried, in hopes of a better place than this:" there are two other minor memorials and two brasses to the Boteler family, dated 1602 and 1603: there is a Perpendicular rood screen, and the chancel retains sedilia and piscina, also of this date: there was formerly a north aisle, the arcade of which is now built up in the north wall: the church was restored in 1880, at a cost of over £1,700. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £300, gross yearly value £360, including 30 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1857 by the Rev. Wm. Harry Marvin M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford, who is also vicar of Hexton. Higham is supposed at one time to have been a market town and a place of importance, and foundations of buildings are often discovered while using the plough: it derives its additional name from the family of Gobion, who possessed this manor from a very early period, till, in the year 1200, it passed by marriage to the Botelers, in whose possession it continued for many generations, and their arms are still to be seen over the parlour fire-place in the manor house, now a farm. Sir Henry Boteler died in 1608, leaving a son, Sir John; in 1639 William Langley esq. became possessed of this estate, and was in 1641 created a baronet, being described as of Higham Gobion; his son, Sir Ralph, sold the manor in 1657 to Arabella Countess of Kent, from whom it descended to the present proprietor, Earl Cowper K.G., P.C. Ralph de Gobion, Abbot of St. Albans, belonged to this place. The house was the residence of the learned Dr. Stephen Edmund Castell, rector here from 1674 to 1684, prebendary of Canterbury, professor of Arabic at Cambridge University, and author of the "Lexicon Heptaglotton," which occupied him for 17 years, and cost in its production no less than £12,000; he lived here in retirement, until he fell a victim to his intense application to study, which a short time before his death deprived him of his eyesight; many of his MSS. were left to the University of Cambridge, and to the St. John's and Emmanuel College, but 500 copies of the famous Lexicon bequeathed to his niece, who regarded them as lumber, were stowed away in a garret and destroyed by rats. During the last few years several interesting Roman antiquities such as coins, milestones, cinerary urns, and an amphora have been discovered near to the manor house, and are in the possession of Mr. J. Trustram. Higham Bury is the seat of Edward Joseph Jekyll esq. J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl Cowper K.O., P.C. who is lord of the manor, and William Francis Joseph Young esq. of Hexton, William Stewart esq. and Edward Jekyll esq. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. Here are extensive coprolite works. The area is 1,287 acres, chiefly arable; rateable value, £2,200; the population in 1881 was 121.

HOCKLIFFE is a parish and pleasant village, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south from Woburn, and $\frac{3}{4}$ east from Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The village consists of one street, about a mile in length, situate on the Roman Road, Watling Street, one side of the street being in Hockliffe, and part of the other in Chalgrave. The church of St. Nicholas is a late structure in a poor variety of the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and a western embattled tower, containing 4 bells; it was restored, repaired and re-seated and the nave and chancel almost rebuilt in 1861, at the expense of the late rector and parishioners; there is a good decorated niche in the east wall, a piscina in the south wall; and a very fine stained window, placed in 1870, besides two other stained windows: an organ was erected in 1873 by public subscription. The registers date from the year 1620. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £306, gross yearly value £365, including 23 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held, since 1869 by the Rev. Frederick Henry Gray M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. Here are Congregational, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. There was formerly here an hospital, founded before the reign of King John, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The "White Horse" inn, formerly a coaching house, is a very ancient hostelry.

HOLCUT (or HULCOTE) is a parish 2 miles north from Bletchley and Woburn Sands stations of the North Western railway, $\frac{1}{2}$ north from Woburn and 12 south-west from Bedford, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Flete, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Nicholas is a very small but ancient edifice of late Perpendicular date, consisting of chancel and nave, and a low embattled western tower, with pinnacles at the angles and containing 4 bells: there are monuments of the Chernocke family from the time of Henry VIII. to the present day, and these include one, beautifully carved, with effigies and shields of arms, to Robert Chernocke, 1547, and Richard his son, 1615; the remaining monuments include one on the south side of the chancel to Charles Harvey Smith esq. of Aspley House, 1857, and Francis, his wife, and others to the Rev. Edward Hervey, rector, 1796; in the nave is a slab inscribed to William Nichols, esq. 1619: the east window is stained. The

HOUGHTON CONQUEST is a village and parish, 3 miles north from Ampthill, and 5½ south from Bedford, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Ampthill, rural deanery of Haynes, and archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is a spacious and elegant structure, in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, and an embattled tower containing 6 bells: it was repaired in 1845; the stained east window, erected in 1880 by the Very Rev. John Burgon D.D. Dean of Chichester, is a memorial to three benefactors, Eliza Hargrave and Mary and Sarah Windle, 1830: the walls of the aisles bear traces of frescoes, the designs of which are in some parts sufficiently distinct to be distinguished: over the north doorway is a huge painting of St. Christopher, of the fifteenth century: on the north walls of the chancel is a monument of carved alabaster, consisting of a species of framework in which is set the figure of a prelate in the act of exhortation, with book in hand, and partially resting upon a cushion: attached is a partially effaced inscription in Latin to a former rector, who held the living 41 years, and died in 1620; there is also an altar slab to Dame Ann Clearke, 1644; and there are a few mutilated brasses. The register dates from the year 1595. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value, from tithe rent-charge, £800, including 70 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge, and held since 1873 by the Rev. HOUGHTON REGIS is a village and parish, 5 miles west-north-west from Luton, and 1 mile north from Dunstable, in the hundred of Manshead, union and county court district of Luton, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The London and North Western railway has a station at Upper Houghton Regis. The Dunstable (Church street) station of the G. N. railway is also in this parish. The church of St. Michael, formerly All Saints', is an ancient fabric of mixed styles, chiefly Decorated, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave of five bays, aisles, south porch, and a noble embattled western tower with an octagonal battlemented turret at the south-west angle, and containing 6 bells: the chancel is Decorated, and the nave arcades belong to the same period; the clerestory and roof are plain Perpendicular: both nave and aisles are embattled; the Norman font is cylindrical, widening towards the top, and the whole exterior is richly carved in three bands, the lowermost being fluted: the base is cushioned, with cable moulding; there are brasses to John Waleys, vicar, 1400; William Waleys; and Sir William Walley, vicar, 1506; besides several memorial slabs of ancient date: in an arch in the wall of the south aisle is an effigy of Sir John Sewell knight, formerly of this parish: there are also various monuments to members of the Brandreth family. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £350, including about 200 acres of glebe land, with residence, in the gift of Henry Chernocke Gibbs Brandreth esq. and held since 1883 by the Rev. William Faux Lovell M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. There is an iron mission church in connection with St. Michael's, situated in Union street, Upper Houghton: Mr. Henry Balhuce is licensed lay reader. There are Baptist, Primitive Methodist, and Wesleyan chapels at Houghton; also a Wesleyan chapel at Upper Houghton. The only charity is £10 yearly, left by the late Mr. Strange, and restricted to members of the Church of England. A considerable portion of the glebe land is divided into allotment gardens, varying from twenty poles to five acres. Near the Green is Houghton Hall, the seat of Henry Chernocke Gibbs Brandreth, esq. J.P. a spacious brick residence, with extensive pleasure grounds and gardens. The peasantry are principally employed in plating straw, and in agricultural pursuits. H. C. G. Brandreth esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and part owner of the land; the remainder belongs to Mr. Thomas Daniel Cook and others. Henry C. G. Brandreth esq. of Houghton hall, J.P. is the lay proprietor. The soil is chiefly loam and chalk; subsoil, chalk and chalk marl, with a portion clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 4,645 acres; rateable value, £9,703; population in 1881 was 2,406.

Bidwell is about three-quarters of a mile north-west from Houghton Regis church, and about 2½ north from Dunstable. H. C. G. Brandreth esq. J.P. is chief landowner.

Puddlehill (or CHALK HILL), situated on the road to Dunstable, and distant therefrom about a mile and a half north-west, stands on the rise of a hill, surrounded by chalk hills. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The Duke of Bedford K.G. and others are the landowners.

Sewell is 2½ miles north-west from Dunstable, and 3 south-west from Houghton Regis. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford K.G. Mr. John Cook of Great Brauningham, Mr. Joseph Cook, Mr. William Carter and the Dunstable charity.

Thorn is situated in a valley, about 2 miles west from Houghton Regis. Henry C. G. Brandreth esq. J.P. is chief landowner.

HUSBORNE CRAWLEY is a parish about a mile and a half north from Woburn, on the road to Bedford, from which it is 12 miles south-west, one mile south-west from the Ridgmont station of the North Western railway, and 54 miles from London by rail, in the hundred of Redbornstoke, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Fleete, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary Magdalene, situated on an eminence, is an edifice of the Decorated and Perpendicular periods, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, and a fine and lofty embattled western tower containing a good peal of 6 bells: in the church is a monument under a canopy supported by Doric columns, with the effigies of a knight in armour and his lady, and from the shield of arms thereon it appears to commemorate some members of the Thomson family, by whom the manor was held in the seventeenth century. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, tithe-rent charge £165, net yearly value £160, including 5 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford, and held since 1871 by the Rev. EAST HYDE is a village, situated on the borders of Hertfordshire, 3 miles south-east from Luton, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Luton, rural deanery of Luton, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely; it was formed into an ecclesiastical parish in 1843 from Luton civil parish, and consists of portions of the hamlet of East Hyde with CHILTERN GREEN and KINSMAN GREEN, formerly in the parish of Luton. The Great Northern railway, which is appropriated to repairs of the church, and for apprenticing and distribution to the poor: the fuel land produces £35 yearly. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel built in 1867. Crawley House, the residence of Mrs. Orlebar, is pleasantly situated in park-like grounds, and the view from the garden front is very picturesque. The Duke of Bedford, who is lord of the manor, Mrs. Orlebar, and Mr. Morris are the principal landowners. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,565 acres; rateable value, £2,529; the population in 1881 was 479.

KEMPSTON is a large straggling village and parish, crossed by the Midland and North Western Railways, situated on the river Ouse, touching Bedford on the south-west, in the hundred of Redbornstone, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The principal part of the village is 2 miles south-by-west from Bedford station. The church of All Saints, standing near the banks of the river Ouse, about a mile from the largest part of the village, is a building of stone, in the Norman and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, and a western tower of Norman date containing 5 bells, two of which were cast in 1603 and 1619: the roof of the porch, which is stone groined, was opened and cleaned in the year 1838, and an external staircase was built in the year 1837: in repairing the floor of the porch in 1840, a monumental slab, bearing a remarkably formed cross, was discovered, which is now placed outside, against the west wall: three feet below this slab a skeleton was met with, but there was no trace of any coffin: the Decorated east window was restored and filled with stained glass, as a memorial to N. Fitzpatrick M.D. his wife and daughter: the family are interred in a vault by the north wall: the chancel possesses some beautifully carved oak benches, ornamented with poppy-heads, and a handsome bench, the gift of the Rev. H. Clutterbuck, late patron and incumbent: the carved oak reading desk and Perpendicular pulpit were furnished by subscription: there is a Decorated font, supported by four shafts, the sides have canopies, alternately surmounting mutilated figures: there are no monumental remains of interest, except a memorial to the "seven sons" and ten daughters of William Carter, placed here by direction of his wife, Marie, in 1605: two panels from the rood-screen, preserved in the vestry, exhibit very ancient paintings of God presenting Eve to Adam, the Temptation, God Pronouncing the Curse, and the Expulsion from Paradise: there is also an ancient "Book of Homeleaves." The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £6, net yearly value £347, including 192 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of John D. Allcroft esq. of 108 Lancaster gate, London, W. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Albert Whitmarsh, of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. The church of St. John, erected in 1868 at a cost of about £2,400, defrayed by subscriptions and grant, as a chapel of ease to the parish church, is a building of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, and a bell turret containing 1 bell: there are several stained memorial windows. The church is used by the military from the barracks, who attend service on Sundays at 10 a.m. The Brigade Depot Barracks for the Beds and Herts district will be found described under Bedford. There is a Bunyan Meeting and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. A cemetery of 2 acres was formed in 1878, at a cost of £600, with a mortuary chapel, and is under the control of a burial board of 9 members. An account of the Bedford County School, situated in this parish, is given under Bedford: which see. The Grange, the seat of Harry Thornton esq. J.P. Moor Land, the residence of Frederick Stanley Carpenter esq. J.P. and The Hoo, the seat of Robert Orr Campbell esq. which, together with Kempston Bury, the residence of W. G. H. Harter esq. are on the estate of Talbot Gerard Vivian Ames-Lyde, are the landed proprietors. The soil is sandy loam; subsoil, chalk and clay. The chief crops are corn and the usual green crops. The area is 1,936 acres; the population in 1881 was 369.

Barnard esq. and are fine residences, charmingly situated. Whilst digging for gravel in a field adjoining The Grange, many indications of an extensive Saxon burial-ground, including warlike weapons, as well as personal ornaments of various sorts, were found. Near the village is Springfield House, a private establishment for both sexes suffering under mental disease; it is pleasantly situated in its own grounds of about 30 acres. Pillow lace is made in the parish; also bricks and draining pipes. The charity land of 23 acres at Marsh Leys produces £30 yearly, and Sir William Long's of 12 acres at Radwell £30 yearly, the latter sum being for distribution in beef. Here is a large corn mill. Gas works were erected here in 1869 by Mr. E. Ransom, the present proprietor. There are three chief manors: the trustees of the late Rev. Edmund R. Williamson are the lords of the manor of Kempston Daubeney and St. John: Talbot Barnard esq. lord of the manor of Kempston Hastingsbury, and the governors of Christ's Hospital are lords of the manor of Kempston Hardwick. The principal landowners are Christ's Hospital; Talbot Barnard esq. Capt. W. P. Newland, of Kempston; William L. Farrer esq. of Brafeld House, Bucks; Mrs. Tucker, of Pavenham Bury; Harry Thornton esq. J.P. of Kempston Grange; Col. Stuart D.L., J.P. of Tempsford Hall, Sandy; Thomas Mitchell esq. of Box End and Thomas William Swannell esq. The soil is principally clay; subsoil, limestone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas, and dairy produce. The area is 5,168 acres; rateable value, £13,661; the population in 1881 was 3,432, including 378 in the 16th Brigade Depot. The hamlets or "ends" of the parish are sixteen, viz.:—Up End, Gravel End, East End, Hardwicke Bell End, Church End, Green End, Littleworth End, Wood End, West End, Crow End, Bourne End, Thistley Green, Bridge End, Moor End and Box End. The above hamlets vary in distance from half a mile to a mile from the village.

KEYSOE (anciently CAISSOT), situated on the road from Bedford to Kimbolton, is a village and parish 9 miles north from Bedford and 4 south from Kimbolton, in the hundred of Stoddens, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Risely, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is a building of mixed styles, chiefly Decorated and Perpendicular, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave with north aisle, extending to length of chancel, south porch and a massive western tower with crocketed pinnacles and octagonal spire, with three tiers of dormers, and containing a clock and 5 bells: the font is Early English, probably dating from 1200, and has the following inscription, as rendered into modern French, running round the base:

"Trestui qui par ici passerez
Pour l'ame de Ware! priez:
Que Dieu par sa grace
Vraie merci lui fasse: Amen."

There is also an ancient slab, inscribed in Lombardic capitals: "AVBRE: DE: T-YE: GIST: CY: DIEV: DE: SA: ALME: EYT: MERCY," and a coped slab carved with crosses recumbent and roses: there is a piscina on the south side of the chancel and east end of the north aisle; the east window of the chancel has recently (1885) been filled with stained glass representing the Crucifixion, in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. W. Airy M.A. the edifice is now (1885) being restored principally by the laity, assisted by subscriptions. The register dates from the year 1715. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £285, including 150 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the master and fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, who are also the impropriators of the rectory, and held since 1875 by the Rev. John Hill Banham M.A. of that college. The Baptists have three chapels, one at Brook End, one at Keysoe Row, and one at Mill Hill. John Sambrooke Crawley esq. J.P. of Stockwood, Luton, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is 3,503 acres; rateable value, £4,300; population in 1881 was 710.

KNOTTING is a village and parish, situated on the borders of Northamptonshire, 2 miles north from Sharnbrook railway station, 10 north from Bedford, 8 south-west from Kimbolton, and 4½ south-south-east from Higham Ferrers, in the hundred of Stodden, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Margaret is a small structure, in the Norman and Early English styles, with Decorated insertions, consisting of chancel, nave, south chapel, and a small western tower containing a clock and 1 bell. The chancel arch is Norman, with zigzag mouldings; on the parapet of the tower is the date 1615, and a roof beam of the nave is dated 1669. The register dates from about the year 1592. The living is a rectory, consolidated with that of Souldrop, joint gross yearly value £400, with residence, Hine Thos. Thorpe, farmer, Manor ho Robinson William, farmer, The Green Hill farm

LANGFORD is a parish and village, 2 miles south from Biggleswade, 4 north-east from Shefford, 9 north from Hitchin, and 7 north-north-west from Baldock, in the hundred, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Shefford, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, bounded on the west by the river Ivel. The church of St. Andrew is an unpretending but ancient building of stone, consisting of chancel and nave, and a tower containing 3 bells: there are a few ancient monuments: the church was partially restored in 1875, and is now (1884) being reserved in oak: a vestry has been erected in memory of the Rev. H. Addington, late vicar. The register dates from the year 1700. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £270, including 104 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1871 by the Rev. Christopher Cooper Ewbank B.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. There is a Wesleyan chapel here; and there are charities amounting to £14 yearly, for bread and clothing. There are here three manors: the manor of Holme with Langford, of which in the gift of Charles Magniac esq. M.P. and held since 1856 by the Rev. George Digby Newbolt B.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, who resides at Souldrop. Charles Magniac esq. M.P. of Colworth, Bedford, is chief landowner and lord of the manor. The soil is black loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans & peas. LEIGHTON BUZZARD.

LEIGHTON BUZZARD is a parish, union town, head of a county court district, and polling place for the county, 40½ miles from London by railway, 20 south-west from Bedford, 6 south from Woburn, 14 south-west from Ampthill, 8 north-west from Dunstable, 10 from Aylesbury, and 15 from Hemel Hempstead, in the hundred of Manshead, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely; the parish contains the ecclesiastical parishes of Billington, Egginton, Heath and Reach, and Stanbridge, and the market town and township of Leighton Buzzard.

The railway station is situated in the adjoining village of Linslade (Bucks) and is half a mile from the town; the Grand Junction canal passes through Linslade near the river Ouse; the canal and railway give a ready communication both with the metropolis and the northern counties, and a branch railway has been formed to Dunstable, a distance of 7 miles. The adjunct to the name is generally thought to be a corruption of Beadesert, though some have derived it from Bozard, otherwise Basart, the name of an ancient family, one of whom was knight of the shire in the reign of Edward III. Some have conjectured that this is the place called Lygean Burgh, mentioned in the Saxon Chronicles as having been taken in 571 by Cutwulf, brother of the King of Wessex. The town stands near the north-western border of the county, and on the eastern bank of the river Ouse, or Ousel, which here separates the county from Bucks; it consists of one wide and several smaller streets, branching off at the Market place; and is lighted with gas, and contains some fine buildings.

The church of All Saints, formerly collegiate, is a spacious cruciform embattled structure, principally of the Early English period, and consisting of chancel with an ancient vestry on the north, nave, aisles, transepts, north, south and west porches, and a central tower with pinnacles and octagonal spire, containing 8 bells: the windows are nearly all Perpendicular insertions, but some have very good tracery; the chancel retains its stalls, and there is some good screen work, and an eagle lectern of wood, with traces of colour: there is an early font, with circular bulging basin, on a short round columnar base, surrounded by four shafts, the capitals of which are level with the rim of the basin; there are monuments to William Jackman, gent. 1592; Francis Willis, gent. 1646, and his wife Margaret (Saunders), and Catherine, wife of Richard Whitlock, gent. 1649. The register dates from the year 1562, and includes the earlier registers of Billington, Eggington, Heath and Reach, and some part of Stanbridge. The living is a vicarage, tithes rent-charge £300, gross yearly value £350, including 2 acres of glebe, with residence, and formerly in the gift of the prebendary of Leighton Buzzard in Lincoln Cathedral, but the prebendary's interest therein, valued at £193, has been purchased by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the living is now in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and has been held since 1862 by the Rev. Thomas Wallis Richards M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, and surrogate. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners pay £120 towards the stipend of a curate in the parish, and £60 towards stipend of a second curate.

The church of St. Andrew, erected in 1866-7, at a cost of £3,800, and consecrated July 11, 1867, is a building in the Early Decorated style, with some French details, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, vestry, organ chamber, and a tower 110 feet high, with an octagonal belfry, surmounted by 8 perforated gables, terminating in trefoil heads: the church will contain 600 persons; all the sittings are free: it is a chapel of ease, and has an endowment of £6 yearly.

Here are Baptist (two), Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels, and a Meeting House for the Society of Friends.

A Cemetery of 8 acres, situated in Miletree road, was formed in 1882, at a cost of about £3,000, including mortuary chapels of stone and brick, with stained glass windows: it is under the control of a burial board of 9 members.

Here is a charity, founded in 1630 by Edward Wilkes, and further endowed in 1692 by Matthew Wilkes; the income amounting to £340 yearly, derived from land, is expended in placing out as apprentices four boys and four girls every six years, and maintaining almshouses for eight poor widows, each of whom receives 6s. weekly, besides fuel and clothing; this charity is managed by a body of eight Trustees; there are several other charities, the funds of which are distributed in bread to the poor several times in the year.

The Town Hall, situated near the centre of the market place, and rebuilt in 1852, is an ancient structure, adorned at its western entrance, and on the exterior of the south wall with statues: the County Court is held here monthly.

The Corn Exchange, situated in the Corn Market, and erected in 1862, at a cost, including site, of about £7,500, is a building of stone in a modern Italian style, from designs by Messrs. Bellamy and Hardy, of Lincoln: in the centre is an open tower, projecting over the pavement, the lower story of which is arched, and the upper one has carved Caryatides, supporting a deep frieze and bold modillion cornice, over which a beautifully proportioned octangular turret rises to the height of about 85 feet: the assembly room, entered from a spacious landing, is capable of seating 300 to 350 persons, and attached are retiring rooms: the Exchange Hall will seat from 800 to 1,000 persons.

The market is held on Tuesday for the sale of corn, cattle, provisions and other merchandise; there is also a general market for meat, fish and vegetables, on Saturdays. The fairs are generally large (for horses and cattle), and are held on February 5, second Tuesday in April, Whit-Tuesday, July 26, October 24, and the second Tuesday before Christmas Day. The wool fair is held on the first Friday in July, and is one of the largest in the county.

In the Market place is an elegant and well-known cross, in the Perpendicular style, with flat groined arches below, erected in the year 1330: near the top are five niches, containing statues of a bishop, St. John, the Virgin and Child, and others, and the whole terminates in a crocketed spire: the height being about 40 feet: in 1852 it was restored, at a cost of £350.

The Bank of Messrs. Bassett and Company, on the south side of the Market place, erected in 1866, from the designs of Mr. Waterhouse, is a building of Ancaster stone, in the Gothic style.

The new buildings of the Endowed School, founded by Joshua Pulford, situated in Parsonage close, and erected in 1884, from the designs of Mr. Frederick Gotto, of Leighton, at a cost of about £1,700, are of native sandstone with stone dressings, in the Gothic style, and include a master's house.

The Provident Dispensary, situated in North street, was established in 1875; it is managed by a committee, consisting of the officers of the Dispensary, the Clergy and Nonconformist Ministers resident in the Leighton union, the ex-officio and elected Guardians of the Poor, and some others.

The Leighton Horticultural Society holds shows yearly in August and November.

The Gas Works of the Leighton Buzzard Gas and Coke Co. situated on the line from Dunstable to Leighton Buzzard, were built in 1882, at a cost of £6,000, by Messrs. Holdstock and Garside; the whole covers an area of about 3 acres, and includes offices with board room &c.

The inhabitants are employed to some extent in the manufacture of straw plait.

The Working Men's Club and Institute, situated in North street, was erected at the cost of Theodore Harris esq. J.P. of the Cedars, from the designs of Mr. Reed, architect, of London, and has a library of nearly 3,000 volumes, part of which was presented by his Grace the Duke of Bedford &c. There is also a Biblical library of about 1,000 volumes, open to subscribers of 10s. yearly. During the winter season cooked provisions are dispensed to invalids on payment of a small fee. The Institute is supported by its ordinary and honorary members, now (1885) about 600 in number, and by a small endowment.

The Temperance Hall, Lake street, erected in 1845, will seat 480 persons. Meetings are on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock.

At Grove or Grovebury, in the parish of Leighton, there was anciently a priory of nuns, founded about 1169 by Henry II. and colonized from Fontevault, in Normandy; being confiscated during the wars with France, it was eventually granted to the dean and canons of Windsor: there was also here, temp. Henry II. a house of Cistercian monks, subordinate to Woburn Abbey.

The manor belongs to Major Sir Wyndham Edward Hamner bart. D.L. J.P. who holds courts leet and baron in Whitsun week and the last Thursday in October. The principal landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Major Sir W. E. Hamner bart. Edward Lawford esq. Francis Bassett esq. and Mrs. Bushell.

The area of the entire parish is, which is inclusive of Billington, Eggington, Heath and Reach and Stanbridge, 8,990 acres; the area of the township is 1,700 acres; rateable value, £17,819; the population in 1881 was—of the parish 8,278, including 143 officers and inmates in the work-house, and of the township, 5,991.

Parish Clerk, John Drage, Hockliffe street.

LIDLINGTON is a village, parish, and station on the Bedford and Bletchley branch of the London and North Western railway, 55 miles from London, 3 west from Ampthill and 8 south-south-west from Bedford, in the hundred of Redbornestoke, union and county court district of Ampthill, rural deanery of Fleet, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Margaret, prettily situated on a hill, is an edifice of brick and stone, consisting of chancel and nave and a tower containing 2 bells: including the gallery, erected in 1834, there are 391 sittings of which 183 are free: in the churchyard is an elegant marble tomb to Mrs. Wm. Charles Cavendish Bentinck, of Ridgmont, and in the church are two ancient memorial tablets of the Platt family and a stone inscribed to Richard Jones, citizen and grocer of London, 1669: there are some mutilated brasses.

 The register dates prior to the year 1554. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £174, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Frederick Veasey
 M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. There is an endowment given by Thomas Johnson esq. for the education and clothing of six poor boys: a portion of the endowment, amounting to about £40 yearly, is devoted to sundry charitable purposes. There are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in lace making. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley, beans, peas and roots. The soil is sand, gravel and clay. The area is 2,520 acres; rateable value, £4,454; and the population in 1881 was 657.

BORHON EN D, about 1 mile south, is a portion of this parish.

Parish Clerk, Joseph Warwick.

LUTON.

LUTON, called by the Saxons "Lygetune" (A.S. lygean, a common), and in Domes day "Loitoeine," is a municipal borough and market and union town and railway station, head of a county court district, and polling place for the county, 31 miles from London, 19 south from Bedford, 17 from Watford and 9 south-west from Hitchin, in the hundred of Flitt, rural deanery of Caddington, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, situated near the source of the river Lea, from which it is conjectured that its name is a corruption of the word "Leatown," while some maintain that its original appellation was "Lowtown;" it stands completely in a valley, surrounded by hills, which render it beautifully picturesque; it is very clean, well paved and well lighted. The Midland Railway Company have a station here, on their main line from Bedford to St. Pancras, and a branch of the Great Northern to Dunstable passes through, and has a station here. The town has rapidly increased of late years, and was incorporated as a borough by charter on the 26th February, 1876, William Bigg esq. J.P. being the first mayor: it is divided into three wards. The Corporation consists of mayor, six aldermen and eighteen common councillors, who act as the urban sanitary authority. The borough has a commission of the peace. Gas was introduced in 1834, and is supplied by a company. Water is provided also by a company; in 1881 great additions were made to the waterworks, when a new reservoir, holding one million and a quarter gallons, was constructed, which, with the old reservoir, affords sufficient water for three days' consumption, and there is an engine capable in 15 hours of raising 12 million gallons at an elevation of 225 feet above the lowest supply in the town. The parish church of St. Mary is a cruciform building of the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, with some traces of Early English, and consists of chancel, with chapel and vestry, north and south transepts, the latter having an eastern aisle or chapel, clerestoried nave of five bays, north and south porches and a massive western embattled tower of flint and other stones in chequer work, 90 feet in height, with hexagonal turrets at the angles, and a low pyramidal roof with vane; it has a peal of 8 bells, recast in 1775 and 1761, and a good clock: the tower is supported by bold double buttresses of seven stages, enriched in the lower part with canopied niches: the west front has a handsome doorway deeply splayed; the chancel was rebuilt in the time of Edward IV. by John Wheathamstead, twenty-third abbot of St. Albans. Robert, abbot of St. Albans, procured this place for his convent from Robert Waudari, to whom Luton had been given upon the Earl of Gloucester's rebellion: one of the most striking features of the interior is the celebrated and unique "baptistarium" enclosing the font: it consists of a lofty hexagonal canopy of the Decorated period, each side exhibiting a richly crocketed gable filled with tracery and terminating in a finial: between the gables are slender buttresses rising into crocketed pinnacles, and the roof is groined and enriched with allegorical carvings: the lower portion, save the entrance, is surrounded with a gabled arcade: within, there is room for eight persons to stand round the font, which is also arcaded and stands on a clustered shaft: the total height of the structure is about 20 feet, and the diameter 9½ feet: it was formerly painted and gilded, and by tradition is said to have been presented to the church by Queen Anne Boleyn: on the south side of the chancel are four sedilia, or stone seats, richly carved, with cinquefoil ogee arches, separated by pinnacles, and surmounted by a floriated cornice; in the spandrels are the arms of Edward the Confessor, the kingdom of Mercia, the Abbey of St. Albans, King Offa, and Abbot Wheathamstead: above is the abbot's motto, "Valles abundant valles;" on the north side of the chancel, separated from it by a lofty Gothic double arch, divided into two by a slight pier, with clustered columns, and open mullions in the spandrels, is the Wenlock Chapel, which appears, from an inscription now in the British Museum, to have been built by Sir John Wenlock previous to the year 1461: the chapel retains some ancient stained glass, and is divided from the transept by two arches and a finely carved screen of wood: in the chapel is an embattled altar tomb, with the recumbent coloured effigy of a priest, representing William de Wenlock, prebendary of St. Paul's, London, and rector of St. Andrew's, Holborn, 1392, with inscription and shields: under the south arch is an altar tomb with the effigy in brass of a lady, under a canopy, said to commemorate Queen Anne Boleyn, but more probably representing Elizabeth, Lady Wenlock; on the north side of the chapel, beneath arches, are three altar tombs, now despoiled of their brasses. The Hoo Chapel, on the east side of the south transept, was rectorated about 1870 by the late Shaw Leigh esq. of Luton Hoo, and is now separated from the transept by a richly carved oak screen, in which portions of the old roof screen are incorporated; on the south side of the chancel is an arched recess, groined, and on the top of the pediment are figures, carved in stone, of bears and an angel holding an urn or pyx; in the north transept, formerly in the Wenlock Chapel, is a stone, with shield of arms and inscription to Thomas Crawley, of Crawley, 1629; Sir Francis Crawley knt. Judge of the Common Pleas, 1649; and Francis Crawley, baron of the Exchequer, 1682: there are brasses, chiefly retaining their effigies, to John Harber, 1415, and Agnes his wife; Hugh at Spetyll and Alice his wife, c. 1425; John Penthelyn LL.B. vicar, 1443; John Hay, 1455, and wives Anna and Isabella; Edward Shiffeld LL.D. canon of Lincoln and vicar here, 1502; John Ackworth esq. 1512, and Alice and Amy, his wives; John Lamar, 1512, and Elynor his wife, 1505; John Sylam, 1513, and Elizabeth and Joan, his wives; Robert Colshill and Anne his wife, 1524; Roland Stayer, 1558, and Dorothy his wife, 1565; William Herne, vicar, 1574; George Rotherham, 1593, and Elizabeth and Anna, his wives; Lady Penelope Napier, 1658, and some others undated: besides an altar tomb to Thomas Gilbert, 1566: one bearing the rude stone effigy of a priest, conjectured to represent an abbot of St. Albans; an inscribed slab to Michael Knight, gent. 1697; and memorials to the Hon. William Stuart D.D. archbishop of Armagh, and vicar of Luton, 1779-86, and his wife Sophia, last surviving granddaughter of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania; and to

Rev. William McDouall, vicar, 1849; the complete restoration of this church, one of the largest parish churches in England, was begun in 1865, under the direction of the late George Edmund Street esq. R.A. and has cost up to the present time (1885) about £9,000; the refitting of the interior has included the erection of a fine pulpit of alabaster and marble, with mosaic and canopied panels: the whole surface of the east end wall is also now covered with designs in mosaic: and there is a reredos of the same material, with a representation of the "Last Supper" by Salviati, enclosed in a framework of alabaster; the east window and ten others are stained; the entire length of the building is 174 feet; width, 57 feet; transept, 100 feet; there are sittings for 2,500 persons. The register dates from the year 1603. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from tithe rent-charge £900 with 3 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Peaché trustees, and held since 1862 by the Rev. James O'Neill, and surrogate. John Pomfret, the poet, M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge, was born at Luton in 1668, his father being then vicar of this church. He was for some time rector of Maulden, in this county, and died in London in 1703.

Christchurch is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1861. Its extreme dimensions are $\frac{1}{2}$ miles, by 2 miles; the houses in 1883 covered about 400 acres: the population at the census of 1881 was 9,541, and has now increased to 12,000. The church, built in 1856, at a cost of £2,000, raised by voluntary contributions, is a building of red brick with stone dressings, consisting of chancel, south aisle and a low tower, containing 3 bells: a south aisle was added in 1864, at a cost of £1,200; and a new chancel of handsome proportions in 1882, at a further expenditure of £2,250: there are sittings for 850 persons, of which 525 are free. The register dates from 1856. The living is a vicarage of the net yearly nominal value of £305 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1883 by the Rev. Elgood George Punchard D.D. of New Inn Hall, Oxford, who is also a surrogate. A mission church to meet the requirements of the increasing population was built in 1877, at a total cost of £950, with sittings for 300 persons, all of which are free. A separate district for this church, to be called the parish of St. Saviour's, is now (1885) in process of formation under a curate-in-charge: there is as yet no endowment.

St. Matthew's, Hightown, is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1877 from Luton civil parish. The church, a handsome red brick building, was erected in 1876, by voluntary contributions, at a cost of £5,000, from designs by Mr. G. Vials, of London, and Mr. J. R. Brown, of Luton; it is in the style of the thirteenth century, and consists of a chancel, nave, aisles and transepts: it is seated for 900 people; the seats are all free. The register dates from the year 1876. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society, and held by the Rev. William Hind M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. The population in 1881 was 6,133, now (1884) about 8,000.

There are two cemeteries here held by a joint stock company. The general cemetery on the west side of the town was laid out in 1854 by a company, at an estimated cost of £2,600, and covers an area of 8 acres; the lodge and small adjoining chapel were built at a cost of £400; on the east side of the town is a smaller cemetery of about 2½ acres, purchased and laid out in 1854, at a cost of about £700; it has also a small chapel.

Here are three Baptist chapels, one, situated in Park street, was founded in 1686; and Ebenezer (Baptist) Chapel, Hastings street, was built in 1853-4, at a cost of £950, and will seat about 500 persons: the Baptist chapel, Wellington street, built in 1847, at a cost, including site, of about £2,200, is an edifice in a modern Gothic style, with school and lecture rooms attached, and will seat 800 persons; four Wesleyan chapels, one of which, in Chapel street, is a very large and substantial edifice of white brick with Caen stone dressings, in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. W. W. Pocock, of London, erected in 1851-2, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and will seat 1,700 persons; it has a very fine organ erected by subscription, at a cost of £320; Union chapel, Castle street, was built in 1837 and enlarged in 1841 and 1844, at a total cost of £3,000, and will now seat 1,150 persons; it is in the Classic style, and has a recessed portico, supported by columns, the whole façade terminating in a frieze and pediment; a Calvinist chapel; the Primitive Methodist chapel, High town, erected in 1852, is a building of white and grey brick, in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. Holyoak, of Luton, and will seat £500 persons: the total cost, including site, was about £1,220; there is also a Friends' Meeting house, in Castle street, built in 1799, at a cost of £628, and seating about 200 persons; there is a burial ground attached, now closed; a handsome Congregational church, with spire 150 feet high, was erected in 1865.

The Town Hall, situated in George street, and facing the Market place, at the junction of the Bedford and Dunstable roads, is a plain but substantial building in the Italian style, designed and built by John Williams and Son, in 1847, at a cost of £2,200, exclusive of the site; on the ground floor are four rooms: the large upper room, extending over the whole of the lower rooms, serves for all important public meetings and entertainments; it is capable of seating 600 persons.

The Public Library occupies a commanding situation opposite the public offices.

The Corn Exchange, on Market hill, occupying the site of the ancient market house, was built in 1863, and opened Jan. 18, 1869; it is a handsome building of red brick, in the Gothic style, designed by Messrs. Messenger and Grundy, architects, and erected at a cost of about £3,000: it comprises an excellent corn exchange, under which is a vegetable and provision market: the building is surmounted by a tower, containing a clock, presented by Messrs. Sharples, bankers.

A handsome drinking fountain was erected in front of the Corn Exchange in 1875 by public subscription, in memory of the late Col. Lionel Ames D.L. of the Hyde, near this town.

There is a large Court House with cells, situated in Stewart street, built by the county; in the former the petty sessions are held, and it is also used for the County Court business.

The fire brigade was formed in 1844, and in 1846 an engine house was erected in Church street; the brigade, which is maintained by subscription, and managed by a committee, has five good fire engines and a fire escape, presented by the Royal Society for the Protection of Life.

There are good public baths in Waller street, erected in 1872, at a cost of £1,450, containing a swimming bath 100 feet long, besides smaller ones, together with the usual offices.

The Luton Law institution meets at the office of the president, F. C. Scargill esq. in King street, and was established in 1881.

Norton College, situated in the most salubrious district of Luton, adjoining the park, which affords 50 acres of recreation ground, is a modern and well-built educational establishment for the training of boys; the school-rooms, dormitories, dining-hall &c. are lofty and well lighted and ventilated and the sanitary arrangements perfect. The College prepares students for admission to Oxford or Cambridge, and for the examinations of the public offices and learned societies; John Thurnham esq. M.C.P. principal.

Luton is celebrated for the manufacture of straw hats and bonnets, the introduction of which is chiefly due to Mary Queen of Scots: during her expedition through Lorraine she observed that the women and children occupied their time profitably in plaiting straw for hats, and, perceiving the great advantage thus gained, Mary at once conceived a desire to introduce this handicraft among her own poor peasantry; she accordingly engaged a company of Lorraine plaiters, and returned to Scotland, where the first straw manufactory was established: the calamities which subsequently befel Mary deprived her little colony of her royal patronage, still her pupils, by dint of perseverance, struggled through great adversity until her son James was moved in their favour, and transplanted them to this town, and probably placed them under the care of the Napier family, who then held the Luton Hoo estate, and were personal friends of the monarch: shortly afterwards factories were commenced at Dunstable, then the larger place of the two and situated on the main road to Ireland, but the trade ultimately returned here, and this may now be considered the largest straw district in the kingdom; the work of making straw plait is carried on in the villages in the district, and from this plait the finished article is produced in the factories. The manufacturers have large and handsome buildings, and a considerable export trade is carried on to all parts of the world.

The Plait Hall is a large building, intended for the use of plait dealers on Mondays, and was erected in 1868, at a cost of about £2,000, from plans by R. M. Ordish esq. C.E. of London, and opened January 18, 1869; the interior is fitted with moveable stalls, and has an iron-framed roof, covered with zinc and glass and supported upon massive iron columns.

The markets are held every Monday and Saturday, the former for cattle, corn and straw plait, and the latter for provisions. Two annual fairs for cattle are held, on the third Monday in April and the third Monday in October; on the Friday following the third Monday in September there was formerly a statute fair for hiring servants, but it has been recently abolished by order of the Home Secretary.

Here are Hayward Tyler's and Howard's iron and brass foundry, and Brown and Green's iron foundry. "The People's Park," part of which was given by J. S. Crawley esq., is situated at a short distance from the town, and covers an area of 45 acres. It is under the management of a committee of 7 members, elected annually, and six life trustees, elected by the freeholders of the parish of Luton.

The charities amount to about £540 yearly, and the names of the donors are to be found in the church, chief amongst them being the families of Crawley, Rotberam and Napier. There are 12 almshouses for 24 widows, each of whom receives to the value of about 16s. per month.

The Cottage Hospital, situated in High Town road, and founded in 1872, was removed to the new building in the Dunstable road on August, 1882. The structure, now called "The Bute Hospital," occupies a commanding situation by the side of the Union Workhouse; it is well appointed and supported by voluntary contributions, and has, during a period of ten months, received 60 patients. It is managed by a body of seven trustees.

Luton Hoo, the seat of Mrs. John Gerard Leigh, nee Madame de Falbe, wife of the Danish minister, is situated about 2 miles south-east from the town, on an eminence, at the edge of the Bedfordshire downs; it is a very ancient manor, and was held long before the Norman Conquest by the Hoo family, from whence it derives its name, since it appears that Robert de Hoo held the manor in the time of King Cnut, the Dane: it was held by this family till the middle of the fifteenth century, the last male heir being Sir Thomas Hoo knt. who, for signal services in the time of Henry VI. obtained a grant of £40 yearly, and in 1447 was created a baron by the title of Lord Hoo and Hastings, and also made a Knight of the Garter; he died about 1453, leaving three daughters, and this baronetcy consequently became extinct: after passing through several changes, it was bought in 1763 by John Earl of Bute, and was held by the Bute family till 1844, and in 1848 it was purchased of Mr. Ward by the late John Shaw Leigh esq.: the mansion has been altered and added to on several occasions, but it attained its greatest grandeur during the time of John, third Earl of Bute, who bought it in an unfinished state from Robert Napier esq. and employed in its completion and adornment the celebrated architect, Robert Adams: the library was 146 feet long with a ceiling painted by Cipriani, and contained above 30,000 volumes; there was also a splendid chapel, fitted up with exquisitely carved wood work, brought from some dismantled church, which has been beautifully illustrated by Mr. H. Shaw in his history of this chapel: the floor of the chapel was of black and white marble: the whole interior of this grand mansion, with the exception of the library, was destroyed by fire on the 10th November, 1843; by the exertion of several gentlemen most of the paintings, forming one of the finest collections in this country, were preserved: the house was thoroughly restored and redecored by the late John Shaw Leigh esq. and one half of the north wing, which had been in shell only, ever since erected by the Earl of Bute in 1816, has been converted into a private chapel for the household, under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. B.A. of London: the walls are faced with polished alabaster marble and Bath free stone, the architectural ornamentation partaking of a Byzantine character: the mansion is surrounded by a well-wooded park, covering 1,670 acres of land: its preserves are richly stocked with game: adjoining are its fine pleasure grounds, farm, keepers' lodges and farm buildings, erected on a most extensive scale; the grounds were laid out by "Capability Brown." The river Lea flows through the park, forming in its progress two large lakes. Near the wood is Someries, an ancient village and manor, held by the family of Someries before the Conquest. Here, in 1448, John, Lord Wenlock, built a large and sumptuous castellated residence of brick, of great strength, and enclosed it with a wall and moat: the machicolated gateway, flanked by massive polygonal towers, remains, and some portion of the chapel and other buildings.

On the west of the town is the mansion and park called Stockwood, the seat of John Sambrooke Crawley esq. J.P.: the mansion, built of brick, was erected about 1740 by John Crawley esq. at a cost of £60,000: its grounds are richly covered with magnificent oak and chestnut trees: the mansion and park stand on an acclivity, commanding a pleasant view of the surrounding country.

Farley, 1 mile south-west, and in the township, is a very ancient place, and was one of the five manors with its manors and lands which King Offa gave to the abbot of St. Albans in 795.

Nether Crawley was an ancient seat of the family of that name; here lived and died in 1649 Sir Francis Crawley kt. judge of the Common Pleas, and in 1682 his son Francis, a baron of the Exchequer. Haverings, half a mile further, is said to have been their chief residence. Crawley green was formerly the scene of bull baitings.

The principal landed proprietors are Madame de Falbe (who is lady of the manor), John Sambrooke Crawley esq. J.P. of Stockwood, Captain Gerard Vivian Ames-Lyde, of Ayot St. Lawrence, Welwyn, Hertis, and Col. George Sowerby J.P. of Putteridge Park.

The soil is composed of chalk, loam and gravel; the surface is mostly good arable land.

The area of the borough is 2,558 acres; rateable value, £92,482; the population in 1881 was 23,960 in the borough, and 26,140 in the parish, including 224 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

West Hyde is a hamlet, in Luton parish and union, and the hundred of Flitt: it adjoins Luton, the greater part being in the borough; it includes the district of PARK TOWN, formerly known as "Brown Brick." The names will be found under Luton. The area is 2,511 acres; rateable value, £4,737; the population in 1881 was 246.

Leagrave is a hamlet of Luton, 3 miles north-west, in the hundred of Flitt. Near the hamlet is Leagrave Marsh, whence springs the river Lea, which flows through Luton, Wheatthampstead, Hertford and other towns. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel. The Midland Railway Company has a station here on the line from Bedford to St. Pancras. Madame de Falbe is lady of the manor; J. S. Crawley esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area is 1,122 acres; rateable value, £4,790; the population in 1881 was 407.

Limbury-cum-Biscott (Bishupscoate) are hamlets of Luton, 3 miles north-west. Here was formerly a nunnery, founded by Roger, abbot of St. Albans, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity, which, at its dissolution, was valued at £143. Several skeletons have been found in this hamlet. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. The hamlets of Limbury-cum-Biscott and Leagrave were in 1866 formed into the ecclesiastical parish of Holy Trinity, Biscott: the church was built in 1867 at the cost of John Sambrooke Crawley esq. The register dates from the year 1867. The living is a vicarage, endowed in 1867 by John Sambrooke Crawley esq. the patron, with £148 lay rectorial tithes and land for a parsonage: the Ecclesiastical Commissioners give also £50 yearly: net yearly value £164 with spacious residence, and held since 1877 by the Rev. Robert Fisher M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. John Sambrooke Crawley esq. is principal landowner. The population in 1881 was 824.

MARKYATE STREET is a village 4 miles south-east from Dunstable, on the Roman road, Watling street, from London to Birmingham, partly in the hundred of Manshead, county of Bedford, and partly in the hundred of Dacorum, county of Hertford: this place comprises the hamlet of HUMBERSHORE, in Studham parish, and parts of the parishes of CADDINGTON and FLAMSTEAD, in Hertfordshire; and was formed into an Ecclesiastical district out of the above parishes in 1877. The church of St. John the Baptist, situated in the Cell Park, and enlarged by Joseph Howell esq. in 1811, is a small unpretending building, with a western turret containing 1 bell. The living is a vicarage endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in 1877, gross yearly value £300, in the gift of and held since 1847 by the Rev. Francis William Adye M.A. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The endowment of a Grammar school (called Coppins Charity), is now devoted to the education of 20 boys at the Beechwood schools. There are Wesleyan, Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels here. The Markyate Street Institute occupies the old Wesleyan chapel; the premises comprise billiard and reading rooms; it is supported by subscriptions: president, Sir John Gage Saunders Sebright; secretary, Mr. George West. In the centre of the village is a large iron building, erected in 1878, which is used for Church Sunday schools. The straw manufacture has greatly increased of late years. The principal landowners are the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, the Rev. F. W. Adye M.A., J.P. Arthur Macnamara esq. D.L., J.P. of Billington, and Sir John Gage Saunders Sebright bart. J.P. of Beechwood, Herts. The soil is strong loam; subsoil, chalk. The

I., by Alice de Claremont, Countess of Pembroke, and confirmed to them on the refounding of the Order, & 5 Phillp & Mary (1557-8): in 3 Edward VI. (1549) these were granted to John, Earl of Bedford, but were given by Queen Elizabeth to Francis, second Earl of Bedford, who married Margaret, daughter of Sir John St. John of Bletoese, Leland, who was there in 1538, speaks of it as an ancient structure. The Hall, the seat of Lord St. John, was built by Sir William Weston, the last of the priors of the Knights Hospitallers: the front has since been modernised: there are beautiful gardens, with conservatories and hothouses, surrounded by about 400 acres of park and woods, with fine game preserves and a lake: the mansion underwent extensive restoration in 1877. Lord St. John D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 2,574 acres; the population in 1881 was 219. Parish Clerk, James Reynolds.

MILTON ERNEST is a small village and parish, 5 miles north-north-west from Bedford, and 2 north from Oakley railway station, in the hundred of Stodden, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, situated on the east bank of the Ouse. The church of All Saints is an interesting building of stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, a handsome south porch and an embattled tower containing a clock and 5 bells: an elegant iron screen divides the chancel from the nave: there are piscines, and an ancient oak screen: the east window and several others are stained, one being the gift of George Hurst esq. of Bedford, the other of the children of the Rev. C. C. Beatty Pownall, M.A., J.P. late vicar: at the west end of the south aisle is another stained window to the memory of Miss Lucy Starey: there are ancient monuments to the Rolt and Turnor families, one of which is dated 1615: in 1864-5 the church was restored and the chancel rebuilt, at a cost of about £2,000, raised by subscription; and in 1883 a fine organ was introduced, at a cost of £180. The church will seat 207 persons. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £210, including 242 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Charles Turnor esq. J.P. of 115 Westbourne terrace, Hyde Park, W. and held since 1881 by the Rev. Edward Sutton Dodd M.A. of

MORHANGER (or Muggenanger) and CHARLTON, a small hamlet, were formed in 1860 into an ecclesiastical parish situated 6 miles east from Bedford, 2 west from Sandy, and 1 mile south from Blunham station of the Cambridge branch of the London and North Western railway, in the Wixamtree hundred, Biggleswade union and county court district, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. John the Evangelist, consecrated July 31st, 1861, is an elegant building of stone, in the Early Norman style, and consists of apsidal chancel, nave, aisles and a central tower containing 1 bell: it was erected at the expense of the late Mrs. Dawkins, of Morhanger House, as a memorial to her husband, the Rev. E. H. Dawkins, whose remains lie under a splendid monument in the chancel: the chancel windows are stained. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £106, with residence, in the gift of E. H. F. Dawkins esq. and held since 1884 by the Rev Edward Mayo. Morhanger

NORHILL is a village in a very large parish, 3½ miles west-north-west from Biggleswade and 48 from London, in the hundred of Wixamtree, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is a noble and picturesque building of dark red sandstone, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch, with parvise, and a tower containing 5 bells: the stained heraldic glass, formerly in the east window, has been inserted elsewhere, and a new east window is now (1885) in course of erection: at the west end are three memorial windows to the Harvey family: the church retains six ancient stalls, four piscines, and some curious tiles: it was restored in 1862, at a cost of £3000, and in 1882 a memorial pulpit was erected to the parents of the present rector: there are sittings for 700 persons. The registers date from the year 1562, but one only continuous from 1727. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £500, including 321 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Grocers' Company, of London, and held since 1866 by the Rev. Francis Pott M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church of All Saints, Caldecote, a chapel of ease to the parish church, was

St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, and there are six almshouses for aged persons, endowed with 48 acres by Sir E. Turnor, yielding an income of about 3s. per week to each recipient. The Oakley subscription bounds are kept here. Milton Hall, the seat of Alfred Chapman esq. J.P. is a modern stone mansion in the Domestic Gothic style, situated on the eastern bank of the river Ouse and approached from the high road through an avenue of stately elms. Milton House, the seat of James Attenborough esq. is also pleasantly seated on an eminence. Mrs. Burton Alexander, of Pavenham Bury, is lady of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. Pillow lace is made here. The area is 2,070 acres; rateable value, £3,949; the population in 1881 was 421.

House is the seat of Edward Henry Frederick Dawkins esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and the principal landowner; it is a fine mansion, in the Classic style, standing in the centre of a very picturesque and thickly-wooded park; the approaches are lined with some fine elm trees: there is a good collection of pictures here, comprising works by Sir Joshua Reynolds and other artists of note: the area of the estate, which extends into the parish of Northill, is about 2,000 acres; the rivers Ivel and Ouse forming the boundary. The soil is principally gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. Market gardening is here carried on to a great extent. The area is 1,673 acres; rateable value, £3,080; the population in 1881, with Charlton, was 404.

erected at a cost of about £2,100, of which £1,200 was given by Mrs. Arthur Pott, the widow of the late rector, the rest raised by public subscription. There are sittings for 300 persons. The charities for distribution amount to £50 yearly. Ickwell Bury, the seat of Capt. John Edmund Audley Harvey D.L., J.P. is a building of red brick, in the Queen Anne Style: in 1683 the house was greatly enlarged, and indeed almost rebuilt, but additions and alterations have been since made; it contains some handsome carvings and many curious relics of past times. In the wood, about half way between the house and Norhill church, is a very singular and perfect earthwork, either of Roman or British origin, with a high bank thrown up on the east side, where the exterior ground is higher, but the most remarkable feature of these remains is the existence of long pools inside the enceinte; it is surmised that they were used as fish ponds, either by the monks of the college of Norhill or the priory of Ickwell Bury. Capt. Harvey D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, the Rev. Francis Pott M.A. [a rector] and E.G. Taddy esq. and Mr. Dillamore are the principal landowners. The soil is part clay and gravel; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas. Market gardening is here carried on to a great extent. The area of Norhill, with its hamlets, is 4,210 acres; rateable value, £7,251; the population in 1881 was 1,412.

BROOK END 1 mile north-by-east, Budna 1 mile north-west, Lower Caldecote 2 miles east, Upper Caldecote ½ mile south-east, Hatch 1 mile north, Ickwell ½ mile south, and Thorncote ½ mile north are hamlets.

OAKLEY is a village and parish, about 4 miles north-west from Bedford, and 7 north-east from Newport Pagnell, in Stodden hundred, Bedford union and county court district, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford and Ely diocese: the river Ouse bounds the parish on three sides, west, north and south; an ancient stone bridge of five arches connects the parish with Bromham and Stevington: and the Midland railway, which has a station here, passes through the parish on a viaduct of eleven arches. The church of St. Mary is an ancient edifice of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and an embattled tower, containing a clock and 5 bells; under a canopy in the south wall is a mutilated reclining figure; the chancel retains a piscina, and in the churchyard are the remains of a cross. The register dates from the year 1739. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with Bromham, tithe rent-charge £220, joint net yearly value £312, including 19 acres of glebe, in the gift of Eton College, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Charles James Eliso Smith M.A. late fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Bromham. Here is a Primitive Methodist Chapel. The charities are small. Oakley House, the residence of the Marquis of Tavistock M.P., M.A., D.L., J.P. is a modern brick mansion, charmingly situated on the east bank of the river Ouse, and commanding an exquisite view over fine vale of pasture; it is approached from the high road by a carriage drive, and is surrounded by lawns and shrubberies. The village has several times been visited with heavy floods, one in November 1823, rose 6 feet above the roads, and 16 feet above the customary level of the mill pool; another in November 1852, did serious damage both in this and the surrounding villages: portions of the parish lie very low, and consequently if there is any influx of water it is inundated, as was the case in 1876. From the summit of Oakley Hill, an elevated district on the road from Bedford to Sharnbrook, the landscape is extensive and very beautiful. The Duke of Bedford K.G. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Many of the cottages of modern date are of stone, well built and roomy. The manufacture of pillow lace is carried on. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay and rock in some places. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and peas. The area is 1,740 acres; rateable value, £5,401; the population in 1881 was 295.

ODELL (corrupted from WOODHILL) is a village and parish situated on the road from Kimbolton to Olney, and on the north bank of the Ouse, 9 miles north-west from Bedford, one mile north-east from Harrold, 3 miles west-by-south from the Sharnbrook station of the Midland railway and 59 from London, in the hundred of Willey, county court district and union of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints, situated at a considerable elevation above the road, is a building of stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, embattled south porch, with groined roof, and a lofty western embattled tower with pinnacles and containing a clock and 5 bells: there is a rood screen in good preservation, and the rich Jacobean pulpit has an hour stand: the chancel and some other portions of this church were restored in 1867-8 under the direction of Mr. Slater: some very fine old glass has been cleaned and replaced: the chancel retains a piscina and graduated sedilia, and there is a piscina in each of the aisles, the font is octagonal and has traceried panels: in the north aisle are several floriated coffin-lids of the fourteenth century; in the chancel is a monument by Bacon, to Lieut. Thomas Alston, 40th regt. who fell at Monte Video in 1807, and there are many others to this family of earlier date, including Frances, wife of Thomas Alston, 1644, William Alston esq. 1637; Sir Thomas Alston bart. 1678; and Elizabeth, his wife, 1677; Thomas Alston, their son, 1668, Sir Rowland Alston bart. 1697; and Temperance, his wife, 1728; Vere John Alston, rector, 1762; two later baronets, and numerous descendants: the church plate includes a chalice and paten of silver-gilt, presented by William Alston esq. 1637; and a paten given by Dame Temperance Wolstenholme, in 1728. The register dates from the year 1604. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £20, net yearly value £192, including 18 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Crewe Alston esq. and held since 1863 by the Rev. William Cornish Hunt M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Pillow lace is made here. Odell Castle, the property of Crewe Alston esq. and now the residence of George William John Repton esq. M.P. and Lady Jane Repton, is a large and partially untenantable mansion of stone, standing on an eminence immediately above the Ouse, and commanding a fine view of the surrounding country; the pleasure grounds are extensive and tastefully laid out. Crewe Alston esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is cold, gravelly, and PAVENHAM is a pretty village and parish, bounded on the south by the river Ouse, 6 miles north-west from Bedford, and 2½ north from the Oakley station on the Midland railway, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter, situated on rising ground immediately at the back of Pavenham Bury, is a small edifice of stone, of the Early English and Decorated periods, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, continued eastwards to the same length as the chancel, south transept with porch on its western side, vestry in the angle formed by the tower and aisle, and a Decorated western tower with short octagonal broach spire, relieved by two tiers of dormers, and containing 5 bells: the form of the church, widening towards the east, is peculiar, and the transept again widens southward: in the transept are two Decorated canopied niches, and a piscina: the chancel aisle or chapel also has canopied sedilia in the north wall; the church was fitted with fine old wood work about 1843, at the cost of the late Thomas Abbott Green esq. of Pavenham Bury, and the chancel and chapel were restored in 1860, at the expense of Trinity College, Cambridge: there are memorials in the church to J. Franklyn esq. 1748; Lucretia, wife of William Nevill, 1779, and others; here was also buried in 1508, Sir Thomas Hubrham kt. The register dates from the year 1560 and contain entries of the Percy family from 1581 to 1592. The living was formerly annexed to Felmersham, but is now separate; it is a vicarage, gross yearly value £204, with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Burton-Alexander, and held since 1882 by the Rev. John Edward Linnell. There is a

PERTENHALL (formerly PARTENHALL) is a parish and village, situated on the borders of Huntingdonshire, on the road from Bedford to Kimbolton, 11 miles north from Bedford, 2 south-west from Kimbolton, 8 north-west from St. Neots, and 62 from London, in the hundred of Stodden, county court district and union of St. Neots, rural deanery of Risely, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter is a structure in the Transition, Early English and Later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, and a Perpendicular western tower of four stages, with fine octagonal broach spire with dormer lights and containing 3 bells: the chancel is Decorated, and there is a good Perpendicular rood screen with rich tracery, painted and gilt; three Transition arches divide the nave and aisle; and at the east end of the latter is an Early English recess, in which is the recumbent stone effigy of a knight, in mail armour, cross-legged: at the east end of the nave is a sanctus bell turret; on the south wall of the nave is a small marble tablet to various members of the Holt family who lived during the seventeenth century, including Mary, wife of Edward Holt, 1632, and youngest daughter of Sir Oliver Cromwell: in the vestry is a classic mural monument of freestone, with Latin inscription, to Susan (Fisher), wife of Simon Gray, 1685; there are also several modern tablets to the Martyn and King families. The register dates from the year 1582. The living is a rectory, tithes rent-charge £30, net yearly value about £300, including 280 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of S.K. Mozley esq. and held since 1842 by the Rev. William Mudge M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. There is a Moravian chapel, built and endowed in 1827 by the Rev. J. K. Martyn M.A. who resigned the curacy of Pertenhall in 1809 and joined, and was afterwards made a Bishop of the Moravian church; he was the founder of the society in this parish and Kimbolton. The poor's land of 6 acres produces £38 yearly, £10 of which is applied to education and £23 distributed in coals and bread. Tebb's charity of £99s yearly, founded by deed in 1834, is for bread, which is distributed on St. Thomas's Day. The ancient manor house of Pertenhall, situated near the church on the site of a former moated mansion belonging to the Knights Templars, and now the property of Edward Campion esq. is a large building in the Elizabethan style, with a small central gable, and gabled wings, formerly relieved by tall oriels; there are still three tiers of mullioned windows. It became, in 1588, the property of Bishop Fox, founder of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and was by him presented to that college, in whose possession it remained until purchased in 1877 by its present owner, by whom it has been thoroughly restored; during the work of restoration, portions of no less than 23 human skeletons were found. There are three manors in this parish, viz. Hoo, Pertenhall and Bell's alias Conington's Fee. The lords are John Martyn esq. J.P. Corpus Christi college, Oxford and Mr. William Hollis respectively. The chief landowners are John Martyn esq. J.P. the rector, Mr. William Hollis, Corpus Christi college, Oxford, Mrs. Dorman and Edward Campion esq. The soil is stiff clay and gravel; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is £1,805 acres; rateable value, £2,143; the population in 1881 was 337.

PODINGTON (or PUDINGTON) is a parish and small village, 14 miles north-west from Bedford, and 3 north from Icknesham station, in the hundred of Willey, county court district and union of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. A small brook rises on the confines of the parish, above the village of Hinwick, over which there is a stone (county) bridge of three arches, built by Mr. Orlebar in 1779. The church of the Virgin Mary is a handsome edifice of stone, in the Transitional, Early English, and Later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower of Early English date, with crocketed Perpendicular broach spire containing a clock and 4 bells; the chancel retains an Early English piscina, and in the north wall are four sepulchral arches, two semi-circular and the others pointed, but now blocked with memorials to the families of Payne and Child; the carving of the porch door, Perpendicular, is unusually rich; in the church is a monument to General Livesay, 1717, a descendant of Sir Michael Livesay, the regicide, and there are many memorials to the Orlebar family from 1658; of the Childs from 1647, and the family of Payne from 1624; in the nave is a brass effigy with inscription to John Howard, 1518, and in the church and churchyard are inscribed stones to the Rev. William Bamford, vicar, 1734; and the Rev. Oliver St. John Cooper M.A. vicar, 1801; the porch has been rebuilt and the south aisle re-roofed with new timber and lead, at a cost of about £220; in 1883 the church was again restored, at a cost of £330; the font is circular and the whole exterior surface is covered with zigzag moulding; the church plate includes a chalice, presented by Elizabeth Livesay, in 1707; and there is a black letter Bible, dated 1613; the register dates from the year 1662. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £113, with residence, in the gift of Richard Orlebar esq. and held since 1854 by the Rev. James Geldart M.A. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. POTTESGROVE is a village and parish, 2½ miles south from Woburn, 5 south from Woburn Sands station, on the Bedford and Bletchley branch of the North Western railway, and 6½ north-east from Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Flete, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary a small edifice of the Decorated Period, consists of chancel, nave, south porch, and a western belfry of wood containing 3 bells; the chancel retains a Decorated roof-screen, and on the north-side a sepulchral recess with an obtuse, foliated arch; there are two good two-light Decorated windows on the north and south of the nave with remains of stained glass; the east window and north doorway are Perpendicular. The church was restored in 1861, at a cost of £1,450. The register dates from the year 1663. The living, with that of Battlesden annexed, is a rectory, joint gross yearly value from tithe rent-charge £500, net £400, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late charity, bequeathed in 1844. Hinwick House, the residence of Captain J. Mallet, is a fine rectangular mansion of stone, three storeys in height, with Corinthian pilasters dividing the first two storeys and a balustraded parapet; it dates from 1710, and has fine old gardens and attractive grounds, with fish ponds; the house contains a full-length portrait of Charles I.; the head by Vanduyke; one of Cromwell, and a portrait of William III. by Sir Godfrey Kneller, and many others of the Orlebar family; the staircase is hung with tapestry, and there is a good library, particularly of French and Italian works, and a collection of coins found in the neighbourhood. The old manor house is now a farm. About 1850 a small bronze figure was found in a field called "Belham" near Hinwick, and a Roman funeral urn and graves have been discovered in "Great Close." Hinwick Hall, occupied by Captain James Richard Creagh Scott, is an earlier structure, and in part of Elizabethan date, containing some valuable pictures, tapestry, coins &c.; there are terraced gardens and pleasure grounds, with a bowling green and a long avenue, adjoining a fine park. Richard Orlebar esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is loam; subsoil, clay, and rock in places. The chief crops are wheat and pasture. Pillow lace is made here; also bricks for building purposes. The area is 2,770 acres; rateable value, £3,500; the population in 1881 was 543.

HINWICK is a hamlet, 1 mile south.

POTTON is an ancient market town, polling station, parish, and station on the Bedford and Cambridge branch of the North Western railway, 4 miles north-east from Biggleswade, 2½ east from the station of the Great Northern railway at Sandy, 11½ east from Bedford, and 48 by road and 44 by rail from London, in the hundred, union, and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The town is pleasantly situated on the borders of Cambridgeshire, in a remarkably picturesque and healthy neighbourhood, and is lighted with gas, is abundantly supplied with springs of excellent water, and is well drained. The church of St. Mary, a building in the Norman style, situated on an eminence a short distance from the town, consists of nave and chancel, and an embattled tower containing 5 bells: there is a Norman font, and remains of the stairs to the roof-loft: there are sittings for 900 persons. The register dates from the year 1614. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value £521, including 253 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Richard Malone M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. A cemetery of 2 acres was formed in 1880, at a cost of £1,000, and has a mortuary chapel used in common by all denominations: it is under the control of a burial board of 7 members. There is a Congregational chapel, built in 1848, and seating 500 persons. The Wesleyan chapel was rebuilt and enlarged in 1850, and will seat nearly 300. There is also a Baptist chapel, with sittings for 400 persons, and a burial ground. Straw plaiting is carried on to some extent. There are also corn mills. The Market House situated in a large open square, has a small turret, with a clock and four dials, presented to the town by Lord Torrington. The markets are held every Saturday. The fairs are held in the market place on the third Tuesday in January, "old style," viz. the third Tuesday after the 12th, the last Tuesday in April, Easter Monday and Tuesday, and the Tuesday next preceding the 29th October; there is also a statute fair for hiring servants on the Monday three weeks previous to Old Michaelmas Day, October 11th. Market gardening has developed to a great extent in this neighbourhood, which now supplies the London, Birmingham, and other large markets. Coprolites are found in the parish in considerable quantities, and the workings form a useful source of employment, many thousands of tons being sent away yearly. There is also a manufactory of shoes and leather leggings, and a large business is done wool-stapling and feltmongery. There are agricultural machine and engineering works, which also employ a numerous body of artisans. There is also a high-class school at Brook House, conducted by Charles Ford M.A. The charities for distribution amounts to about £140 yearly, arising from various separate benefactions, and some portion thereof is distributed in bread every Christmas. In 1879 the charities were re-organized under a new scheme, and placed under the control of a body of eight trustees. Samuel Emery Barnes by his will, dated 1881, left £500 for six deserving poor of any religious denomination. The following are the trustees of the Potton charities, the Rev. R. Malone M.A. rector, James Poole Wagstaff esq. Joseph Edwards, William Thomas Emery Judd, and William Smith. There is a Liberal Working Men's Association here, holding its meetings at the 'George and Dragon,' King Street. There is an excellent Volunteer Fire Brigade of 15 members. The old Manor House, situated on the north side of the town, was demolished in 1870, and replaced by a fine mansion of stone, built and occupied by James Poole Wagstaff esq. J.P., F.S.A., F.R.G.S. Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and Henry and William Smith esqrs. are the principal landowners: 257 acres are possessed by the trustees of the Thaxed charity, which is occupied by Mr. William Darrington, farmer. The soil is chiefly gravel; the chief crops are wheat, oats, barley, and garden produce. The area of the parish is 2,521 acres, of which about 208 are woodland, and the remainder under a cultivation; rateable value, £5,844; the population in 1881 was 2,006.

RIDGMONT (or RIDGMOUNT) is a parish, village and station on the Bedford and Blechley branch of the North Western railway, 54 miles from London, 11½ south-west by road from Bedford, and 23 north-east from Woburn, in the hundred of Redbornestoke, union of Woburn, county court district of Amphill, rural deanery of Fleete, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is an elegant edifice of Cosgrove and Stagden stone, with dressings of Bath stone, in the Decorated style, from designs by the late Sir George Gilbert Scott B.A. and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a fine tower with spire containing 1 bell: the stained east and west windows were the gift of Lady Charles Bentinck: the Decorated octagonal font has a canopy work around the basin, and was brought from the old church, which is now only used for the purposes of burial: the cost of building was defrayed by the Duke of Bedford, and the fitting of the interior by the parishioners, aided by the vicar: the foundation stone was laid by the Duchess of Bedford, April 24, 1854, and the church was consecrated on All Saints' Day, 1855. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £213, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford, and held since 1833 by the Rev. James Milne Hamilton M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. At Segenhoe is the ancient church, now used as a mortuary chapel. There is an elegant Wesleyan chapel, and a large Baptist chapel, with minister's residence attached, built in 1811. The charities amount to about £65 yearly, part for repairs of church, part for National school and remainder for poor. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is part sand and part clay; subsoil, sand and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 2,248 acres; rateable value, £3,446; the population in 1881 was 746.

ROXTON is a village and parish situated on the Great North Road, about 8 miles east-by-north from Bedford, 4½ south-west from St. Neots and about 3 miles north-west from Tempsford station on the Great Northern railway, with the River Ouse on the east; it embraces the hamlets of CHAWSTON and COLESDON, and is in the hundred of Barford, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Eaton, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is an ancient edifice originally Decorated, but much altered in the Perpendicular period, and consists of chancel, nave of three bays and south aisle and an embattled western tower of late Decorated character, containing 4 bells; the chancel had once a chapel or south aisle, the arches of its arcade are built into the wall; the chancel retains a piscina and locker; part of the screen remains, the lower panels being painted and gilt, with figures; on the south side of the chancel is an altar tomb to Roger Hunt, speaker of the Parliament in 1433, and a baron of the Exchequer in 1438; on the north side is a Perpendicular arched recess, with the recumbent effigy of a female on a low slab. The register dates from the year 1634. The living is a vicarage, annexed to that of Great Barford, joint gross yearly value about £450 (including £70 given by Trinity College), in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Carleton Greene M.A. of that college, who resides at Great Barford. Here is a Congregational Chapel. The Rev. Robert Delap, of Monellan, Kelly Gordon, county Donegal, Ireland, who is lord of the manor, and Trinity College, Cambridge, are the principal landowners.

CHAWSTON, formerly CHALVERSTONE, is a hamlet, with an ancient manor house, surrounded by a moat, and was anciently the residence of Roger Hunt, whose tomb is noticed above. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans and market garden produce. The area is 3,000 acres; rateable value, £4,805; the population in 1881 was 551.

SALFORD is a parish and village on the Buckinghamshire border, 2½ miles north-west from Ridgmont and 3 miles west from Woburn Sands stations on the Bedford and Bletchley branch of the North-Western railway, 53½ from London, 12 south-west from Bedford and 5 north from Woburn, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Fleete, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Cyprian, formerly dedicated to St. Mary, and restored in 1867 under the direction of Mr. W. White, is an edifice of interesting character in the Early Decorated style, with traces of eleventh century work, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle and an open belfry of oak, placed outside the church and containing 3 bells: the former tower, a modern brick structure, was removed on the repair of the church. The nave is divided from the aisle by an arcade of four curious piers of Early character: in the south aisle is a piscina, and a flat recessed arch, richly cusped and crocketed, within which, on a low altar-tomb, is the recumbent effigy, cross-legged, of a warrior: there is also a large, coped altar-tomb, the top of which is incised with a cross, a third and very similar tomb, with a flat top, bears thereon also a cross with pendent shield: there is a brass, with effigies, to John Pedlar, 1505, his wife Alice, and 12 children: several Early stone coffins have been found: the register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1558; marriages, 1561. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Holcot, tithe rent-charge £135, joint gross yearly value £349 including 120 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1865 by the Rev. Boteler Chernocke Smith M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford, and rural dean of Fleete, who resides at Holcot. The charities of the joint parishes of Salford and Holcot amount to about £30 yearly and are distributed under a new scheme approved by the Charity Commissioners. All Souls College, Oxford, who are lords of the manor, and C. V. S. Downes esq. who is proprietor of Salford great tithes, are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel and loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas. The area is 900 acres; rateable value, £1,366; the population in 1881 was 221.

SANDY, with BEESTON GREEN, GIRTFORD and STRATFORD.

SANDY is a large and populous village and parish and railway station, on the road from Pottun to Bedford, 3½ miles west from the former, 8½ east from the latter, 43 north from Biggleswade and 44 from London, partly in the hundred of Biggleswade and partly in that of Wixamtree, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The Great Northern Company has a station here on its main line, which is intersected at this point by the Cambridge and Bedford branch of the London and North-Western, affording railway communication with London, the South of England, and Oxford and the Midland Counties, thus adding greatly to the importance of this place, and constituting it a railway centre. The railways give great facility for sending the staple products of the neighbourhood (principally potatoes, beans, onions and cucumbers) to the London markets and the manufacturing districts. The river Ivel flows through this parish. The church of St. Swithin is a cruciform building of native red sandstone, erected in the fourteenth century, and consists of chancel, with aisles, nave, aisles, transepts, and a western tower containing a clock and 5 bells; in the chancel is a marble monument to Capt. Sir William Peel M.N., K.C.B. commander of the Naval Brigade during the Crimean War, who died at Lucknow 27th April, 1858; there are three stained windows, one of which was given by the present rector and the others by the churchwardens: during the restoration a beautiful carving in alabaster was found, with figures of soldiers in chain armour, brightly coloured; the church was restored and enlarged in 1861 at a cost of £3,300, when the transepts and chancel arch were rebuilt and the aisles enlarged. The registers are continuous, and date from the year 1538. The rector has in his possession a curious and ancient document in contracted Latin, having reference to the glebe land. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £204, net yearly value £634, including about 360 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Francis Pym esq. and held since 1858 by the Rev. John Richardson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, and rural dean of Biggleswade. Here are Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The charity lands, of 90 acres, produce £130 yearly, which is in part distributed to the poor in food and clothing, and otherwise applied in putting out apprentices. This place is supposed to have been the Salinae of the Romans, and in the immediate vicinity are the remains of two camps, one of which, called "Caesar's Camp," contains about 30 acres: several remains of Roman pottery and other relics have at different times been discovered during the working of the stone pits, and in making the cuttings for the Great Northern and Bedford and Cambridge railways. The Hasells, the residence of General Pearson C.B. is situated in the centre of a large park, about half a mile from the road to Everton. The Camp, a mansion, situated on an eminence commanding fine views, is in the occupation of Harry Duberly esq. The Lodge (Sandy) is the seat of the Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel M.P., D.L., J.P. Speaker of the House of Commons: it has been recently rebuilt, and is delightfully situated in picturesque and finely-wooded grounds. The mansion called Sandy Place is occupied by John Nathaniel Foster esq. J.P. and D.L. in whose grounds the annual flower show of the Sandy Horticultural Society is held. Woodbury Hall is a mansion, situated in the centre of extensive ornamental grounds at the junction of the counties of Beds, Hunts and Cambridge, the house itself being in the county of Cambridge: it is the residence of John Harvey Astell esq. J.P., D.L. The principal landowners are Francis Pym esq. the Right Hon. A. W. Peel M.P., D.L., J.P. and the rector of Sandy. The land is a rich and fertile soil, chiefly cultivated as market garden ground. The area is 4,010 acres; rateable value, £16,248; and the population in 1881 was 2,662.

Girtford is a hamlet in the parish of Sandy, distant about half a mile west from the village, on the road from Biggleswade to St. Neots. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel. A Church Mission room is about to be erected here by subscription, at an estimated cost of £800.

Beeston Green is a hamlet of Sandy, distant one mile south. The Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1865; there is also a chapel for Independents.

Pillar Box cleared at 5.35 p.m.

Stratford is a hamlet of Sandy, about one mile south.

Parish Clerk, Reuben John Kemp.

SHARNBROOK is a parish and large village, and polling place for the county, and a station on the main line of the Midland railway, 8 miles north-west from Bedford, 10 east from Wellingborough, 55 from London by railway and 59 by road, situate on the bank of the river Ouse, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The Midland railway has a fine bridge of ten arches across the river Ouse at this place. The church of St. Peter is an edifice of stone, chiefly of the Decorated period, with Perpendicular insertions, consisting of chancel with a large north chapel, attached to the Toft estate, nave of three bays, north and south porches, and a western tower with pierced parapet, and octagonal spire relieved by three tiers of dormers, and containing 5 bells: the chancel has a groined piscina, and a seat below the adjoining south window; in the south aisle is another piscina, and in the north chapel are three Early Decorated sedilia and a trefoiled piscina; the font is octagonal and panelled: the east window is a memorial to John Gibbard, 1849, and Mary his wife, 1855, and was erected by their children: there is a brass to William Cobbe kt. 1525, Alys his wife, and Thomas their son; and inscribed stones to Sir William Cobb, 1675; Thomas

Cobb esq. 1662, and Dorothy his wife; Thomas Cobb, 1670; and William Cobb, 1687: in the Toft chapel is a monument to Sir Oliver Boteler kt. with shields of arms, and a genealogical account of his family in 1618: there are other memorials of modern date to the families of Gibbard, Antonie, Magniac and Bullock, the latter including an epitaph of unequalled fulsomeness to John Bullock esq. and Sarah his wife: the church was partially rebuilt and re-roofed in September, 1855, by subscription: the tower and spire were thoroughly restored in 1882, at a cost of £300, and the bells rehung at a cost of £130. The register dates from the year 1596. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £270, including 100 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Charles Magniac esq. and held since 1877 by the Rev. Henry Bliss Wilkinson. There are two Baptist chapels. The Police station, with Sessions House attached, is a handsome building of brick with stone dressings. Colworth House, the seat of Charles Magniac esq. M.P., M.A., J.P. is a handsome stone mansion of three storeys, in the Italian style, erected between 1720-60 by John Antonie esq. chief clerk of the Court of King's Bench; the central portion of the principal front is ornamented with a pediment, and from below extends a spacious balustraded porch, supported on eight coupled columns; the house is surrounded with beautiful pleasure grounds and park: the other mansions in the neighbourhood are—Sharnbrook House, the residence of Leonard Gibbard Stileman-Gibbard esq. M.A., J.P., and Riverside House, the residence of Edward Spencer Watson esq. where there are remains of ancient buildings; the Toft, a small but substantially-built mansion of stone, is the residence of Lewis Jarvis esq. The principal landowners are Charles Magniac esq. M.P. and — Barthelmo esq. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, peas, beans and turnips. Pillow lace is made here. The area is 2,880 acres, including Colworth; rateable value, £7,283; the population in 1881 was 826.

Colworth, formerly extra-parochial, is now a parish, in the hundred of Willey, and union of Bedford, 2 miles north of Sharnbrook station: it consists of one house and farm of 30 acres. The land is the property of Charles Magniac esq. M.P. The area is included with Sharnbrook; the population in 1881 was 4.

SHEFFORD is a market town, a township in Campton parish, and station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, 38½ miles from London, 6½ north-west from Hitchin, 6 south-west from Biggleswade and 9 south-east from Bedford, in the hundred of Clifton, union and county court district of Biggleswade, and the rural deanery of Shefford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The river Ivel, an affluent of the Ouse, runs through the town, and affords water communication with Lynn. The town is situated on the road from Hitchin to Bedford, and is remarkably clean and healthy, having its streets very wide, and well paved and lighted, for which purpose property in houses and land was left in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by Robert Lucas gent. who by his will enfeoffed several of the principal inhabitants to carry his intention into effect: the yearly income of this trust is now

CARRIER TO BEDFORD.—Richard Bayes, wed. & sat

£200. The church of St. Michael, a chapel of ease, is a plain edifice of stone, with an ancient Perpendicular tower at the west end, containing 1 bell; the body of the building was enlarged, restored and newly seated in 1850, by public subscription and will seat 525 persons. There is no independent register except for marriages, for which the church was licensed in 1873: the earlier register is included in that of Campton, which dates from the year 1568. The living is a chapelry annexed to Campton, joint net yearly value £375, in the gift of Sir George Robert Osborn bart. and held since 1870 by the Rev. George Montague Osborn M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. St. Francis's Home is a Catholic orphanage for boys, established by the Very Rev. Canon Collis in 1869; the present buildings were erected from plans by S. J. Nicholl esq. of Kenilsh Town, and will hold 80 boys: there is a suitable playground attached, and a meadow for cricket and football: the seminary of St. Thomas Aquinas now forms part of the work at Shefford; students are trained for the ecclesiastical state to serve in the priesthood in the diocese of Northampton: the new church of St. Francis, which occupies the site of the former church of St. George the Martyr, built about 1780, was opened on July 8, 1834: the building, designed in the Perpendicular style, comprises a nave, with gallery for the boys, porches, baptistery and a sanctuary well raised and containing a superb high altar: two of the windows on the gospel side form a shrine in honour of St. Francis, and also a memorial of the late Bishop of Northampton, Dr. Amherst: on the epistle side is a cloister connecting the presbytery with the sacristy, and having an entrance to the nave for processions: the Lady altar is contained in the angle between this door and the sanctuary: the walls are wainscotted with cedar wood, decorated with "the Stations of the Cross": the large window towards the street is stained: the sanctuary is entered beneath a roof beam: the altar (presented by Mr. Dunn, of Maulden, Beds) is of antique form on alabaster columns, with a representation below of the entombment, painted by Mons. Bouvier: the reredos, 30 feet high, is of stone, marble and alabaster: the church was erected at the sole cost of Mrs. Lyne-Stephens, of Lynton Hall, Thetford, Norfolk. There is an infants' school, built by the Misses Williamson, of Kempston, but used as a Sunday school only. There are Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. The market, held on Friday, is mainly for the sale of straw plait, which is the chief manufacture of the neighbourhood. Gresham's charity, founded in 1855, of the value of £30 yearly, is for distribution in money to six poor widows. In a field adjoining the town a great number of beautiful Roman relics have been found, from which a fine collection was formed by the late Mr. T. Inskip, a resident here, and was purchased for the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. A Roman encampment, about a mile north, at Stanford Bury, has also furnished some of the finest specimens of Roman glass extant. There is a subscription library and reading room. The H Company of Bedfordshire rifle volunteers, numbering about 70 members, has its headquarters here, and there is a fire brigade. The poet Bloomfield lived for some years in this town, where he died, Aug. 19, 1823: he was buried at Campton. John Lewis Haythe esq. J.P., D.L. of Thorpe Hall, Campton, Lincolnshire, is lord of the manor of Shefford-cum-Campton. Potatoes, onions and other vegetables are largely grown here. The area is returned with Campton; rateable value, £2,076; the population in 1881 was 1,070, including 63 in St. Francis Catholic Home.

SHILLINGTON is a village and large parish on the Bedfordshire border, with the hamlets of LOWER STONDON and PRSDON, $\frac{5}{8}$ miles north-west from Hitchin, 13 south-west from Bedford and $\frac{2}{3}$ south-west from Henlow railway station, in the hundreds of Clifton and Flitt, union and county court district of Amptill, rural deanery of Shefford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints, situated on an eminence, and forming a very picturesque landmark for the district, is a large and fine example of the Transitional style which intervened between the Decorated and Perpendicular periods, and consists of chancel and nave, both with clerestory, under a continuous roof, aisles extending to the whole length of the church, and a western tower with plain parapet, rebuilt in 1750, and containing 5 bells: within, the nave and chancel are divided by an arch, and there are corresponding arches across each of the aisles; at the east end of the building rise two square embattled turrets, the wall between, over the east window, being finished with a horizontal cornice displaying the rebuses of Matthew Aschton: beneath the chancel is an Early English crypt with groined vaulting, resting on a central pillar: the interior retains some good wooden screen work, with traces of paintings, and the roof of the north aisle has been similarly decorated; there is a large slab with fine brass effigy in cope and hood of Matthew de Ascheton, canon of York and Lincoln, and rector of "Schutlingdone," who died December 31, 1400-1: there is another with effigy in cope to Thomas Partington, rector, and treasurer of York minster. The register dates from the year 1560. "The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £370, including 4 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Camglebe, with residence, in the gift of Lord St. John, and held since 1866 by the Rev. William Gurden Lee B.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. Mr. William Whitehead, who is lord of the manor, Barnwell Hospital, Lord St. John D.L., J.P. and the Rev. W. G. Lee B.A. rector, are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 896 acres; rateable value, £985; the population in 1881 was 149.

Here is a union chapel, for the use of the Congregationalists and Baptists, and a Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1872; these have large Sunday schools connected with them. The charities consist of the sum of £12 14s. yearly, called "Pils-worth's charity," given by the Clothworkers' Company, and the interest of £300, left by Samuel Whitbread esq. to four poor widows, occupying almshouses situated in the churchyard. Pirton Hall, the property and residence of William Hainscombe esq. was erected by him in 1879 and is a handsome structure of red brick in the Elizabethan style, pleasantly situated upon an eminence, in a meadow of about 20 acres, one mile from Shillington. Mrs. Ayres, who is lady of the manor, Charles Wilshe esq. of the Frythe, Welwyn, and Trinity College, Cambridge, are the principal landowners. Here are coprolite works. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The crops are cereals, of the usual kind. The area is 5,030 acres; rateable value, £8,557; the population in 1881 was 2,226.

LOWER STONDON is 2 miles north-east, near Henlow station. There is a Baptist chapel; the school for this place is at Upper Stondon.

PRSDON is very picturesquely situated 2 miles south, among the range of hills which divides Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire, and fine views of the surrounding counties are obtained from the Beacon Hill. SILSOE is a parish and a very picturesque village, situated on the road from Bedford to Luton, 4 miles south-east from Amptill, in the hundred of Flitt, union and county court district of Amptill, rural deanery of Amptill, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. James is an edifice of local red sandstone, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and an embattled tower containing 2 bells; the east window is stained: the church was rebuilt in 1831, at a cost of £5,000, of which £4,000 was given by the late Earl de Grey, who also endowed the living with £150 yearly: considerable additions and alterations were made in 1884 and the church entirely refloored and re-seated: towards the cost of these repairs £400 was contributed by Earl Cowper, and £100 by the Misses Delme-Radcliffe, the remainder being raised by general subscription. The separate register dates from the year 1846 only; the earlier entries are included in the registers of Flitton. The living is a vicarage, tithes rent-charge £150, gross yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of the Earl Cowper K.O. and held since 1881 by the Rev. Joseph Hargrove M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. West Park, the seat of Earl Cowper K.O. is a finely timbered domain, stocked with deer, which range over nearly 500 acres of good pasture land: the stately mansion, erected by the late Earl de Grey, is in the Italian style, and is surrounded by pleasure grounds with ornamental waters, of 100 acres, which were originally laid out by Lancelot (better known as "Capability")

SOULDREOP is a parish and village on the borders of Northamptonshire, 10 miles north-west from Bedford, 2 north-west from Sharnbrook station on the Midland railway, 6 south from Highams Ferrers and 60 from London, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints, rebuilt, with the exception of the tower and spire, in 1861, from designs by Mr. Clutton, architect, is a very handsome building, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, with vestry, north transept, nave, north aisle, south porch and a western tower with octagonal broach spire, relieved by two tiers of dormers, and containing 3 bells: the chancel has a stone groined roof, and the capitals of the chancel arch and other features display some splendid specimens of stone carving, by Earp, of London: the windows in the chancel are stained: one ancient Latin inscription to John Hanger, 1608, has been preserved: there is another to William Robinson, 1701: the old church partly fell at Christmas, 1795, and in 1800 the structure was rebuilt in a plain way from plans by Mr. Robert Salmon, at the cost of the Duke of Bedford, the chancel principally at the expense of the rector. The register dates from the year 1670. The living is a rectory, consolidated with Knotting, joint gross yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of Charles Magniac esq. M.P. and held since 1856 by the Rev. George Digby Newbolt B.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, and rural dean of Felmersham. Pillow lace is made here. Charles Magniac esq. SOUTHILL is a considerable village and parish, with the hamlets of Broom, IRELAND and STANFORD, and a station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, 8 miles south-east from Bedford, 3½ south-south-west from Biggleswade, 8 north from Hitchin and 2½ north from Bedford, in the hundred of Wixamtree, Biggleswade union and county court district, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is an ancient structure of brick, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave and a tower containing 6 bells and a clock: there are several monuments of the Byng family, among which are those of the celebrated Admiral Sir George Byng, first Viscount Torrington, 1733, and of his son, the unfortunate Vice-Admiral the Hon. John Byng, who for an error in judgment, while in command, was shot at Portsmouth, 14 March, 1757: there are sittings for 400 persons. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £10, gross yearly value £240, including 50 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P. and held since 1877 by the Rev. Chas. Jas. Lambard B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel here, built 1805. The charities, amounting to £40 yearly, were left by John Maynard of this parish, and are given away in coals to the poor, generally before Christmas. Southill Park is the seat of Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P., D.L., J.P.: the house is a stately mansion of stone, and the park, which is thickly studded with fine oak, elm, cedar, spruce and other trees, is 807 acres in extent and contains a sheet of water: the gardens and

STAGSDEN (formerly called STACHEDENE and STAGSDEN) is a pleasant village and parish 4½ miles west-south-west from Bedford and 8 north-east from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred of Willey, Bedford union and county court district, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, situated on the main road from Bedford to Newport Pagnell and Wolverton, and is one of the villages in the extreme north-west part of the county, on the borders of Bucks. The church of St. Leonard, situated on an eminence near the centre of the village, is an ancient edifice of stone, erected in the Transitional period between the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, and consists of chancel, nave of five bays, with clerestory, north transept or chapel, south aisle, porch and an embattled tower containing a clock and 5 bells; on the north side of the church are the remains of a rood-loft and an arched recess; in the south aisles are several niches: the chancel retains a piscina: there is a monumental brass to the Cooke family, dating from 1617. The register dates from the year 1670. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £270, gross yearly value £300, including 5 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Dynevor family, and held since 1879 by the Rev. William Hipsley Jackson B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a Congregational chapel here, and a freehold of about 70 acres of land, belonging to the Bunyan Meeting, Bedford. Pillow lace is made here. The village boasts of a chalybeate well, but it has long been in a neglected condition. In 1873 nearly the whole of the land in this parish was purchased by the Crown, which also owns the manorial rights. The soil is strong, stiff and cold clay; subsoil, blue clay and chalk-stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, peas and beans. The area is 3,386 acres; rateable value, £3,508; the population in 1881 was 548.

STEVENING (or Stevenon) is a parish and village, very pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ouse, 5 miles north-west from Bedford and 2 west from Oakley railway station, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is an ancient edifice of stone, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel with lateral chapels, now ruinous, nave with clerestory, porch and a tower containing 5 bells: in the pavement of the nave is a brass with effigy of a knight in armour: in the chancel are two small figures representing the drinking of ale, customary in this church at one period: the chancel retains a piscina and hagioscope, and inside the porch is a stoup: on the north side of the church is a lepers' or low side window: the church was restored in 1871-2, at a cost of about £2,000, chiefly defrayed by the Duke of Bedford K.G. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £200, including 94 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford K.G. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Thomas William Gibson M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. Here is a Baptist meeting-house, established during the time of the celebrated John Bunyan, and also a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1863. A few yards eastward of the church is a spring of water called "the Holy Well," never known to have been frozen or dry. In the centre of the village is an ancient cross, with a modern capital; the flight of steps has been built up with stone and enclosed with iron work. There is a public reading room and free library supported by Mrs. Alexander, of Pavenham Bury. There are almshouses for "five poor persons" who receive 2s. or 2s. 6d. each per week; the income is derived from 25 acres of land at Pavenham. Of the castle erected here, in the time of King John, there are now no traces; but various ruins exist in the vicinity of this village. Pillow lace is largely made here, and rush mat making is also carried on. A little south of the church was the large and ancient manor house, which once served as a hospitium for the invalids and pilgrims frequenting the Holy Well, and subsequently was used as a farm-house; on its site a capacious farm-house has been erected by the Duke of Bedford K.G. Crewe Alston esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford K.G. Charles Robinson, of the Manor Farm, Charles Turney, Mrs. Alexander, John Keech and William Francis Higgins, esq. of Turvey. The soil is clay; subsoil, limestone and marl. The chief crops are wheat and beans. The area is 1,800 acres; rateable value, £2,568; the population in 1881 was 624.

STOTFOLD is a village and parish on the Hertfordshire border of the county, 2 miles west from the Arlsey station, 2½ north-west from Baldock, 5½ south-south-east from Biggleswade and 7 north from Hitchin, in the hundred of Clifton, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Bedford, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, on the road from Bedford to Baldock. The Great North Road from London to York here forms the boundary between this county and Herts. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone, chiefly of the late Decorated period, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south and modern north porch and a western embattled tower containing 3 bells: the nave is Early English, and the capitals of the piers have grotesque heads: there were formerly some curious frescoes of St. George and the dragon, St. Michael weighing souls &c.: these are now covered with plaster, but a print, with description, is given in the Gentleman's Magazine for November, 1827: the font is of Perpendicular date, octagonal and panelled. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £242, with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1860 by the Rev. Arthur Ayres Ellis M.A. late fellow of that college. There is a Calvinistic Baptist chapel built in 1841, a Baptist chapel built in 1857, and a Wesleyan chapel erected in 1869: the latter is a fine large building. There are seven almshouses, built in 1842, for the Church poor, and other charities to the amount of about £80 yearly, endowed by Henry Octavius Roe esq. in the year 1850. The river Rhee runs through the parish and assists in working two large corn mills. Brick and tile making are carried on: coprolites are dug, and many of the inhabitants are employed in the straw plait trade: here is also a brewery. The Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Herts, Beds and Hunts, situated in this parish, within an area of 253 acres, of which 230 are cultivated, is an extensive and elegant building and standing upon ground 222 feet

TEMPSFORD is a village, parish, and station on the Great Northern railway, 5 miles south from St. Neots, 9 north-east from Bedford and 6 north from Biggleswade, in the hundred, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely, situated on the great North Road, and near the junction of the rivers Ouse and Ivel: it was formerly occupied by the Danes, who were expelled by the Saxons about the year 921. Robert De Carun, in the year 1129, gave the church to the Prior and Convent of St. Neots, on account of his grandson Anselm taking the monastic habit there. The Danes visited Tempsford in 1010, it then being a walled town; and it is surmised that the first church was destroyed at that time: frescoes are known to have once existed upon the walls of the present church, representing this Danish irruption. The present church of St. Peter is an ancient building of stone, chiefly in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a tower containing a clock and 5 bells; the interior has the following curious inscription—"Will Sanderson, Gent., and Thomas Staplo, yeo., overseers of this new work, and patentees of his Majesty's letters patent granted for the same, May 12th, 1621:" there is an inscribed stone to the Very Rev. Dr. Knightley Chetwode, Dean of Gloucester, one to his wife, and a piscina; by the liberality of Colonel William Stuart and the present rector, the whole edifice underwent thorough restoration in 1874, at a cost of upwards of £2,000; the rectory was also rebuilt, and the churchyard enlarged; during the restoration an ancient mural painting, supposed to represent St. Catherine, was discovered on the north wall of the nave, and is still in an excellent state of preservation. There are sittings for 240 persons. The registers date from the year 1600, but much earlier, though nearly illegible records also exist; a continuous list of the rectors of Tempsford, dating from 1128, is in the hands of the present rector. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £320, including 334 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Crown, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Stephen Perring Lampen Ph.D. University of Rostock. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The charities amount to £20 yearly. Tempsford Hall, the property of Colonel William Stuart D.L., J.P. has been rebuilt, and is a mansion of red brick and sandstone, but some portion of the original building still exists: it is situated in the midst of spacious grounds, and surrounded by many noble trees. Colonel Stuart is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is sand and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 2,218 acres; rateable value, £7,167; the population in 1881 was 535.

THURLEIGH is a parish and scattered village 7 miles north from Bedford, 6 south-south-west from Kimbolton and 4 east from the Sharnbrook station on the Midland railway, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Eaton, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter, situated on an eminence, is a fine and ancient building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a central embattled tower of Norman date, containing 5 bells; the chancel and tower are overgrown with ivy: in the chancel is a marble slab to John Harvey or Hervey, the last of the family, who died in 1715: in the nave is a brass to John Harvey, supposed to be of the thirteenth century: the church was thoroughly restored in 1882, at a cost of about £700. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from 236 acres of glebe £222 with residence, in the gift of John Sambrooke Crawley esq. and held since 1839 by the Rev. Benjamin Trapp M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a small chapel here, built in 1827. Two acres of land in this parish and a rent-charge of 40s. yearly, arising from land in the parish of Goldington, are appropriated to the education of the children of the parish. Harvey's charity of £16 yearly, arising from the rent of the 'Red Lion,' is distributed to the poor at Christmas. Near the church are moated earthworks, known as 'Bury Hill.' Jn. Sambrooke Crawley esq. (lay impropriator) J.P. of Stockwood, Luton, William Wade (esq.) and William Thompson esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are cereals; a few beans are grown. The area is 3,480 acres; rateable value, £3,343; the population in 1881 was 603.

the Misses Trevor and the rector: there are three stained memorial windows to members of the family of Charles Tanqueray esq.; a third window commemorates Thomas Batts Tanqueray-Willmoe and Esther Gones Tanqueray-Willmoe, ensign in the Indian Army, and was killed before the Fort of Hydrabad, in October, 1859; in the north aisle the south transept is a rich carved canopy: in the north aisle is a small chapel with piscina: the original pulpit is still in use: in the chancel is a stone slab inscribed to Johnny, wife of Alexander Read, 1629: on the south side of the chancel is a memorial stained window to the Rev. Edward Tanqueray LL.B. 59 years rector of this parish; the east and west windows are also stained: the interior roof of the church is adorned with several figures carved in wood, and placed there by the present rector. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £190, gross yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of the representatives of the late Miss Trevor, and held since 1847 by the Rev. Truman Tanqueray M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. There is a club-room erected in 1858, and used as a reading-room and for entertainments. The representatives of the late Miss Trevor are lords of the manor and principal landowners. Tingrith House is an ancient building, standing in a park of about 120 acres, ornamented by a sheet of water, and at present unoccupied.

TODDINGTON is a large parish and ancient market town, in the hundred of Manshead, union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, about 5 miles south-east from Woburn, 15 south from Bedford and a south-west from the Harlington station of the Midland railway. The town has an ancient appearance and is very irregularly built. The parish is lighted with gas from works which were opened December 21st, 1863. The church of St. George is a noble cruciform structure, chiefly in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, with sacristy of two storeys, clerestoried nave, aisles, transepts, south porch, and a central embattled tower of three stages, with angle turret, and containing a fine peal of 8 bells, cast in 1792, and a sanctus bell, dated 1665: the nave arcades and the lower stage of the tower are Early English; the upper stage, aisles and clerestory, Perpendicular; the north aisle and transept, as well as the vestry, have a singular cornice, highly enriched with grotesque figures of human beings, beasts and birds: the roof displays elaborately carved figures of angels holding shields, wreaths, and other ornaments: in the south transept, under an arched recess in the south wall are two tombs with recumbent effigies of marble, the westernmost being that of a knight in armour, with surcoat of his arms, and on either side an angel holding across his breast an inscribed scroll: the figure represents Thomas Peyvre, 1429, a descendant of Paulinus Peyvre, who held the manor in the reign of Henry III.; the other effigy is that of a female in mantle and rich jewelled wreath, representing Margaret (Loring), wife of the preceding Thomas: the inscriptions, now lost, are given in Cott. MSS. Cleop. c. iii. f. 8, Brit. Mus.; against the west wall is the cross-legged effigy of a knight with the arms of Peyvre on his surcoat, supposed to represent Nicholas Peyvre, 1361-2, father of the above; another tomb, the sides of which are adorned with shields of arms, is inscribed to Anne (Broughton), 1561, wife of Sir Thomas Cheyne kt. K.G. lord warden of the Cinque Ports; the next is an alabaster tomb, now much mutilated and partly of brick, with an effigy in rich armour of Henry Cheyne, baron Cheyne of Toddington, 1587, son of the foregoing; and one more tomb bears the effigy of his wife Jane (Wentworth), 1614, attired in wimple and mantle: in the north transept are several tombs of the Wentworth family, who held the manor in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, including one erected at a cost of £2,000, to Henrietta Maria, baroness Wentworth, 1686, daughter and sole heir of Thomas, Lord Wentworth, and Philadelphia (Cary) his wife, both of whom, as well as Thomas, earl of Cleveland, are interred beneath; on the opposite side is a large canopied mural monument to Maria, 1632, eldest daughter of Thomas, earl of Cleveland, and Ann (Crofts), his wife; here also are buried William, 1623, and Charles, 1622, sons of the same peer; in the chancel is a monument to Gyles Bruse esq. 1595, youngest son of Sir John Bruse, of Great Wenham, Suffolk kt. placed by his sister Alice; his tomb, with inscription, being under the chancel arch; there are also brasses to Thomas Claver, rector, 1654; and Thomas Pennington, gent. 1643, and some fragments: King James I. attended divine service in this church on the 24th July, 1603: a portion of the fabric has recently been restored, at a cost of about £3,000, and in the course of the work several mural paintings were discovered on both sides of the nave

The soil is marl, clay and sand: subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and peas. The area is about 1,050 acres, rateable value, £1,529; the population in 1881 was 167.

and over the north door; one memorial window has been inserted; and a clock with chimes was placed in the tower by the Rev. John Clegg, late rector. The register dates from 1520, and is in a fair state of preservation; the 4th vol. contains a large and interesting collection of Briefs from 1653 to 1810. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £1,000, including 200 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Daniel Sykes esq. of Kirk Ella, Hull, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Charles Edward Haslam M.A. J.P. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Abraham Hartwell, rector here, according to 1509s, in the seventeenth century, was a learned writer of that period, and bequeathed his library for the use of his successors. Here are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists: the Wesleyans have a day and Sunday schools here. The straw plat manufacture is carried on here to some extent. There was formerly an hospital at Toddington, founded 21 Hen. VI. (1442-3) by John Broughton, for a warden and three poor men, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist; the hospital was dissolved by Sir Thomas Cheney, and was subsequently seized by the Crown. The market was originally held on Thursday, but was changed to Saturday by a charter of King Edward II. in 1316. Fairs are held on April 25th, the first Monday in June, November 2nd and December 6th. There is a charity estate, comprising a small farm and house, which produces about £80 yearly, and is administered by trustees; also a charge on Herne farm of £20 a year, which is for three widows. In digging gravel in a field belonging to the late William Harbott esq. in this parish, a number of antiquities, supposed to be Roman, were found, viz. black earthen pots filled with small bones, also spear heads, swords and iron helmets. This place was the seat of Sir Paulinus Peyvre, who was steward of the royal household of Henry III. and erected here a fine manor house: here also resided in the reign of Henry VIII. Sir Thomas Cheney K.G. and his son Sir Henry Cheney kt. afterward Baron Cheney of Toddington; the latter built a magnificent residence here, about half a mile from the church, forming a quadrangle 210 feet on the north and south sides; a portion of this mansion is now occupied by Major William Cooper Cooper J.P. the present lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is marl and clay; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and peas. The area is about 5,300 acres; rateable value, £13,667; the population in 1881 was 2,159.

TOTTENHOE is a village and parish, in the union and county court district of Luton, hundred of Manshead, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely, 2 miles west from the railway station at Dunstable, and 6 south-east from Leighton Buzzard.
 The church of St. Giles is a structure, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and a western embattled tower with turret at the south-east angle, containing 5 bells; the roofs of the nave and aisles display well-carved figures and bosses: there is a brass, with effigy bearing chalice and host, to John Warwekhytt, vicar, 1524; and one to William Michell, a child, 1621. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £170, in the gift of Earl Brownlow, and held since 1866 by the Rev. William Brickwood M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge: the great tithes amount to about £600 yearly, of which Earl Brownlow receives £300 and Trinity College, Cambridge, £135 yearly. In an ancient book of endowments of livings, in the time of Hugh de Wells, Bishop of Lincoln, 1209-35, which is still remaining in the registry of the diocese, mention is made of an endowment in connection with the parish of Tottenhoe, and implying a connection between Tottenhoe and the ancient priory of Dunstable.
 Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. The straw plait business is the principal occupation of the villagers. About a mile and a half from Dunstable, and half a mile westward from Maiden Bower, on a projecting headland of the Chiltern range, are the celebrated earth works called "Tottenhoe Castle;" these consist of a lofty circular mound, with a slight vallum round its base, and a larger one, of an irregular form, at some distance from it:

 it is considered to have been a fortification of the ancient Britons, subsequently occupied by the Saxons, and afterwards converted into a Roman camp: the form of the works indicating British and Roman military construction, and the name British and Saxon occupation. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil and subsoil are chalky: a hard band of the chalk or
 "clunch" near the village is known as Tottenhoe Stone, of which many churches in this district have been constructed. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 2,306 acres; rateable value, £2,304; and the population in 1881 was 707.

TURVEY is a village, parish and a station on the Bedford and Northampton branch of the Midland railway, 7 miles north-west from Bedford, 4 east from Olney and 9 north-east from Newport Pagnell, on the borders of Buckinghamshire, from which it is separated by the river Ouse, in the hundred of Willey, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The streets and principal dwellings are lighted with gas. The church of All Saints is an edifice of stone, chiefly in the Early English style, with traces of Saxon and Norman work with Decorated and Perpendicular additions, and consists of chancel, with sacristy and organ chamber on the north, clerestoried nave of five bays, aisles, vestry on the south side of the tower, south porch, and an embattled western tower, with short pyramidal spire and containing 6 bells: in 1852-4, it was much enlarged and decorated under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott B.A. the cost being defrayed by the late Charles Longuet Higgins esq. lord of the manor, who also presented the very fine organ, at an additional expense of £1,600, which was incorporated with a fine organ which had been the gift of Miss Ann Maria Higgins of Turvey House: the church was reopened and consecrated anew, Oct. 10, 1854, by the Bishop of Ely: the east window and three others in the chancel, are stained: the west window was given by William Bartholomew Higgins esq. of Piets' Hill: at the east end of the south aisle was a chapel of the Virgin; here there still remain three Early English sedilia and a piscina: an arched sepulchral recess in the same chapel contains a fresco, representing the two Marys at the foot of the cross, which has been glazed for its better preservation: the church was repewed in 1846, but has now been completely refitted in oak, from the architect's designs: the carved oak pulpit being the gift of the Rev. W. B. Russell, a former rector, and the lectern, also of oak, a present from Miss Gorst, of Preston, Lancashire: the font consists of a square-shaped basin, with sides carved in panels, and a massive rim adorned with volute ornaments, and resting on four shafts: it is probably Norman, though three of the panels appear to have been chiselled out at a later period: westward of the south door is a stoup projecting from a recess: two candelabra were given in 1872 by Miss Baker, the then lessee of Turvey House: the communion plate of silver gilt was presented by Margaret, daughter of the Hon. Henry Mordaunt, in 1788; the north chapel, now converted into an organ chamber, was the burial place of the Mordaunt family, a number of whom are interred in the vaults beneath, including John, Earl of Peterborough, Marshal-General of the Parliamentary forces, who died in 1643, and Charles, Earl of Peterborough and Monmouth K.G. General of the Marines, who died at Lisbon in 1735: in the chapel of St. Mary is an altar-tomb of Purbeck marble, with recumbent effigies, to Sir John Mordaunt kt. who died 18th September, 1506, and Edith (Latimer), his wife: the effigy of Sir John is in armour, over which is a robe, with the collar of S.S.; that of his lady is in a long gown and coif: the inscription, now lost, is given in Halstead, and quoted in Harvey's "History of Willey Hundred;" the sides of the tomb are ornamented with traceried panels, enclosing small shields; on the south side of the chancel, in the space between it and the chapel of St. Mary, is the lofty and magnificent monument of John, first Lord Mordaunt, son of the preceding, who died in 1562, and Elizabeth Vere, his wife, with recumbent alabaster effigies of both, on an altar-tomb under a semicircular arch, on either side of which are projecting pedestals with pilasters and coupled columns supporting an ornamental frieze and cornice; above this on either side are caryatides in turn supporting a plain pediment surmounted by three female figures; in the space over the cornice is a large quartered shield with crest and supporters; in the north aisle now stands the fine tomb of John, second Lord Mordaunt, who died in April, 1571, and was buried here on the following 16th of May; it consists of eight stilted columns of the Roman Doric order, supporting a flat canopy, surmounted by a quartered shield, and eagles holding scrolls at the angles: within, on separate altar-tombs, are recumbent effigies of Lord Mordaunt, and his wives, Eleanor (Pitz-Lewis), and Joan (Farmer); at the west end of the same aisle is the tomb of Lewis, third Lord Mordaunt, who died June 13, 1661, moved hither from the east end of the north chapel during the restoration; it is a plain altar-tomb raised on two steps, represented in marble as covered with a black pall, fringed with white, on which are affixed inscriptions and shields of arms; at the west end is a large quartered shield with crest, mantling and supporters: on the floor of St. Mary's chapel is a small brass to a member of the Mordaunt family with impaled shield, and a scroll inscribed with a couplet in Latin, and there are two other brasses, one with the figure of an ecclesiastic, and another with arms and inscription to Alice Chubnoll, wife of Richard Bernard esq. 1606; suspended in the aisle are two helmets, a sword, gauntlets, collar and spurs: there are other memorials in the church to the Rev. Legh Richmond M.A. the well known author of the "Dairyman's Daughter," rector (1805-27), his sons Samuel Nugent Legh, 1824; Thomas Henry Wilberforce, 1825, two infants, and others of his family: the Rev. Erasmus Middleton, rector (1804-5), Rev. Richard Rands, rector (1669-99), and the families of Higgins, Carter, Clarke-Jervoise &c: in the churchyard, adjoining the south wall, is a plain altar-tomb to John Richardson, a faithful retainer of the Mordaunts in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries; a substantial modern lych-gate forms the entrance to the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1629. An earlier book dating from 1606, is now lost. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £458, net yearly value £308 with residence, in the gift of W. Francis Higgins esq. and held since 1869 by the Rev. George Frederick Woodhouse Munby M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The present rectory house was built in 1838-9 on the site (and partly with the materials) of the old one. A new cemetery for this parish, one acre in extent, was consecrated July 18th, 1871, by the bishop of the diocese; interments in the old churchyard have been since discontinued, except in cases where vaults or brick graves had previously existed. Here was buried Commander S. S. Skipwith B.N. 1872; the cemetery is under the control of a burial board of nine members. There are Wesleyan and Congregational chapels. Charities.—John, and Lord Mordaunt left by will, 8d. weekly to four poor persons, payable out of land in the hamlet of Eastcoates, in Carlington parish. Thomas Carter esq. by a nuncupative will in 1731, left £100, now invested in 3 per cents. the interest for the most necessitous poor, to be distributed at Christmas. Dame Anne Mordaunt, left by will in 1791, £100, the interest to be similarly distributed. An unknown donor left about an acre of land in Lavendon parish, Bucks; the rent to be distributed at Christmas among poor widows of this parish. Charles Higgins esq. by will in 1792, left £1,000, the interest for the clothing of 20 poor women of Turvey parish; he also left the interest of £300 for the support of a Sunday school, provided that the stipend of the master be made up to £20 per annum, which was done by John Higgins esq. who in 1829 conveyed about 13 acres of land, called "Hall's Pasture," in trust for this purpose. Miss Ann Maria Higgins, by will in Nov. 1838, left £700, the interest to be applied to the support of the Sunday school, and another sum of £700 for providing the poor with coals at Christmas: these two sums are invested in 3 per cent. Consols. Mr. John Robinson left by will in 1835, £50, the interest to be given to the necessitous widows of Turvey at Christmas. Lieut-Col. W. B. Higgins left by will 1879, £150, the interest to be given to the National and Infant schools in the parish, also £100, the interest to be given to the Working Men's Room in the parish of Turvey. All these charities, except those which are a charge on land, are now in the hands of the Charity Commissioners, and the interest paid by them. A large and handsome block of buildings was erected close to the railway station in 1884 by James Barton esq. to form almshouses.

The Bedfordshire Reformatory situated in this parish was founded in 1857 by the exertions of Thos. Charles Higgins esq. of Turvey House, the then chairman of quarter sessions for the county, and was certified on the 6th of April in that year; it is now, with some aid from government, self-supporting: the building consists of a large school-room, dormitories, and smaller sleeping-rooms for the use of the boys, besides apartments for the superintendent and maron, assistant matron, schoolmaster, and two labour-masters; the out-buildings include a workshop, tool-shed, bake-house, dairy, and open shed; the farm buildings comprise a barn, she, stables &c. The land belonging to the school farm is about 50 acres. The boys are employed on the farm, and are taught all kinds of agricultural work. They are admitted from Buckinghamshire, Lancashire, Wiltshire, Boston, Oxfordshire, Leicestershire, Middlesex, and the borough of Leicester, by agreement; and the managers do not object, upon proper application, to take in boys from other counties or towns. The institution is under the management of a Committee of Visitors. Chairman, W. Francis Higgins, Turvey House.

Here is a reading room, a working men's room, and museum. The houses and cottages are nearly all built of native stone, and are unusually capacious and neat. The Three Fishes inn is an ancient hostelry with projecting gables, and is dated 1624. A great flood, on September 26th, 1797, rose about four feet above the roadway, near the "Three Fishes." Nell's well in this parish was restored in 1873, at the cost of Col. Higgins. Large quantities of pillow thread lace are made here, and shoe making is carried on. The approach to Turvey from Bedford is through an avenue of trees, nearly a mile in length; at the further extremity of the village is a bridge of eight arches over the Ouse, facing which, in the water, is a statue group representing the story of Jonah; the other entrances to the village are also picturesque. Turvey House, the seat of William Francis Higgins esq. D.L., J.P. is a stately mansion of three storeys in the Italian style, built in 1794, by John Higgins sen. esq.; the principal facade consists of a central portion, relieved by pilasters, and flanked by slightly projecting wings with Corinthian pillars supporting a frieze and projecting cornice, which runs round the whole structure above the second storey; the upper stage is low, and finished with a plain parapet. The house is situated in a pleasant park of 150 acres, extending to the Ouse. Turvey Abbey, the residence of Mrs. Higgins, widow of Charles Longuet Higgins esq. J.P. is a long gabled building, to which considerable additions were made in 1855 and 1860, and is surrounded by a finely-wooded park of 100 acres. Picts Hill, 1½ miles east of Turvey, the property of W. Francis Higgins esq. and occupied by Sydney G. Crosse esq. has grounds of 25 acres. Turvey Cottage, a commodious residence, pleasantly situated on rising ground, overlooking the river Ouse, is the property of W. F. Higgins esq. and now occupied by Edward Kent Karslake esq. q.c. Woodside House is a pleasant residence, also the property of W. F. Higgins esq.; it is about three-quarters of a mile from the village of Turvey, and is occupied by John William Pascoe esq. Holmwood House is situated at the east end of the village, and is occupied by Mrs. James Higgins: it is the property of the trustees of the late C. L.

OLD WARDEN is a village and parish, 3 miles north from Shefford, 7 south-east from Bedford, 4 west from Biggleswade, and one mile and a half from the Southill station on the Bedford and Hitchin branch of the Midland railway, in the hundred of Wixantree, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Leonard is a building of stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a tower containing 4 bells: it underwent considerable repairs in 1843, when the interior was renovated, pews of black oak, elaborately carved, substituted, and several stained windows inserted, the whole being executed at the expense of Lord Ongley, late owner of the estate, whose munificence has been recorded on a mural tablet of brass; a marble statue of Sir Samuel Ongley is placed at the end of the nave, and there are several tablets to the memory of his descendants: there is a picture in the church, a copy of one by Guercino: the churchyard is planted with evergreens and flowering shrubs. The register dates from the year 1575. The living is a discharged vicarage, tithe rent-charge £6, gross yearly value £438, including 7 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Samuel Whitbread esq. M.P. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Francis Bourdillon M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The charities amount to £36 yearly, left in part by Edward Peck. Old Warden House, formerly the seat of Lord Ongley, was some years ago taken down, and a WHIPPSNADE is a parish and village, 3 miles south-west from Dunstable railway station, on the borders of Hertfordshire, in the hundred of Manshead, union and county court district of Luton, rural deanery of Dunstable, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary Magdalene is a structure of brick, rebuilt on the foundation of an earlier church of unknown antiquity, in a mixed style, and consisting of chancel, nave and a western tower, containing 3 bells: it was thoroughly restored and re-peved, and a chancel added, in 1860: there are sittings for 150 persons. The register dates from the year 1682. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £185, net yearly value £170, including 20 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held, since 1878, by the Rev. William Thomas Holden B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There is a small Wesleyan chapel, built in 1858. The scenery surrounding the parish church and the downs is beautiful and picturesque. Arthur Macnamara esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Earl Brownlow, Sir John Gage Saunders Sebright bart. J.P. of Beechwood, Herts, and Arthur Macnamara esq. D.L., J.P. of Billington Manor House. The soil is clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 1,205 acres; rateable value, £4,173; the population in 1881 was 185.

WILLINGTON is a village and parish, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles east from Bedford, $\frac{1}{2}$ west from Blunham railway station in the hundred of Wixantree, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Ely. The Bedford and Cambridge railway and the road from Bedford to St. Neots run through this parish. The church of St. Laurence is a most interesting building of stone, in the Early Perpendicular style, with embattled parapets to the nave and aisle, and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, extending to the whole length of the nave and chancel, north porch, and a tower containing 5 bells: in the church are memorials, including some altar-tombs, to the Gostwick family, the earliest of which is a brass to Robert Gostwick esq. 1315; the others comprise a fine canopied altar-tomb of marble, with recumbent effigy, and inscribed on one side to Sir William Gostwick bart. 1615, and Jane (Owen) his wife, with eleven children; and on the south side of the chancel is another tomb, with kneeling effigies, and figures of children, to Sir Edward Gostwick kt. and bart. with a chronogrammatic inscription to himself, 1530; and his wife, 1623: there are also inscribed slabs to Lady Mary Gostwick, daughter of Sir William Litton, of Knebworth, Herts, 1656; and to John Gostwick esq., who appears from the inscription to have built or rebuilt some part of the church in 1541: suspended from the wall is an ancient helmet said to have been worn at the "Field of the Cloth of Gold," in 1520: the churchwardens' pew has various names and dates carved on it in rude characters; in the church is a black letter bible, printed in 1611: the building was restored in 1877 by the Duke of Bedford k.o. when the chancel was repaired and re-seated, and the ancient floor tiles reproduced: the noble organ, originally constructed by the Rev. H. E. H. Havergal, late vicar of Cople, and completed by Hill, of London, in 1875, is a fine instrument with 23 stops: there are sittings for 183 persons. The register dates from the year 1676. The living is a vicarage, the rent-charge commuted at £235 yearly, net £239, including 17 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford k.o. and held since 1858 by the Rev. Augustus Orlebar M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford, and rural dean of Haynes. There is a Wesleyan chapel here. In 1860 some Roman remains were discovered here, and were sent to Woburn Abbey. The Park farm-house, now in the occupation of Mr. Henry Purser, is a portion of the ancient residence of Sir John Gostwick, Master of the Horse to King Henry VIII, who once held

WOBURN.

WOBURN is a market and union town, on the borders of Bucks, 15 miles south-west from Bedford, 42 from London, 3 south-east from the Woburn Sands station on the Bedford and Bletchley branch of the North-Western railway and 7 north from Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Manshead, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Fleete, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The town is particularly clean, more than a quarter of a mile long, well built, and lighted with gas.

The town is supposed, in Leland's time (c. 1552), to have been a hamlet in the parish of Birchmore; in 1572 the town and abbey were visited by Queen Elizabeth; on 13th September, 1595, the whole place was almost totally destroyed by fire, 130 houses being consumed; during the civil war, the county was chiefly attached to the Parliamentary party, and in 1542 the Royal troops burnt a part of the town. Tradition says that it also suffered severely from the plague in 1625-26, when about 30 died.

The old church of St. Mary the Virgin, in Bedford street, rebuilt by Richard Hobbs, last abbot of Woburn, was pulled down in 1868, and a mortuary chapel erected on its site with the materials; but the tower remains: this is an embattled structure of two stages, and about 92 feet in height to the top of the vane, standing at a distance of six yards from the site of the north aisle of the former church; it has pinnacles at the angles and an open cupola, with a cross and vane; it was rebuilt in 1830 by the late Duke of Bedford, under the direction of Mr. E. Blore, and contains 8 good bells, two of these having been recently added by the Duke of Bedford K.O. four were recast in 1663 and a fifth in 1724: the tower was built or rebuilt in the seventeenth century by Sir Francis Staunton knt. with the materials of the parish church at Birchmore; in the mortuary chapel are memorials to Sir F. Staunton and Elizabeth, his wife, 1630, and others to the Kay family, removed from the old church.

The new church, erected on a commanding site near the park gates, in Park street, and consecrated on the 23rd of September, 1868: was built solely at the expense of the Duke of Bedford, at a cost of £35,000, and is a fine specimen of the Continental Gothic style of the thirteenth century, from designs by Mr. Clutton: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, vestry, organ loft, a large crypt under the chancel and a western tower with spire 185 feet high and containing 1 bell weighing 55 cwt.: the carved pulpit and font are of Bath stone: the seats in the nave and aisles, which are all free, are of plain solid oak; the chancel is at present unprovided with seats; there is one stained window. The register dates from the year 1558, and contains records of the visitation of the plague here in 1625-6. The living is a vicarage, yearly value from tithe rent-charge £28, increased by donations of the patron to £328 gross, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford K.O. and held since 1874 by the Rev. Henry Willes Southey M.A. late scholar of Caius College, Cambridge.

There are Wesleyan and Congregational chapels.

The Town Hall, situated near the centre of the town, at the intersection of Leighton and Park streets, was built in 1830 from designs by Mr. E. Blore F.R.S.A.; it is now used for petty sessions or entertainments, and during 1884 the interior was very handsomely refitted at the cost of the Duke of Bedford K.O. under the direction of Mr. Clutton.

There is a Friday's market, and four fairs in the year—January 1st, March 23rd, July 13th and October 6th.

Woburn institute and reading rooms, Leighton street, rebuilt at the cost of the Duke of Bedford K.O. 1884, is open daily on week days from 12 o'clock noon till 10 p.m. The reading room is provided with various daily and weekly papers and several monthly magazines; the library consists of 1,377 volumes.

There is a fire brigade, consisting of 1 superintendent and 10 firemen: the engine-house is situated close to the church. The inhabitants are employed to some extent in lace and straw plait making.

The endowments of this town, derived chiefly from the Bedford family, are considerable, and comprise a rent-charge of £20 yearly on the Whittlebury estate, which is given away in bread monthly by the churchwardens at the Town Hall; William Underwood's, bequeathed in 1793, and Green Thetford's charities of £100, the interest to be yearly distributed in bread on New Year's day; a rent-charge on Birchmore estate of £30 yearly is given away to the inmates of the almshouses. There are 20 almshouses in Bedford street, originating in a bequest by the will of Sir Francis Staunton, dated 1635, of £40 for the poor, augmented in 1665 by estates, value £24 yearly, which, in 1761, were consolidated and granted to John, Duke of Bedford, on condition that he should found an almshouse for 12 persons, and endow the same with £30 yearly: there are 20 inmates, each of whom receives £1 5s. annually. John Fountain, of Abington, Northants, bequeathed in 1710 lands value £30 yearly, for bread.

The Free School, founded by Francis, Earl of Bedford, has ceased to exist; the endowment, amounting to about £12 yearly, is in the hands of three trustees, viz. Lord C. J. F. Russell, the vicar and E. Blundell esq.; a scheme for its administration was framed by the Charity Commissioners in 1884.

Woburn Abbey, the seat of the Duke of Bedford K.O. still retains its conventual name, although no part of the ancient structure now remains. The Abbey was founded to Stephen (1145) by Hugh de Bolebec, a Norman baron, whose father had accompanied the Conqueror, for monks of the Cistercian order, and was dedicated, in accordance with their custom, to the Virgin, the house being colonized from the Abbey of Fontaines, in Yorkshire. It was surrendered by Richard Hobbs, the last abbot, 26 Hen. viii. (1534-5), when the revenues were estimated at £391 18s. 2d. clear yearly value: the abbot having thrown off his allegiance and joined the insurgents in Lincolnshire and Yorkshire, was at length taken prisoner, and hanged on an oak tree in front of the abbey: the tree is said to be still standing. In 1547, the site and circuit of the abbey were granted to John, Lord Russell, of Chenies, Bucks. Queen Elizabeth visited the abbey in 1572, and received for two days the hospitality of Francis, 2nd Earl of Bedford, and Charles I. was also entertained here on three occasions, in 1644, 1645 and 1647, by William, 3rd Earl, and subsequently Duke of Bedford. The present mansion was built about 1744, by John, Duke of Bedford, and is a structure of Tottenhoe stone, in the Italian style, from designs by Flitcroft, forming a quadrangle, with corridors on the north, east and south sides, surrounding a great court with an area of 148 by 138 feet; the west, or principal front, 272 feet in length, is of two storeys, the lower being rusticated, and consists of a central compartment divided by four ionic columns supporting a pediment, and wings of five bays, terminating in quadrangles, from which a balustraded wall of the height of the first storey projects on either side; the upper storey is also finished with a balustrading, above which rises a line of dormers; the east front, which has a portico of four doric columns, conducts by a flight of steps to the corridors above mentioned, and looks out upon an extensive green, partially enclosed by the stables, forming two oblong courts on either side, and the riding house and tennis court between these at the extreme east end; attached to the south stable court is the sculpture gallery. The entrance to the park, built by the late duke, exhibits a façade decorated with ionic columns, and surmounted by the arms of Russell, and was designed by the late Mr. Henry Holland. The north corridor, 170 feet in length, is filled with bronzes, plaster casts, vases and tazze, and in this wing also are the principal bedchambers, furnished in the old French style, and containing many fine pictures: at the extremity of this corridor, the principal suite of rooms, including the drawing-room, saloon, dining room, portrait gallery, Canaletto room and library, is entered, and comprise that portion of the house usually shown to strangers; the portrait gallery, 111 by 18 feet, is divided into three compartments by slight screens with advanced columns, 16 feet in height, and contains, besides many family portraits, those of courtiers of the Elizabethan period, and the cane of William, Lord Russell, executed in Lincoln's Inn Fields, July 21, 1683; the rest of these apartments are magnificently decorated and furnished, and the walls are hung with fine examples of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Claude, Poussin, Cuyt, Rubens, Rembrandt, Titian and Annibal Caracci; the Canaletto room contains 24 pictures by that master, painted expressly for an ancestor of the present duke. The south corridor, of the same length as the north, contains a series of models of English cattle, executed by Giarrard, for Francis, 5th duke; and in this and the east corridor are a set of drawings in red chalk, after Raphael, executed in Rome by Michael Angelo Riccioini; the private rooms, on the south side, form a continuous range with the inner library. The sculpture gallery, already referred to, comprises an ante-room, hung with engravings after works by Canova, and in the centre stands an antique vase of exquisite workmanship: the gallery itself is 133 feet in length, by 25 feet wide, and was originally intended for a conservatory, but now contains a superb collection of marbles of the highest class: the columns which divide it into compartments being themselves antiques; in the centre is placed the celebrated Bedford vase, and on either hand are fine works by Canova, Chantrey, Flaxman, Thorvaldsen, Nollekens and Westmacott. At the east end is a temple of the ionic order, designed by the late Mr. Henry Holland, and containing a bust of Charles James Fox, with others; on the frieze is a Latin inscription by Dr. Parr; the west end also terminates in a temple, erected by the late duke from designs by Mr. Wyattville, and the frieze bears an inscription by Mr. Rogers; the interior contains Canova's famous group of the graces, and in the approach to it are portraits in marble, by Chantrey and Thorvaldsen, of two infant daughters of the late duke. The park is amply stocked with deer, and tastefully diversified with abundance of wood and water: the whole extent of the park is 2,686a. 3r. 14p. of which 845a. 3r. 25p. is woodland and includes Riggmont Park, another demesne of the Duke's.

In the romantic wood of Aspley, belonging to the Duke, and nearly adjoining Woburn Park, broken fragments of the trees are frequently picked up from the ground in a petrified state, a circumstance ascribed to the extreme coldness of the soil, and to be derived from a neighbouring petrifying spring. Camden mentions that a ladder was to be seen in Aspley Monastery, which, formerly of wood, having been buried in the earth for some time, was dug up a perfect stone.

The Duke of Bedford K.O. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner.

The soil is the Lower Greensand which stretches from Leighton to Sandy; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and peas. The area is 3,200 acres; rateable value, £7,248; the population in 1881 was 1,316, including 110 officers and inmates in the workhouse. Sexton, Joseph Rush, London road.

WOBURN SANDS is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1867, comprising the parishes of Aspley Heath and parts of the parish of Aspley Guise and Wavendon. The two former are in the union of Woburn, county court district of Leighton Buzzard, and county of Beds, and the latter (Wavendon) in the union of Newport Pagnell, and county of Bucks. The village has a station on the Bedford and Cambridge branch of the London and North-Western railway, 12 miles south-west from Bedford and 4 miles east from Blechley and 2½ north-west from Woburn: it is 4½ miles from London by road and 50 by rail: it is in the rural deanery of Fleet, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Michael, in Aspley Heath parish, is a building of stone, in the French Gothic style, erected in 1868 from designs by Mr. Henry Clutton, architect: it consists of chancel, nave of five bays and a small circular bell turret. The register dates from the year 1867. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £150, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford, and held since 1834 by the Rev. Edward Henry Mosse M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. There are Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Particular Baptist chapels, and a Friends' meeting house. The Village Institute, built in 1874, at a cost of about £800, stands near the centre of the parish; it has a library of upwards of 600 volumes, and is used for concerts and other village purposes. The parish is particularly salubrious, being situated on the Lower Greensand formation, which here is a reddish-brown sand, and partly covered by pine woods. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford, John Green esq., C. Ridgway esq. and W. H. Denison esq. The area is 1,400 acres; the population in 1881 was 1,077.

Parish Clerk, Charles Bousley.

WOOTTON is a parish and widely scattered village, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Bedford, $\frac{1}{2}$ north-west from Ampthill, in the hundred of Redbournstone, in Bedford union and county court districts, in the rural deanery of Haynes, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is a noble edifice, chiefly in the Decorated style, but with portions of Early English and Perpendicular work, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and a tower containing 5 bells: the aisles have been lengthened westward in modern times, and the west window is stained: the chancel and aisles retain piscine, and the former is separated from the nave by an ancient screen of carved oak: the organ was presented by Miss Neale; the font, pulpit and other fittings are all modern: the church contains six monuments and tablets and thirteen inscribed slabs to the Monoux family, formerly of Wootton House, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; and there are many other memorials, including two of former vicars of the eighteenth century, but none of an earlier date: the porch, of finely carved oak, is a reproduction of the ancient porch: the church was thoroughly restored about 1850, by the Rev. F. Neale, late vicar, and the chancel rebuilt by the late Sir Coventry Payne bart.: the church will seat 250 persons. The registers date from the year 1562. The living, which belonged before the suppression of religious houses to the priory of Black Canons at Newenham, near Bedford, is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £10, net yearly value about £250 (derived from 210 acres of glebe) with residence, in the gift of John Nathaniel Foster esq. of Sandy Place, and held since 1831 by the Rev. Albert John Foster M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. There are two charities, one, amounting to about £50 a year, arising from land, is applied one half for the benefit of the poor and one half for the repair of the church; the other charity is a rent-charge of £6 a year on land, for the benefit of the six oldest widows. Wootton Hoe, built 1854, is the property and residence of the Rev. Maurice Farrell M.A. rector of Woughton, Bletchley. Wootton House, pleasantly situated in a park near the church, is the property of Sir Philip Monoux Payne bart. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner: the other chief landowners are Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, Mrs. Smart, Frederick Edward Fienes Pollhill-Turner esq. of Howbury Hall, Bedford; William Layton Lowndes esq. and Arthur Stunton Wade-Gery esq. of Campton Grange, Sheffield. The chief crops are wheat, beans and barley. The soil is a rich strong clay; subsoil, gravel and marl. The area is 3,711 acres; rateable value, £77,438; and the population in 1881 was 1,302.

WOOTTON KEELEY, a large hamlet of this parish, was the residence of Sir John Keyling, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, who committed John Bunyan to Bedford gaol for the offence of holding meetings for religious purposes, contrary to the then existing law: the house is now a farm-house, the property of F. E. F. Pollhill-Turner esq. A mission-room was opened by the vicar in 1882 in this part of the parish, and is used for services, meetings and night schools &c. There is a lending library and clothing, blanket and coal clubs; in the winter months there are men's and mothers' meetings and night schools.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Hill.

Sexton, Mark Hill.

Post Office.—Thomas Hill, receiver. Letters received through Bedford; delivery commences at 8 a.m.; box closes at 4.40 p.m. and on Sunday at 9.55 a.m. The nearest money order office is at Kempston, & telegraph office, Bedford.

A Wootton Parish Magazine is published monthly.

A School Board of 5 members was formed here in February, 1875; R. M. White, clerk to the board; Philip Hill, attendance officer.

Board School, built in 1877, William Mephum, master; Lily Franklin, infants' mistress.

The old school is used for the Sunday school & as a reading room, & a portion is leased to the Board as an infants' school.

WRESTLINGWORTH is a village and parish, on the borders of Cambridgeshire, 2½ miles south-east from the Potton and 5 north-east from the Biggleswade railway stations and 10 south-east from St. Neots, in the hundred, union and county court district of Biggleswade, rural deanery of Biggleswade, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter is a building of stone and cobbles in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave and a tower containing a clock and 1 bell: in the chancel is a stained window: the whole edifice was thoroughly repaired in 1847. The register dates from the year 1578. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £135 arising from 120 acres of glebe in lieu of tithes, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1836 by the Rev. William Christopher Twiss M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, who is also vicar of Esworth. Here is a congregational chapel. There are charities amounting to £69 yearly, left by Mrs. Bullen in 1840 and Mrs. Dennis, one half of which is expended in repairing the church, and the other half in distribution to the poor. John Harvey Astell D.L., J.P. of Woodbury Hall, Sandy, Henry J. Cust, esq. and Downing College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 1,617 acres; rateable value, £1,936; the population in 1881 was 638.

WYMLINGTON (WIMINGTON or WINNINGTON) is a parish and small village, 13 miles north-west from Bedford, 5 south-east from Wellingborough, 3 south from the Icheraster station of the Midland railway, on the borders of Northamptonshire, in the hundred of Willey, county court district and union of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Felmersham, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Lawrence is an elegant building of stone in the late Decorated style, rebuilt about 1377 by John Curteys, whose tomb is in the church, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch with parvise and a western embattled tower with crocketed spire, containing 6 bells: the spire is singular and very beautiful, rising from eight arches with open Decorated tracery and pedimental canopies, and the angles are richly crocketed: at the east end of the church are two octagonal turrets, and the whole is embattled to a height of four feet: the chancel retains very rich canopied sedilia and a piscina of similar character: the original octagonal font also remains: in the window sill of the south chapel are remains of a once magnificent altar, with a niche and piscina, and in the vestry, anciently the chapel of St. John the Evangelist, is another piscina: much of the old pavement, consisting of squares of polished Purbeck marble, still remains: the church contains some fine brasses, one of which, to Sir Thomas Bromflete, who was cup-bearer to King Henry V. is considered to be the finest brass in existence of a knight in plate armour; the head of the knight rests on a crested helm, on either side of the figure are shields of arms, and overhead a reversed inscription on brass in two columns, with the date 1430; alongside, on a similar slab, is a much smaller brass of his wife Margaret (Seynt Jon) 1407, with an inscription on a brass fillet surrounding the slab, and enclosing four shields: on the floor under the chancel arch, is a brass 22 inches long, to John Stokys, rector, who died about 1520, clad in eucharistic vestments, YELDEN is a parish, situated in a valley, on the borders of Northamptonshire, 14 miles north from Bedford, 6½ west from Kimbolton and 4½ east-south-east from Higham Ferrers, in the hundred of Stoddens, union and county court district of Bedford, rural deanery of Kilsay, archdeaconry of Bedford, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Mary is an almost perfect example of a Decorated church, and has undergone but little alteration: it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, south aisle with porch and a western tower with enriched cornice and low octagonal spire, containing 4 bells and a clock: the chancel retains and holding the chalice in his hands: under the arch between the lady chapel and the chancel is a fine altar-tomb, in good preservation, to the memory of John and Albreda Curteys, who built the church: the upper slab of Purbeck marble has perfect brass effigies of both, under a crocketed canopy, with a shield above; surrounding the whole is an inscribed brass fillet, with the date of the founder's death, 1391, and that of his wife in 1396: there is another altar tomb in the north aisle, with inscription on brass, to William Blitsoe, dated 1609; and there are later memorials to Richard Newcome M.A. rector (1698-1732), Richard Newcome M.A. his son, 1731, and the families of Scriven, Clark, Kent, Chapman and Kemshad. The register dates from 1662. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £130, including 166 acres of glebe, with residence, now under sequestration. In this parish remains of ancient weapons have been found. Pillow lace is made here. Goosey's charity of £5 yearly, bequeathed in 1844, is for the poor of this parish and of Poddington; and the Rev. Joseph Broughton's, of 10s. yearly, was left in 1665. Mr. John Goosey, of Kettering, is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert Loyd Lindsay F.C., K.C.B., M.P. of Overstone, Mr. John Goosey, Charles Magniac esq. M.P. of Colworth, Bedford, and John Ragot-Scriven esq. The soil is clay; subsoil, sand, clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and pasturage. The area is 1,710 acres; rateable value, £7,029; the population in 1881 was 488.

piscina and sedilia, and on the north side is a late Perpendicular vestry, between which and the chancel is a curious small recess in the wall; in the aisle is a large canopied recess with crocketed pinnacles and rich finials, and near it is a piscina and a statue bracket; and on the north side of the church is a flat arched recess, with hood moulding and finial, enclosing an altar tomb with a recumbent figure in good preservation, supposed to be that of the founder: the front of the tomb displays five quarterfoils enclosing shields; there are also three brasses, one of which has the effigy of a man in trunk hose, cloak and ruff, and is inscribed to

Christopher Stickland gent. 1628, a benefactor to the parish ; another is that of a priest richly vested, with an inscription in Latin to John Heyne, rector, 1433; the third is a kneeling effigy, with ruff, representing Thomas Barker, rector, 1617, on the south side of the chancel is a stained window to John Fernie M.A. rector, ob. 1870. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £356, gross yearly value £440, including 60 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Charles Howes Smith M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge, and held since 1871 by the Rev. Richard Young M.A. formerly fellow of New College, Oxford, who resides at 23 St. Peter's green, Bedford. The patron is also curate in charge. There is a Wesleyan chapel, rebuilt in 1884 on the site of the former chapel. There is a charity of about £11 10s. a year, the produce of a piece of land called "Constable's Land," devised 9th Feb. 1628, which is distributed to the poor in coals. The chief landowners are John

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, or HUNTA, is an inland shire in the East Lowlands, near the arm of the sea called The Wash: it is very small, only Middlesex and Rutland being smaller, and Rutland only having fewer inhabitants: the shire takes its name from the town of Huntingdon: the length from north to south is nearly 30 miles, and from east to west 23: the shape is something like a lozenge: it is bounded on the north-west and north by Northamptonshire, on the north-east and east by Cambridgeshire and on the south-west by Bedfordshire. The number of square miles is 372, and of acres 229,515. The population in 1831 was 53,192, in 1841, 58,549, in 1851, 64,183, in 1861, 64,250, in 1871, 63,708, and in 1881, 59,491, viz. males, 29,195 and females 30,296. The northern part of the shire is chiefly fen, and belongs to the valley of the Nene; the southern is higher land, belonging to the basin of the Ouse. The chief hills are a range on the right bank of the Ouse, running from Pottun to near Huntingdon, a branch of the Cambridgeshire hills and some others on the southern bank of the Nene. The Ouse comes into the shire at the south, passes St. Neots, where a brook flows in from Eynesbury and another from Kimbolton and a little further another from Diddington. The Ouse next passes north to Huntingdon, where it takes the waters of two brooks from the west and north-west, thence passing east by St. Ives, on its way to The Wash: it is navigable by large boats in its whole course throughout the shire, and as high up as Bedford: the haven at its mouth is Lynn, which is the great shipping place for the Fen counties. The Nene, or Nen, winds along the north border of the shire by Peterborough, and will bear large boats; its chief haven is Wisbech, in Cambridgeshire. The Fen lands are crossed by several streams, cuts, drains and meres, many of which are navigable by boats: these cuts likewise connect the rivers Nene and Ouse, so that the whole of the east of the shire has a good water-way throughout. Notwithstanding the streams and meres, the inhabitants of many parts are very badly off for water, which, for want of springs, they draw from ponds and wells, and is far from being good. Very much of the fen land has within a few years been thoroughly drained and brought into cultivation: it is generally very productive and repays the expense of draining.

The once celebrated Whittlesea mere has been entirely drained, as have also Ramsey and Ugg meres.

The south-eastern part of the shire, which rises into small hills, is mainly iron-sand, the middle is Oxford clay, the north-eastern is fen land, and the northern stone brash, so that Huntingdonshire belongs mostly to the oolite and those soils nearly akin. In the higher parts the air is good, but in the fen lands it is damp, and fogs are frequent: it is, however, friendly to husbandry. The soil is of many kinds, some very bad, but by care it is made to bear good crops: the fens, after drainage, yield very largely. A great deal of land is laid down for grazing, and the meadows feed many fat cattle for the great towns. The land in the fens grows many willows, but otherwise it is mostly bare of trees. In the upland, corn is grown. Huntingdonshire produces forest marble, peat turf, wheat, barley, beans, turnips, rape, hay, clover, mustard, cattle, sheep, hogs, waterfowl and eels. The people are mostly engaged in husbandry: few handicrafts are carried on—these are chiefly brick and tile making, paper making, parchment making, brewing, malting, currying and tanning, ironfounding, lace making and printing, some few persons being employed in madder making, lime burning, rush work &c.

The Great Northern railway intersects the county from south to north, passing by St. Neots and Huntingdon, having a branch from Holme to Ramsey, a distance of 6 miles. The Midland Railway Company have a branch from Kettering on their main line, entering this county near Kimbolton, two miles north from which town it has a station, thence passing through Graffham and Buckden (at each of which places it also has stations) to Huntingdon. The Great Eastern railway, Cambridge, St. Ives and Huntingdon line, connects these towns: it also has a line northward from St. Ives to Wisbech, in Cambridgeshire, and another from St. Ives to Sutton, thence to Ely. The northern border of the county is skirted by the Northampton and Peterborough line of the London and North Western system. The coach roads, including the old North road, are many and good.

The borough of Huntingdon has separate jurisdiction. The shire is, with the exception of the parish of Wareley, in the province of Canterbury, diocese of Ely, and is an archdeaconry, which is sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Huntingdon, Kimbolton, Leightonstone, St. Ives, St. Neots and Yaxley. It is in the South Eastern circuit, and Huntingdon is the shire town, where the assizes are held. The county has one court of quarter sessions, and is divided into five petty sessional divisions. As the shire is so small it is joined with Cambridgeshire in the shrievalty, the two having only one sheriff: it sends two members to Parliament. The chief town is Huntingdon, which is a borough, with 4,243 people, in the middle of the shire, on the Ouse. Godmanchester and St. Ives are also municipal boroughs: population of Godmanchester, 2,188, St. Ives, 3,002; Ramsey, with 4,617 inhabitants, and St. Neots, with 3,136, are market towns. Kimbolton is also a market town, with a castle, the seat of the Duke of Manchester, population, 1,120; and Yaxley, population 1,355, is a small town near Norman Cross, which had formerly a market. This shire is thought to have been won from the Britons by the Belgians, named Icen. The Romans, having taken the country, long held it as part of the province of Flavia Caesariensis; they seem to have had stations called Durolicopes at Godmanchester and Durobrivæ at Water Newton, on the Nene; at Chesterton was a camp. Their great roads, the Ermine street and Via Devana, passed through the county. The Romans having left, the East English took it from the Welsh, but afterwards the Mid-English held it till it became part of the kingdom of England. The earldom was one of the chief under the early kings; it is still held by the family of Hastings. There were two great abbies, Ramsey and Sawtry St. Judith, and castles at Kimbolton and Huntingdon. Alwalton, Conington, Hartford and Leighton Bromswold churches have remains of Norman building.

Huntingdonshire has four hundreds:—

Norman Cross, to the north;
Huntingstone (Ramsey and St. Ives) to the east;
Leightonstone (Kimbolton), to the west;
Toseland (St. Neots), to the south.

The Superintendent Registrar's districts are:—

The remaining parishes in the county are included in the poor law unions of Caxton (Cambridge); Oundle, Peterborough and Thrapston (Northampton), and Stamford (Lincoln).

The following is a list of the parishes in the county, arranged according to the hundreds:—

Hundred of Hurstingstone:—Abbots Ripton with Wenington, Bluntisham and Earith, Broughton, Bury, Colne, Great Raveley, Great Stukeley, Hartford, Holywell-cum-Needingworth, Houghton, King's Ripton, Little Raveley, Little Stukeley, Old Hurst, Pidley-cum-Fenton, Ramsey (partly in Cambridge), St. Ives, Sapley, Somersham, Upwood, Warboys, Wistow, Witton and Woodhurst.

Hundred of Leightonstone:—Alconbury, Alconbury Weston, Barham, Brampton, Brington, Buckworth, Bythorn, Coppingford, Covington, Easton, Ellington, Grafham, Great Catworth, Great Gidding, Hamerton, Keyaton, Kimbolton, Leighton, Little Catworth, Little Gidding, Luddington (part of), Molesworth, Old Weston, Spaldwick, Steeple Gidding, Stow or Long Stow, Swineshead, Thurning (partly in Northampton), Upton, Winwick (partly in Northampton) and Woolley.

Hundred of Norman Cross:—Alwalton, Caldecote, Chesterton, Conington, Denton, Elton, Farect, Fletton, Folksworth, Glatton, Haddon, Holme, Morbourn, Orton Longville, Orton Waterville, Sawtry St. Andrew, Sawtry St. Judith, Standground (partly in Cambridge), Stibbington, Stilton, Washingley, Water Newton, Woolstone, Woodwalton and Yaxley.

Hundred of Toseland:—Abbotsley, Buckden, Diddington, Eynesbury, Fen Stanton, Godmanchester, Great Gransden, Great Paxton, Great Staughton, Hail Weston, Hemingford Abbots, Hemingford Grey, Hilton, Little Paxton, Midloe, Offord Cluny, Offord Darcy, St. Neots, Southoe, Tetworth, Toseland, Wareley and Yelling.

Borough of Huntingdon:—All Saints, St. Benedict, St. John, St. Mary and Sawtry All Saints.

The Three Counties Lunatic Asylum (Herts, Beds and Hunts), situated in the parish of Stoford, in Bedfordshire, is a very extensive and elegant building; it holds 1,000 patients; Edward Swain L.R.C.P. Edin. medical superintendent; S. E. De Lisle and D. T. Evans, assistant medical officers; Rev. J. Downes Webster Hawksley B.A. chaplain; Francis George Butler esq. (St. Neots), clerk to the committee of visitors; Thomas Lester, steward and clerk to the asylum; Miss Elizabeth Webb, matron.

H. M. Prison, near the north end of Huntingdon, in the parish of Great Stukeley, was completed for the reception of prisoners in the year 1828: it consists of a central building, containing the governor's office and chapel, three wings radiating from the centre and a range of buildings in front, which forms one side of the space, nearly square, contained within the boundary wall; the last mentioned range comprises the entrance, the governor's house and the turnkeys' apartments; the north-west and north-east wings are for male prisoners and south-west wing for females: the airing yards are disposed in the intermediate spaces; William Bruce Dyke, chief warden in charge; Rev. Joseph Malpas, M.A. chaplain; Herbert Lucas, surgeon.

The Huntingdon Town and County Hospital was erected in 1853 and enlarged in 1863, is on the Common, near the Great Northern Railway station: it is fitted with everything that can contribute to the comfort of its inmates: an addition for the benefit of the out-door patients, was made in 1863; and a commodious waiting-hall, with consulting-rooms for the medical men, dispensary, and committee-room, forms a wing to the original buildings; John Oldman, Herbert Lucas, William Waddell Ballard M.D. and Donald McRitchie M.B., C.M. medical officers; Hugh Miller, house surgeon; Rev. W. Gatty, hon. sec.; Rev. J. Pycock, chaplain.

PARLIAMENTARY REPRESENTATION OF HUNTS.

The borough of Huntingdon with Godmanchester, has returned one member only, the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Peel bart. O.C.B. of 9 Spring gardens s.w. Carlton club s.w. & Drayton, near Tamworth; & the county has returned two, the present members being Capt. William Henry Fellowes, of 20 Upper Brook street w.; & Lord Douglas Gordon, of 90 Piccadilly w. & Carlton club s.w.; but by the Redistribution of Seats Bill now passing through parliament, it is proposed to disfranchise the borough of Huntingdon, and that the county shall return two members in two divisions, viz. 1.—No. 1, the southern or Huntingdon division, comprising the sessional divisions of Leightonstone & Toseland; No. 2, the northern or Ramsey division, comprising the sessional divisions of Hurstingstone, Norman Cross & Ramsey

The places in each sessional division are given under the place giving name to the division in this directory

THE GEOLOGY OF HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

This county does not offer an inviting field for ordinary geological work, which is probably the reason why little has been published concerning it.

The southern and central portion of the county was examined by Mr. Howell, and his map was published by the Government Geological Survey in 1864. The northern portion was surveyed by Professor Judd, whose map, with an admirable descriptive memoir, appeared in 1872. A geological map of the county, however, was published as long ago as 1821 by William Smith, the "Father of English Geology."

The alluvium of the Bedford Level was described in the Geologist by Mr. C. B. Rose, and papers on this subject by the Rev. H. M. De La Condamine, Dr. Mitchell and Professor Seeley have appeared in the Geological Society's Journal.

The surface is low and undulating, with a gentle slope towards the Fens. On the west Keystone Toll-house is 245 feet above the sea, Elton 107 feet, Spaldwick 91 feet, Chesterton 64 feet, and Peterborough only 28 feet; Huntingdon is 45 feet, St. Ives 26 feet and Fenny Stanton 42 feet respectively above sea level.

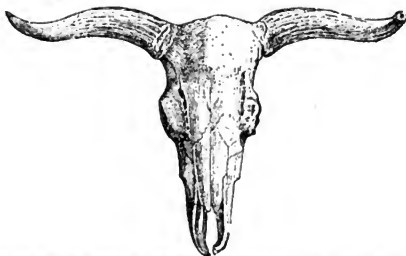

In examining the geological features, if we begin in the north-west, we shall find there the oldest and also the most varied rocks.

THE OOLITES.—Between Peterborough, Wansford and Elton, we have a very interesting expanse of several beds of the Inferior Oolite on the Huntingdonshire side of the Valley

Newton, and is well exposed in the Sibson tunnel. At the western end of the tunnel, near Wansford station, the whole series of beds, from the Great Oolite Limestone down to the thin representative of the Lincolnshire Limestone and Northampton Sand, may be seen.

The Great Oolite Limestone forms the steep escarpment of Alwalton Lynch, where it contains numerous bands of fossil oysters. The "Alwalton marble" was formerly dug here, but the pits are now closed: the stone was a hard, blue, shelly limestone, which took an excellent polish, but was not very durable. There is a petrifying spring here, which has formed a deposit of travertin, often encrusting tufts of grass, snail-shells &c. and covering them up; the same beds are traceable round to Elton in one direction, and on the east are finely exposed in the railway cuttings near Bottlebridge. The Great Oolite clays are often seen resting upon the limestone; they contain bands of ironstone balls.

The Cornbrash is a hard, blue limestone when dug at any depth, but it weathers light-brown at the surface; it is exposed in the valley of the Billing Brook, especially about Water Newton Lodge, and is here very fossiliferous; it is very hard, and is used for road-metal; the top is usually marked by a band of large rugose oysters—Ostrea Marshii: it forms a light red soil. There is a small inlet between Stilton and Yaxley, which is brought up by a fault. No fewer than 68 species of fossils have been found here, and the most delicate shells, often retaining their pearly lustre, are found in a perfect state.

Skull of the Urus or Wild Bull (Bos primigenius); Pleistocene and Recent Formations.

of the Nene. Crossing the river at Wansford we find ourselves on the Northampton Sand.—Following this bed southwards, past the Mill, we get a fair section in a small pit at New Close Cover. Here at the top is some brown and yellow sand full of plant remains, with white sand underneath. Returning, we trace the same sands past Stibington to Water Newton, where, with some associated beds of clay, they are dug in the brickyards.

The Lincolnshire Oolite Limestone.—In the Wansford stone-pits we have some good sections of this fine bed, which in Lincolnshire is 200 feet thick, and which is so largely worked for building purposes at Ketton, Ancaster &c. From the "Wood-pit," at Stibington, the late Dr. Porter collected about forty species of fossils: at Water Newton brickyard there is 4 feet of fine-grained oolitic limestone visible, with nodules of ironstone resting upon it. Here we are evidently near the "thin end of the wedge," for eastward of this point the limestone dies out altogether.

The Great Oolite.—All four members of this series are present. The lowest, or Upper Estuarine series, is clayey; above it we have the Great Oolite Limestone, then the Great Oolite clays, and lastly, another limestone band—the Cornbrash; all of these come on one above the other, overlying the beds of inferior oolite just described. The Upper Estuarine series is dug for brick-making at Water

Middle Oolites.—The Oxford Clay.—This great clay deposit, probably more than 500 feet thick, occupies the county to the exclusion of almost every other rock: to the north-east it passes under the Fens, of which, however, it constitutes the substratum, rising above it in island-like masses here and there; but even in the rest of the district it is generally so covered by the superincumbent boulder clay and gravels, as to be seldom exposed, even in the river valleys. The land it forms is mostly devoted to grazing, although there is some woodland, while of late years an increasing area has been brought under the plough.

Of the hard sandy beds at the base, known as the Kella-way's Rock, there are no good exposures. At Luddington brickyard light-blue Oxford clay is dug under 5 or 6 feet of drift to a depth of 30 feet.

Those characteristic fossils, Gryphaea dilatata and Belemnites Puzosianus, occur here; similar beds are seen at Great Gidding, Haddon, Standground, Woodstone and Fletton. In the various brick-pits south of Peterborough the dark-blue clays contain large quantities of fossil wood, either converted into jet or mineralized by iron pyrites: it is sometimes found in masses of large size, having evidently floated about on the deep sea, at the bottom of which the Oxford clay was being deposited, until, becoming water-logged, it sank to the bottom and was covered up. The teeth and spines of fishes also occur here. The same clay extends right down by Huntingdon past Kimbolton and St. Neots, and eastward by St. Ives into Cambridgeshire. In the Fen district deep trenches are dug through the surface peat and silt into the clay beds below, and the latter are then dug and spread out on the surface. At Ramsey, near the Railway station, it was formerly dug and burnt for ballast, a use to which the clays of this formation are frequently applied. At Ramsey Heights there are several brickyards at work, the Oxford clay being locally termed "galt;" in one of these peat is used for fuel. At Forty-foot Bridge a band of hard rock 8 or 10 inches thick is found at a depth of 5 feet. Ammonites Lumberti is common here. Conington and Holme brickyards, and indeed the brickyards generally over the region we have described, afford other sections of the bluish clays.

In the extensive excavations at St. Ives we find a rather pale bluish-grey fine clay, with occasional calcareous concretions, small crystals of selenite and lumps of pyrites; about 64 species of fossils from these pits are shown in the Woodwardian Museum at Cambridge, including 19 species of Ammonites; Gryphaea dilatata is also most abundant. Here may be seen one of those bands of impure limestone which occur in this district at various horizons in the Oxford Clay, and some of which have been considered representatives of the Coral Rag, of which the nearest undoubted exposures are at Upware, near Cambridge, and Stanton St. John's, near Oxford.

Thus we have in Huntingdonshire no clear line of division between the two great masses of the Oxford and Kimmeridge Clays. The St. Ives rock is also traceable at High Papworth, while a higher band was exposed in the railway cutting at Bluntisham, and a lower one at St. Neots. From the Oxford Clay, near the latter town, the remains of a large new species of reptile (Plesiosaurus Evansi) has been obtained.

The Loner Greensand.—This interesting deposit is comprised of brown or yellow sands, the tint being due to the presence of oxide of iron, which is sometimes absent when the beds are white: it forms a range of low hills which extend from Potton and Sandy, in Beds, by Everton and Gamlingay, past Gransden, Eltisley and Caxton; it has been worked for the valuable band of coprolites which it contains.

THE DRIFT.—The glacial deposit called the great chalky boulder-clay is of a bluish colour, and is crowded with masses of rock which often exhibit the polished and scratched appearance characteristic of glacier or ice-borne masses: it extends more or less over the whole of the county, and is often of great thickness. Masses of chalk and flint are abundant in it, with oolitic and liassic fossils, millstone-grit, sandstone, mountain limestone &c.; it seems to have been deposited in a shallow sea by a great glacier pushing down from the north. The valley gravels of the Nene are of later date; near Elton they have cemented together by the infiltration of calcareous matter so as to form indurated masses. At Overton Waterville numerous shells occur, with remains of the mammoth &c.

The Fens are formed of silt or warp, a fine mud deposited by the sea when the land was at a rather lower level than at present, with intercalated beds of peat, due to the growth and decay of mosses (Sphagnum) during long ages. Some of the old Fen lakes, as Whittlesea Mere, Ramsey Mere &c. have been drained of late years, and are now marked by patches of alluvium, so rich in shells as to constitute a very fertile soil.

Of the peat beds there are usually two, separated by marine silt. Trees of large size, as the oak, birch &c. are occasionally dug out of the peat. The remains of animals, which once roamed through these old forests are also found, as the wild ox, the Irish elk, the red-deer, bear, otter, beaver, wolf, fox &c. In the silt or "buttery clay" between the peat-beds, marine shells, such as the common cockle and oyster and a shell called Scrobicularia, are found, with many beautiful species of foraminifera. Drainage has often caused contraction of the peat &c. At Holme, an iron column erected on the foundation of the subjacent Oxford Clay shows that a contraction of the superficial deposits of the fens in that place, to the extent of seven feet, has occurred since 1845.

The flat bottoms of the valleys of the Ouse and Nene are covered with a fine black loam, deposited during overflows of the river; these flats are often under water in winter, but in summer they constitute admirable grazing grounds.

Mr. John Evans records no flint or stone implements from Huntingdonshire in his great book on the subject. We have heard from him, however, that stone tools of an early type have been lately found near Peterborough. All gravel pits should be searched for them, especially those on the sides of the valleys, about 40 or 50 feet above the present streams.

ABBOTS RIPTON is a parish and village 6 miles north from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely; it formerly belonged to the Abbots of Ramsay and thence took its name. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a low western embattled tower containing 3 bells; the church generally was restored by subscription in 1858, the roofs of the nave and south aisle were entirely restored in 1868 in remembrance of Frances Rooper, who died at Tunbridge Wells, June 6th, 1857, by her brother and sisters. There are sittings for 300. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £540, net yearly value £500, including glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1831 by the Rev. John George Rooper B.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. There is a small charity consisting of an acre of land, called Church Acre, which produces about £2 yearly. Ripton Hall is the residence of Capt. William Henry Fellowes M.P., J.P. Edward Fellowes esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are beans, wheat and barley. The parish contains (including the hamlet of Wennington) 3,998 acres; rateable value, £11,875; the population in 1881 was 392.

ABBOTTSLEY is a small village and parish on the borders of Cambridgeshire, on the road from St. Neots to Great Gransden, 3 miles north-west-by-west from Great Gransden, 4 south-east from St. Neots, 6 north-west from Potton and 9 north-west from Biggleswade, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Margaret is an ancient building of clunch and rubble: it is in the Early English style of the fourteenth century, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles, containing 5 bells and a clock: on the tower are four figures of kings; it was partially restored in 1854, when the nave was new roofed and open seats substituted for the old pews: in 1861 a new chancel and north porch were erected and other improvements carried out, under the superintendence of Mr. W. Butterfield, architect: the tower was restored in 1884, when the two figures on the north side which had fallen were replaced by others of a similar character, at a cost of £400 for the whole work, and a new weather-cock was placed on the conical leaden roof. The registers of baptisms and burials date from the year 1725, and marriages from 1754. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £145, including 130 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Balliol College, Oxford, and held since 1877 by the Rev. George Augustus Frederick Watson, fellow of the University of Bombay and late one of H. M.'s chaplains in India. The great and small tithes were commuted for land at the time of the enclosure of the parish. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The charities now (1885) amount to £28 yearly. The principal landed proprietors are the Master and Fellows of Queens' College, Cambridge, who are lords of the manor, Francis Pym esq. D.L., J.P. of Sandy, Captain Walter Henry Octavius Duncombe J.P. of Waresley Park, and Julius Alington esq. J.P. of Little Barford. There are also the Rectorial farm belonging to Balliol College, and the Vicarage farm. The land is arable. The soil is clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 2,110 acres; rateable value, £2,029; the population in 1881 was 451.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Lincoln.

ALCONBURY is a parish and large scattered village, 5 miles north-west from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Leightonstone, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The Alconbury brook flows through the village. The church of SS. Peter and Paul, a fine old building, of Barnack rag and rubble, supposed to have been built in the early part of the thirteenth century, consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with spire, containing 6 bells, recast in 1877 and a new one added: the church was thoroughly restored in 1877, under the direction of Mr. Ewan Christian, architect, at a cost of about £5,000, raised by voluntary subscriptions, and by the aid of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the Ely Diocesan fund; the lord of the manor also contributing largely towards it; the lower part of the tower was underbuilt, the pews replaced by open benches and an organ presented by (G. J. Rust esq., a memorial window to the late James Rust esq. was erected by subscription about 1877. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £6, comprising the parishes of Alconbury and Alconbury Weston, which are united for ecclesiastical purposes only, and known as Alconbury-cum-

Weston; the net yearly value is £280, including 191 acres of glebe, with a good residence, erected about 1877, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, and held since 1870 by the Rev. Robert Conway M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. George John Rust esq. D.L., J.P. of Alconbury House, who is lord of the manor, and the Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The parish contains 3,626 acres; rateable value £4,649; the population in 1881 was 689.

ALWALTON is a village and parish on the Great North Road, 17 miles north-west from Huntingdon, 4½ west from Peterborough, 2 south-west from Overton station on the North-Western railway, and bounded on the north by the river Nene which separates it from Northamptonshire; it is in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Andrew is a small cruciform structure of rubble with Barnack stone dressings, in the Norman, Early English and Decorated styles, with Perpendicular insertions, the earlier portions being combined in a most singular manner: it consists of lofty chancel, clerestoried nave, narrow aisles, south porch and a low western embattled tower with turret, containing 5 bells: the earliest portion of the structure is the north arcade, which has four semi-circular arches on round piers, the bases and capitals being considerably advanced in the Early English style, the architrave and dripstone being Norman: the south doorway, which is enriched with zigzag mouldings, exhibits a similar curious intermixture of styles: the tower is Transition Norman, the belfry stage being arcaded, but the battlements are a later addition: the chancel and transepts are mostly of Early Decorated character: the former retains piscina and three plain sedilia of Early English date, and has a low side window on each side: the font is also Early English: much of the building was modernized and the whole new roofed in 1840, when some interior details were introduced: a beam in the belfry bears the date 1674, and two of the bells are earlier than this. The earliest register dates from the year 1572: the earlier pages are much defaced, and the portion from 1681 to 1697 is lost. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted in 1805 for 176 acres of land, gross yearly value £174 with residence, in the gift of the Hon. C. W. Wentworth Fitzwilliam M.P., D.L., J.P. and held since 1853 by the Rev. Edward Gray M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. There is a small charity of £4 10s. being the interest of £60 left by Miss Anne Bayley 1753; £10 by the Rev. Timothy Neve, sometime rector, in 1730; and another sum of £10 left by Thomas Southgate, about the same time; the whole interest is distributed annually amongst the poor. On the banks of the Nene are found great blocks of stone, formerly worked and known as Alwalton marble, a hard blue shelly limestone susceptible of a high polish; there is also a petrifying spring here which has formed a deposit of travertine. The Dean and Chapter of Peterborough are lords of the manor. The principal landowner is the Hon. Charles William Wentworth Fitzwilliam M.P., D.L., J.P. whose pleasant mansion, Alwalton hall, is near the church. Alwalton castle, 1 mile north-east, is the name given to the site of a Roman camp. The soil is rich loam and the surface beautifully varied; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. The area is 1,040 acres; rateable value, £1,693; the population in 1881 was 318.

BARHAM is a parish 7½ miles north-west from Huntingdon, 4½ north from the Graffham station of the Midland railway, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Giles is a small but neat building of stone, chiefly of the Early English period, with some Norman details, consisting of chancel and nave, with north aisle, south porch and a bell turret on the western gable containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1597. The living is a vicarage, united in the year 1865 to that of Spaldwick, and now forming a consolidated benefice named Spaldwick-cum-Barham, joint gross yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1876 by the Rev. George Thomas Sharland M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, who resides at Spaldwick. This principal local charity consists of a rent-charge of £2 yearly, left by Francis Ladds in 1777 and distributed as follows:—10s. on Candlemas day, and a similar sum on St. Thomas' day to the poor in bread, and the residue on Christmas day in fuel; other lands produce about £5 yearly for the repair of the church. The parish also shares in the Goodwin charity (see Spaldwick). The Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor, which is within the soken of Spaldwick. The principal landowners are Col. Beadon and Mr. Robert Francis Earl. The soil is clay; subsoil, stiff clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 719 acres; rateable value, £857; the population in 1881 was 64.

BLUNTISHAM and EARITH.

BLUNTISHAM is a parish comprising the townships of Bluntisham and Earith, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, St. Ives union, Huntingdon county court district, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from St. Ives, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Huntingdon and $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from London. The river Ouse forms the south-east boundary of the parish. There is a station here on the railway, constructed by the Great Eastern Company in 1878 from St. Ives to Sutton (Cambridgeshire), where it joins the Sutton, Haddenham and Ely branch line. The church of St. Mary is a fine structure consisting of chancel, nave, with clerestory, aisles, north and south porches and an embattled western tower, with spire, containing 4 bells; the chancel, terminated by a triple gable of the Decorated period, is very remarkable; among the monuments it contains is one to Dr. James Knight, chaplain to George I. and rector of this place, who wrote the lives of Dean Colet and Erasmus, and died here in December, 1746. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £1,070, gross yearly value £1,190, including $\frac{1}{2}$ acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, and held since 1859 by the Rev. John Rumpf M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. Here is a spacious Baptist chapel erected in 1787 with excellent schoolroom attached and large burial ground. There is a reading-room in the centre of the village, established in 1883. There is a town estate, a mill and 15 acres producing £45 7s. 9d. yearly and charities for distribution of £10 yearly value. In the year 1741 an extraordinary hurricane passed over this village and in its track destroyed or unroofed many dwelling-houses, stables, barns and mills, and destroyed numerous stacks of hay and corn. The Dean and Chapter of Ely are lords of the manor, and the chief landowners are the trustees under the marriage settlement of the Rev. Edward Ansley Peck M.A. rector of Houghton, Charles Prentice Tebbutt esq. J.P. and Mr. John Beldam. The soil varies very much both in quality and value. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans: there are also large orchards. The area is 3,423 acres; rateable value, £7,380; the population in 1881 was 1,085, viz. Bluntisham 509, Earith 556.

Earith is a large township situated near the Cambridgeshire border of the county and the river Ouse, on the road to Ely, 6 miles east-north-east from St. Ives. The village is well paved, has many good buildings and is lighted with oil lamps. A considerable trade is carried on with the surrounding district in coal, timber and building materials. There is a handsome suspension bridge over the river. Fruit growing is becoming an important occupation in this district, and large quantities of potatoes are sent to the London markets. Here are chapels for Wesleyans, Particular Baptists and General Baptists and a Friends' Meeting House. There is a Temperance Society and Band of Hope. At the British school is a circulating library of 200 volumes; and there is also a reading room in the village established in 1883. Near this place are the remains of a camp supposed to be Roman and commonly called "the Bulwarks;" it is of a large size, and forms a quadrangle enclosed with bastions at each corner; a bronze figure of Jupiter, discovered here about the year 1820, is now in the British Museum, and Roman pottery has been found in considerable quantities. By the side of the river are some fine lands, often flooded in winter to the depth of a foot or more, and forming in the frosty season famous skating grounds, which are visited by thousands of people, special trains being often run from Cambridge for their use. Three fairs are held here annually, viz. on May 4th, July 25th and November 1, chiefly for cattle. The town estate of 15 acres produces £47 yearly and there is a dole of £13 yearly for the poor.

BRAMPTON is a parish and large village, 2 miles south-west from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The village consists of two streets, one lying north and south and the other extending at right angles westwards, terminating in the village green. A branch of the Midland railway from Kettering to Huntingdon has a station called Bucken station, 1½ miles from the village. The church of St. Mary situated on an elevated spot on the bank of the river Ouse, at the northern extremity of the village is a handsome edifice of brick, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, lofty clerestoried nave, aisles and north and south porches (the south porch being large with a very fine tracered door in good preservation) and a western embattled tower with pinnacles containing 5 bells, and there is also a sanctus bell; the chancel is Decorated; the tower bears the date 1635, and is of better composition than might be expected from that date: the font is octagonal, the bowl being ornamented with sculpture; the church is fitted with open benches, and was repaired in 1835—it was thoroughly and generally restored in 1878; at the east end of the south aisle is a monument to Sir Robert Bernard bart. who died in 1679; there are others to Brigadier-General Robert Bernard Sparrow, husband of the late Lady Olivia Bernard Sparrow, who died August 20, 1805, on board the ship in which he was returning to England from Barbadoes, and was buried at Tortola; their son, and daughter Millicent, Duchess of Manchester, who died November 21, 1848, and was buried at Kimbolton; the same monument records the death of Lady Olivia Bernard Sparrow, February 12, 1863; this lady occupied a high position in society and her constant piety and unbounded charity were well known. There are sittings for 900 persons. The register of baptisms dates from 1653; burials, 1658; marriages, 1675. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £90, net yearly value about £250, including 97 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1883 by the Rev. Henry Simcoe Budge M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There is a United chapel for Baptists and Independents, erected in 1865 from the designs of Robert Hutchinson esq. of Huntingdon, at a cost (including site) of £800; it is of white brick, with red brick and stone dressings, and is capable of seating about 300 persons. St. George's school, which is adjacent to the village, was founded by D. H. Hodgkinson M.D. for the purpose of forming a good Church of England Middle Class school. There are two charities; one, amounting to from £12 to £14 yearly, is the produce of 4 acres of land on Port Holme, left by Thomas Miller, who also left a close at the west end of the town, called "Cherry Orchard," containing 3½. 12P. This place was for years the residence of Samuel Pepys, author of "Pepys' Diary," and secretary to the Admiralty in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. Brampton Park, the residence of John and George Morgan esqrs. and the property of the Duke of Manchester, situate south-west of the village, is a stately yet light and picturesque edifice of red brick, in elegant but contrasted styles; the park embraces within its circuit a considerable extent of land, richly timbered. The Manor House, the residence of T. F. A. Burnaby esq. J.P. was entirely rebuilt in 1877, but the general character of the south front has been preserved. The Earl of Sandwich and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. the Earl of Sandwich, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Thomas Fowke Andrew Burnaby esq. BRINGTON is a parish and village 3 miles north-west from Kimbolton station on the Midland railway and 5½ miles north-west from Kimbolton, and 7 south-east from Thrapton, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Thrapton, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a western tower with a

Decorated parapet, and an octagonal spire relieved by three tiers of dormers on the cardinal faces; it contains 4 bells: in the chancel is an ambry, a curious recess divided by small pillars probably formerly a double piscina, and plain sedilia beneath one of the windows. The register dates from the year 1688. The living is a rectory with the chapelries of Bythorn and Old Weston annexed, tithe rent-charge £440, joint gross yearly value £860 with glebe and residence, in the gift of Clare College, Cambridge, and held since 1883 by the Rev. Thomas James Sanderson M.A. late fellow of that college. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. Messrs. Charles Lewin, Jonathan Lewin, Mrs. Mary Ann Lewin, and the rector as owner of the glebe, are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The parish contains 1,190 acres; rateable value, £1,079; population in 1881 was 169.

BROUGHTON is a parish and village 5 miles north-west from St. Ives and 5 north-north-east from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of All Saints, situated nearly in the centre of the village, consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with broach spire, containing 4 bells: there is a double piscina of rather remarkable character in the Early English style, a font of Early Norman date and a very fine Decorated window of three lights, at the east end; on the north side of the chancel is a monument to the Rev. Robert Hodson, upwards of sixty-one years rector of the parish; the church was restored in 1845, when the chancel was new roofed and a new vestry built at a cost of £300. The register dates from the year 1571. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £400, including 370 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1837 by the Rev. BUCKDEN is a large village and parish 61 miles from London, 4 miles south-west from Huntingdon and 5 north from St. Neots, on the London road by Biggleswade, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. A branch of the Midland railway from Kettering to Huntingdon has a station within a mile of the village. The river Ouse bounds the parish on the east and is crossed by a bridge to Offord Cluney where there is a station on the Great Northern railway. The church of St. Mary is a handsome edifice of stone, rebuilt in 1430, in the Perpendicular style and consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western embattled tower, with elegant spire, containing a clock and 5 bells: in the church is a monument to Robert Sanderson D.D. Bishop of Lincoln from 1660, who died, January 29, 1662-3, and is buried in the chancel, and there are also monuments to several other bishops of Lincoln. The register dates from about the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £350, including 81 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Henry Meux Roxby M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is a Wesleyan chapel and one for Baptists. The charities amount to £200 annually, half of which is derived from 47 acres of land and there are four almshouses erected by James South esq. with an endowment of £45 yearly. The chief object of interest here are the ruins of the palace of the Bishops of Lincoln, erected by John Russell, who filled the see from 1480 to 1496: it is a venerable brick building, now dismantled, consisting of two quadrangles, with a tower and gatehouse, and was formerly surrounded by a moat. Stirlow, the seat of the Rev. Henry Linton M.A. hon. canon of Christ Church, Oxford, is a handsome residence of rectangular form, situated in an extensive and well-wooded park. Buckden Towers erected in 1872 on the Palace grounds is the residence of Major Arthur Wellington Marshall J.P. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Canon Henry Linton M.A. Arthur John Thornhill esq. M.P., J.P. of Diddington hall, William Bowyer and Francis Green. The land is arable. The soil is clay; subsoil, strong clay. The area is 3,590 acres; rateable value, £5,554; population in 1881 was 1,044.

HARDWICK is a hamlet a quarter of a mile north.

the east end of the south aisle is a large mural tablet of marble, with long Latin inscription to John Driden, cousin of the poet, and grandson of Sir Robert Bevill above-mentioned, dated 1707. The register dates from the year 1734. The living is a rectory, to which the parish of Haddon was united for ecclesiastical purposes only, by an order in Council, dated March, 1863, of the joint net yearly value of £550 with residence, in the gift of the Marquis of Huntly J.P. and held since 1877 by the Rev. James Hunter Gandy M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. About a mile and a half from the village, in some fields called "the Castles," are the remains of a Roman encampment, where a quantity of very ancient coins and other relics have been dug up at various times; near the same spot there was found, in 1849, a huge stone coffin, nearly two tons in weight, containing the skeleton of a man more than six feet in stature, with the head removed from the trunk; it is now placed in the churchyard near the tower. The Marquis of Huntly J.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is very fertile; the subsoil is partly composed of gravel and stone and partly of strong clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,330 acres; rateable value, £2,020; the population in 1881 was 172.

COVINGTON is a parish and compact village on the Bedfordshire border, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles north-west from Kimbolton, 8 south-east from Thrapston, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The Midland railway passes through this parish. Near this parish is the three shire stone, marking the junction of the counties of Bedford, Northampton and Huntingdon. The church of St. Margaret (anciently All Saints) is a small building of stone in the Transition Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and a low western tower with pyramidal roof containing 3 bells: the north door has a quaint Norman design in the tympanum, representing two griffins beneath an enriched semi-circular arch: in the chancel is a fine restored triple lancet window, under which is a trefoil arched piscina: on the north side is an ambury: there was formerly a chapel on the south side of the nave, but the arch is filled in with masonry, pierced by a good Decorated window; adjoining is a small ambury: the font consists of two round basins with Norman mouldings, the lower being inverted: in a window of the chancel is a fragment of ancient stained glass representing the arms of Sir Richard de Bayeux, a Norman lord of the manor of Covington who sat for the county in two Parliaments, temp. Edward II.: the edifice was restored in 1882-3, at a cost of upwards of £1,000, raised chiefly by public subscription and the accumulated funds derived from church lands. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £100 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and held since 1865 by the Rev. Robert Lancaster Watson M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The lords of the manor are the Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam and Mr. William Fairry, concurrently. The principal landowners are the Duke of Manchester, the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, Messrs. W. & G. EYNESBURY is a village and parish adjacent to the town of St. Neots, being separated by a small stream called the Hen Brook, over which is a bridge; the principal portion of the parish is under St. Neots Local Board; it is bounded on the west by the river Ouse and is 9 miles south-west from Huntingdon and 8 south-east from Kimbolton, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. This place was once a Roman station. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles and an embattled western tower, erected in the seventeenth century, and containing 6 bells: there are two brasses to John Nicholson (whose family have been great benefactors to the parish) and Col. Humbley; the windows are mostly stained; and in 1858 the edifice was thoroughly restored and beautified; an organ was placed in the church in 1866: the churchyard is closed for burials, but a cemetery was consecrated for the use of the parish in 1868. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Sandwich, and held since 1851 by the Rev. William Maule M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, rural dean of St. Neots. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship here. Brick making is carried on. The village is thoroughly drained. The priory of St. Neots, formerly situated here, was originally founded by Leofric, as a cell of Ely, and again in 1113, as a cell of Bec, by Reisia FitzGilbert: at its dissolution there were twelve monks, and the revenues were estimated at £241; its site is still to be traced in a close called the Chapel field. Lieut.-Col. William Wellington Waterloo Humbley J.P., M.A., LL.D. of Cressener House, St. Neots, is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Earl of Sandwich, George Onslow Newton esq. D.L., J.P. of Croxton Park, St. Neots, and Francis Pym esq. D.L., J.P. of Sandy. The land is chiefly arable; the soil is part clay and a fertile gravelly loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans, and a good deal of ground is cultivated as market gardens. The area is 2,910 acres; rateable value, £7,530; the population in 1881 was 1,342.

FARCET is a village and chapelry in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, 3 miles south-east from Peterborough and 16 north-east from Huntingdon, situate on the old river Nene. The church of St. Mary is a small and very ancient building of stone, in the Gothic style, consisting of chancel, clerestory nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower, with pinnacles containing 3 bells: in the chancel are locker, piscina and sedilia, and there is a fine stained window at the east end; the pulpit dates from 1614; the structure was thoroughly restored in 1852 at the expense of the rector; the church plate includes an ancient and curious cylindrical chalice of silver; it has a carved rim and bears this inscription "The Towne of Farcet." The separate register dates from the year 1813; the previous registers are included in those of Stanground. The living is a vicarage, and was formerly annexed to Stanground, but by an order in Council, 27th February, 1882, is now separated, and the value of the tithe-rent charge is £361 12s. 6d. in the gift of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and now vacant. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. There is a small charity called "the Bellamy charity," amounting to £30 yearly for apprenticing boys. There is also a close of land now (1885) let at £12 yearly which is devoted to church funds and the poor of the parish. This parish includes a quantity of arable land and a great portion of the

FENSTANTON is a parish on the border of Cambridgeshire, one mile and three-quarters south from St. Ives, from which it is separated by the Ouse, on the road from Huntingdon to Cambridge, in the hundred of Toseland, union of St. Ives, county, court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a building of stone, in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower with lofty spire containing 5 bells: the chancel is a very fine specimen of Decorated work; the east window, which is large and of beautiful design, has been filled with stained glass by friends and parishioners, to the memory of the Rev. Stanley Walton M.A. late vicar, who died in May, 1875; the church will seat 520 persons. The register dates from about 1612. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £180, including 66 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and held since 1883 by the Rev. John Wilberforce Doran M.A. late scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge. There are Congregational and Calvinistic chapels; the Congregational chapel is a stone building, in the Early English style, and was erected in 1875. The town estate of 94 acres produces £142 yearly, which is for the use of the inhabitants. The Fenstanton Literary Institute, established in 1856, and rebuilt in 1880, by Thomas Cootes esq. J.P. comprises good billiard and reading rooms, with a library of 200 volumes; it has now (1885) 30 members, and is supported by subscriptions; it also serves as the head quarters of the local cricket club, and various societies. John Lewis flytche esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Thomas Cootes esq. D.L., J.P. and Wright Ingle esq. The various soils are a gravelly loam, clay and fenny loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley &c. The area is 2,616 acres; rateable value, £6,834; the population in 1881 was 1,067.

FLETON is a parish situated on the borders of Northamptonshire, in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, about one mile south from Peterborough, on the road to Whittlesea. This parish contains the Peterborough joint station of the Great Eastern railway, the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western, and the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland railways, and is bounded by the river Nene, which divides the two counties and is navigable from Sutton Wash, 30 miles eastward, and also westward to Northampton. The church of St. Margaret is an ancient structure of Barnack stone, consisting of chancel with north aisle of two bays, clerestoried nave with aisles, south porch and a western tower with octagonal broach spire containing 3 bells: the oldest features are two figures of saints embedded in the south wall of the chancel, and some singular and grotesque frieze designs inserted in the adjoining angle buttress, exhibiting interlaced carving: a cross of the same period with sculptured animals and the inscription "Radulph Filius Willelmi" much defaced, stands under the west window; the Norman remains, mostly of the time of Henry II. comprise the south and east walls of the chancel and the arcades of both north aisles, that of the nave formerly consisted of four arches, but during some alterations in the Decorated period, the two western-most arches and the pillar were removed and replaced by one wide arch (the deposited Norman capital being taken to the neighbouring church of Staunton, where in an inverted position it forms the base of a Decorated pier); the Transitional period is illustrated by two small shafts with floriated capitals in the chancel arch; and there are some Early English lancet windows and other details: the rest of the edifice, including the south aisle, tower, and the restored porch are Decorated work : in the chancel is a low-side or "confessional" window, a narrow road staircase remains in the chancel arch, and in the north aisle of the nave a small ambury; the church was partially restored in 1872. The register dates from the year 1616, but entries from 1606 have been copied into it; there are no entries from 1642 to 1648. The living is a rectory, yearly value £246 with residence, in the gift of the Earl Fitzwilliam, and held since 1836 by the Rev. William Judd Upton M.A. of New College, Oxford. The charities are as follows:—Francis and Jane Proby in 1711-12 left £200; Mary Walsham in 1744, a sum of £100; and Robert Wright in 1815, £10; the interest is distributed to the poor in bread and fuel. The trustees of the late Thomas Mills esq. are lords of the manor and the principal landowners. The soil is rich loam; subsoil, principally clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 780 acres; rateable value, £18,882; the population in 1881 was 1,841.

New FLETTON is a hamlet of this parish, and was incorporated with the borough of Peterborough in 1874. The Baptists have a place of worship here.

STEEPLE GIDDING is a village and parish: the village, situated on an eminence, is 10½ miles north-west from Huntingdon and about 9½ south-east from Oundle, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Leightonstone, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Matthew is an ancient structure in the Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower with spire containing 3 bells: it contains several monuments of the Cotton family, descendants of Sir Robert Bruce Cotton kt. and bart. the founder of the Cottonian library now in the British Museum; these include a marble bust in the chancel, representing of James I. and in 1624 M.P. for Lymeington, Hants, eventually took holy orders, and retiring with his family to this place, formed here a kind of Protestant monastery, the whole society numbering about 40 persons: he restored the church, then used as a barn, to its proper uses, and established in it and in his house a perpetual round of services continued through every hour of the day and night; this "nunnery" as it was called, attracted many visitors, and was visited by Charles I. in 1633; Ferrar died December 3rd, 1637; soon after his death both the church and the house were ransacked by the soldiers of the Parliament. The Rev. William Hopkinson M.A., J.P. of Sutton Grange, Wansford, Northants, is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 712 acres; rateable value, £816; the population in 1881 was 56.

GODMANCHESTER (from GUMCESTRE) is a borough and corporate town and parish, situated on either side of the Great North Road, on the River Ouse, half a mile south from Huntingdon and 59 miles from London, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The Great Eastern and Great Northern railways have a joint station here and the Midland also have a station, and the Great Northern one also at Huntingdon. This town was doubtless formerly the site of the Roman station Duroloponis; many coins and bones have been exhumed. The charter was granted to the borough by King James in the year 1604. The borough unites with the borough of Huntingdon in returning one member to Parliament, and is governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, four aldermen and twelve common councilmen, who also act as the sanitary authority. Godmanchester is an irregularly built town, consisting of several principal streets running into an open area near the centre of the town. The inhabitants are mostly engaged in agricultural pursuits, though many private families are resident. The town formerly was a place of some importance from the posting and coaching communication of the country: it is connected with Huntingdon by a raised causeway, completed in 1784, from the Bull Inn to Huntingdon bridge, a distance of about 810 yards, with a foot-path 10 feet wide; a free passage for the water during times of floods is preserved by the erection of two substantial bridges, each consisting of eight arches, whereby the inundations of former times are effectually prevented. In 1637 one Robert Cooke, in attempting to pass over the causeway during a flood, fell into the water and with difficulty escaped being drowned; he afterwards purchased the fee-simple of the Causeway home, and by will, having first bequeathed a rent-charge of £5 yearly to be distributed amongst the poor of Huntingdon, left the residue of the profits of the land for the repair of the causeway and bridges; in the wall of the bridge nearest Godmanchester is this inscription:—

"Robertus Cooke, ex aqua emersus, hoc viatoribus sacrum, 1637."

The church of St. Mary is a fine building of stone, in the Perpendicular style of the fourteenth century, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, north and south porches and an embattled western tower with pinnacles and spire containing 8 bells, the tenor weighing 21 cwt. :

the tower and spire were not built until the seventeenth century; the whole edifice was restored under the direction of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A. in the year 1853, at an outlay of nearly £800, raised by subscription. The register dates from the year 1604. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from 187 acres of glebe £400 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, and held since 1874 by the Rev. Henry Hart Chamberlain M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. There is a Baptist chapel, and a Particular Baptist chapel built in 1815; attached to the latter is a Sunday school-room, built by subscription in 1868, capable of holding 200 Sunday scholars; in front of the chapel is a burial ground which has ceased to be used. The reading room, established in 1859, and situated in Post street, is well supplied with newspapers and has a library of 700 volumes. There are four almshouses in Pinfold lane, three of which were erected at the expense of Mrs. Barbary Manson in 1738; they were rebuilt in 1859, and S. Bates esq. gave additional ground and added another house: there are also four almshouses in East Chadley lane, built in 1723 with money given by John Dryden esq. and rebuilt in 1853. Banks' charity of £12 yearly and Dryden's and Fisher's charity of £20 yearly are for apprenticing poor children. The Corporation are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the trustees of the late Miss Jackson and Henry Edward Sweeting esq. The borough is co-extensive with the parish. The area is 4,659 acres; rateable value, £16,625; the population in 1881 was 2,188.

GRAFHAM is a parish and scattered village $\frac{1}{2}$ miles by bridge road east from Kimbolton and 63 from London, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union of St. Neots, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. A branch of the Midland railway from Kettering to Cambridge has a station here. The church of All Saints is a fine structure of cobble stone with free stone dressing and details, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with stair turret at the south east, and square pointed pinnacles, the shafts being half embedded in the central partition which rises octagonally for a short distance, and is surmounted by a lofty broach spire relieved by two tiers of dormers: it contains 3 bells, in the chancel is a fine double piscina: the north aisle has an arcade of four arches, and at its east end are the entrance and steps to the rood-loft, and a small projecting piscina: the south aisle has two arches only, above which in the roof are two curious dormer windows; at the east end is a piscina. There are sittings for 230 persons. The register dates from 1555. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £176, including glebe, in the gift of the Duke of Manchester, and held since 1853 by the Rev. Benjamin Hale Puckle B.A. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge J.P. There is a small Baptist chapel at East Perry part of a hamlet 2 miles south; West Perry, which forms the greatest portion, is in Great Staughton. There are charities derived from land; Elizabeth Forney in 1703 bequeathed £100, the proceeds to be applied for the benefit of the poor and repair of the church. This sum was increased by her nephew John Bigg in 1747 to £150, which was laid out in land in the parish of Buckden; afterwards exchanged by the Enclosure Commissioners for other land in Grafham,

GREAT GRANSDEN is a village of considerable size and an extensive parish, 7 miles south-south-east from St. Neots and 4 from Gamlingay station on the Bedford and Cambridge railway, in the hundred of Toseland, union of Caxton and Arrington, county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situate on the borders of Cambridgeshire. The church of St. Bartholomew is a handsome edifice of stone, in the Perpendicular style, erected in the year 1340, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a western embattled tower with spirelet, containing 6 bells and a clock with chimes and mechanism for playing five different tunes: the church was thoroughly restored in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, when the north porch was rebuilt and organ chamber added; the pulpit is very handsome and is said to have been formerly in the University church of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge; the screen which divided the chancel and nave is now placed in the organ chamber. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £102, gross yearly value £200, including 93 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Clare College, Cambridge, and held since 1834 by the Rev. Arthur Jonathan Edmonds M.A. of that college. There is a small Baptist chapel with a yearly endowment of £60. Here is an institution known as the Gransden Union Society: the building, erected in 1872 at the expense of T. V. Webb esq., consists of large reading-room, smoking and recreation rooms, and has a piece of land adjoining for out-door amusements; the reading-room is used for meetings and concerts, and is well supplied with the London

HEMINGFORD GREY is a parish in the hundred of Tosteland, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, a mile and a half south-west from St. Ives, 4 miles south-west from Huntingdon, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Ouse. The poet Cowper wrote the poem "The Dog and the Water Lily" when on a visit here. The church of St. James is a very ancient structure, in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoned nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles containing 6 bells, and a new clock was placed in 1884, at a cost of £100; the bells were relung in 1881, at a cost of £42, and a chiming apparatus was put up in 1875, at a cost of £8; the tower was formerly surmounted by a spire, which was blown down September 3, 1741, but the base of the spire still remains: in 1859 the church was thoroughly restored, at a cost of nearly £1,200, when the porch, north aisle and vestry were built; the windows, organ, font, and fittings generally are modern, the latter having been presented by Mrs. Geldart; the stained east window was erected to the memory of L. Laurence esq. by parishioners and friends; the south chancel window was erected by Mrs. Laurence as a memorial to her late husband; over the communion table are the Lord's Prayer and Belief, beautifully painted in ancient letters by Mrs. C. F. Hayter, daughter of the Rev. Peregrine Curteis LL.B. the late vicar, who also worked and presented the communion table-cloth; within the rails is a tablet of white marble to James Johnson LL.D. Chancellor of Ely, with a Latin inscription; he died in February, 1727, aged 55; there are also monuments of the Greene and Margetts families which latter has been established here many years. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1673; marriages and burials, 1674. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value from 70 acres of glebe, £208 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Peregrine Curteis LL.B. rector of Branstons, Lincolnshire, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Peregrine Edward Curteis M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. here is available for 450 inmates. The water mill in this parish is of great antiquity, having been first erected in the reign of Richard I. by Reginald de Grey whose name appended to this manor and parish distinguishes it from Hemingford Abbots. The Manor House, the residence of Robert King esq. was at one time a place of considerable extent and importance; the inner walls are of great thickness, and are pierced in various places with Norman doorways and windows. This was the birthplace and residence of the Misses Gunning, daughters of John Gunning esq. of this place, so celebrated for their beauty; Maria, the elder, married in 1752, George William, sixth earl of Coventry; Elizabeth, created May 4, 1776, Baroness Hamilton, married in 1752 James, sixth duke of Hamilton; and in 1759, John, fifth duke of Argyll. Miss Mitchell and Captain Douglas in right of his wife, sister of the former lady, are joint owners of the manorial rights, and with John Hovenden, esq. and Arthur John Thornhill esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Didlington Hall, are the principal landowners. The soil on the north of the Cambridge road is gravelly, and on the south is a strong loam. The crops are wheat, barley and market garden produce. The area is 728 acres; rateable value, £5,282; the population in 1881 was 881, including 125 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

HOLME is a parish (formerly united to Glatton) in Norman Cross hundred, Peterborough union and county court district, rural deanery of Leightonstone, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, 6½ miles south from Peterborough, and about 10 by rail, 1½ by road north from Huntingdon. The parish extends eastward into the fens, and includes a great part of what was formerly Whittlesea Mere, which was drained in 1853, and has since been brought into cultivation. The Great Northern railway passes through this parish and has a station, and the Ramsey branch railway forms a junction here with the Great Northern. The church of St. Giles, rebuilt and enlarged in 1862, is an edifice of stone, in the Gothic style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, porch and a bell turret on the western gable, containing 2 bells: the pulpit is of alabaster: some Norman pillars and arches from the old building were replaced on the rebuilding of the church. The register dates from the year 1683. The living is a vicarage, title rent-charge £195, net yearly value £220, including 4 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of W. Wells esq. of Holme Wood, and held since 1881 by the Rev. James William Borthwick Laurie M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The poor here have the benefit of some considerable charities derived from land purchased with bequests by Sir John Cotton bart. and his grandson, amounting to £128, and £5 10s. of William Henson, of Glatton: out of the former, a sum of about £60 yearly is appropriated to the boys' school. Holme Wood, a large and spacious mansion of red brick, standing in grounds of 9 acres, is the seat of William Wells esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chiefly fen-peat, subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and mangold wurtzel. The area is 4,300 acres; rateable value, £8,679; the population in 1881 was 629.

HOLYWELL-cum-NEEDINGWORTH.

HOLYWELL is a parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, 2½ miles east from St. Ives, and is situated on the north bank of the Ouse, which here separates this county from Cambridgeshire; there is a ferry across the river. The church of St. John is a building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower, containing 4 bells, situated on an eminence which overlooks the meadows bordering on the Ouse. The register dates from the year 1667, some entries being the autograph of Thomas Tenison, Archbishop of Canterbury 1695-1716, once rector of this parish. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £4, net yearly value £300, including 424 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1875 by the Rev. Charles Henry Williams Hoskyns M.A. of University College, Durham. This village derives its names from a well or spring which rises in the churchyard, and which was once much frequented by religious devotees; the Rev. S. B. Beckwith, formerly a rector of the parish, had the well arched over in 1847. Many fragments of Roman pottery have been dug up here. The old manor house is now occupied 'as a farmhouse. The trustees of the late Robert Sandifer are lords of the manor. The Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. the Rev. Charles H. W. Hoskyns M.A. rector, the trustees of the late Robert Sandifer, the trustees of the late Henry H. Harris esq. A. Jones esq. and John Osborn Daintree esq. J.P. of Swavesey manor, are the principal landowners. The soil of the parish varies, partly a rich loam and partly gravelly, some stiff clay and some portion marshy or fen land. The area is 2,792 acres; rateable value, £5,978; the population in 1881 was 726.

Letters arrive by cart from St. Ives. WALL LETTER BOX cleared at 6.15 p.m.; sundays at 9.30 a.m.

Needingworth is a large hamlet of this parish, 2 miles east-north-east from St. Ives, on the road to Ely from St. Ives; it was almost destroyed by a fire which broke out on the 16th September, 1847. The 'Baptists have a chapel here, erected in 1861. Here was born Sir Ambrose Nicholas, who was apprenticed to a skinner and was made Lord Mayor of London in 1526.

HOUGHTON is a parish situated on the north bank of the Ouse, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles east from Huntingdon and $\frac{1}{2}$ west-north-west from St. Ives. The church of St. Mary, an ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style, consists of chancel, nave with clerestory, north aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles and spire containing 5 bells, which in 1878 were taken down and rehung at a cost of £70: the chancel, restored in 1870, is probably the most ancient portion of the building, and retains an elegant piscina and a stone seat in the Early English style: in 1870-1 the church underwent a thorough repair, the walls being all repointed and the flooring renewed at a cost of £200. The register dates from the year 1633. The living is a rectory, net yearly value about £500 with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Manchester, and held since 1846 by the Rev. Edward Ansley Peck M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Rev. John Walker Pulleyn is curate in sole charge. Here is a small chapel, built in 1840 at the expense of the late Pottto Brown esq. J.R. and the late Joseph Goodman esq. and used in common by Congregationalists and Baptists. There is a Mutual Improvement Society, established in 1850, which has a library of 200 volumes, and is well supplied with the daily papers and

HUNTINGDON.

HUNTINGDON, a parliamentary and municipal borough, a polling place for the county, county and market town, the head of a union and county court district, lies pleasantly on the left bank of the Ouse, over which is a fine stone bridge, erected previous to the year 1259, connecting it with Godmanchester. The town has the advantages of being on three lines of railway, the main line of the Great Northern bringing it within an hour and a quarter of London, from which it is distant 59 miles, and within half an hour of Peterborough, distant 19 miles. There are also branch lines of the Great Eastern to Cambridge (15 miles), and of the Midland to Kettering, where it joins the main line, there are three stations, two situated on the Common towards Hinchinbrook and one for Godmanchester immediately over the bridge. The Ouse connects the town with the port of Lynn. The town is in the hundred of Leightonstone, the archdeaconry and rural deanery of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, and consists of one principal street, called the "High Street," which extends nearly a mile in length, widening at about its centre into a broad market place, with several smaller streets at right angles branching from it. The Roman road "Ermine Street" passes through the town, the old name being retained for the northern part of the High street. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, drained, and abundantly supplied with water; it is governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors, who also act as the urban sanitary authority. The parliamentary borough of Huntingdon, to which is united that of Godmanchester, used to return two members to Parliament, but under the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," it now returns but one. In Huntingdon there are now four parishes, All Saints, St. John's, St. Mary's and St. Benedict's, though there were anciently many more. In the thirteenth century the town was visited by the Plague, the ravages of which left a fourth part of it without inhabitants, and the survivors destitute, in a great degree, of all means of subsistence; at a later period some alteration was made in the course of the river, which is said by Sir Robert Cotton to have contributed to the decay of the town; but in 1530 when Leland flourished it had greatly decreased, and it is probable that it never recovered the prosperity which it enjoyed before the pestilence.

There are at present two ancient churches left standing:

All Saints, which occupies one side of the market place, and St. Mary's, which stands midway between it and the bridge.

Of the original foundation of All Saints no account has been discovered, but it would appear, from a portion of the tower, now used as a baptistery, to have taken place in Norman times; the chancel is Early English, but the main structure is in the Late Perpendicular style, dating from about the reign of Henry VII. and rebuilt in 1620; it was restored under the direction of Sir G. G. Scott B.A. when new roofs of oak were fixed, and the old carving, remarkable for its richness and vigorous spirit, retained wherever possible, or faithfully reproduced; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, handsome south porch and a fine western tower of Perpendicular date, containing 4 bells; there are several stained windows, a pulpit of richly-carved alabaster round which runs an elaborate railing of metal work, in which a combination of copper, brass and tin has been very tastefully employed, the whole resting on a stone base; the font is of carved stone supported on columns of jasper, Irish and foreign marbles; there is a large and very powerful organ, with three rows of keys and containing between thirty and forty stops, and much admired for the beauty and delicacy of its tone; the stalls are of carved oak, interspersed with walnut and cedar, a rearedos of carved oak, enriched with figures, niches and canopies, has recently been erected: the vestry has been enlarged and ornamented with some good carving; the church has sittings for about 500 persons. The registers of the parish of St. John Baptist, brought here at the demolition of the church of that name, date from 1585; those of All Saints from 1558; the celebrated entry of the baptism of Oliver Cromwell occurs in the register of St. John's under the date of 1599, and there is a mention, about twenty years later, of his having done penance for some improper conduct. The name of Cromwell frequently occurs: Robert Cromwell, father of the Protector, was buried in the church, June 24, 1617: there is also mention made of the resting within its walls of the body of Mary Queen of Scots on its way from Peterborough Cathedral to Westminster Abbey, to which latter place it was removed by order of her son James I.

In the year 1668 the parishes of All Saints and St. John were united; the living is a rectory, net yearly value £200, in the gift of the Ven. Archdeacon Vesey LL.D. and held since 1879 by the Rev. John Fyock M.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge.

The chapel of St. John the Baptist, built by the late Lady Olivia Bernard Sparrow, Brampton Park, upon the site of the old theatre, and consecrated in 1866, is a plain edifice of white brick, in the Norman style, with a turret containing 1 bell; at the east end is a reredos of carved stone surmounted by an elegant rose window: since the death of the foundress, it has been constituted an independent chapel, but without endowment of any kind: it is supported entirely by the offertory and the rent of some of the sittings: the seats are placed stall-wise, as in collegiate chapels, and there are 430 sittings: the chapel has been held since 1866 by the Ven. Francis Gerald Vesey LL.D. of Trinity College, Cambridge, archdeacon of Huntingdon.

St. Mary's church is said by Speed to have been the Mother Church of Huntingdon: it probably occupies the original site of a priory of Austin Canons, founded here in 1140 by Eustace de Leveto, and seems to have been used first as a parochial church on the removal of the priory to the east end of the town in the reign of Stephen: in July, 1607, the ancient structure fell down, but in March of the following year the present church was commenced and finished in 1620, and is a fine structure, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower, of Perpendicular date, with crocketed pinnacles and buttresses, enriched with panelling and niches, and containing 8 bells, presented by Mr. M. E. Maill in 1876: the nave is divided from the aisles by four arches on each side, supported by round and octagonal columns, some of the piers, as well as the chancel, exhibiting portions of Early English and Decorated work: in 1876 the church was furnished with open oak seats: the nave and the chancel roofs and the stalls in the chancel are also of oak; the stained east window, a triplet, was the gift of Archdeacon Vesey in memory of his father, brother and infant daughter: there is a handsome stone pulpit, the gift of the late Earl of Sandwich: the font is Early English, with a plain octagonal bowl, resting on clustered shafts; the whole building was restored in 1876, as before, under the direction of Mr. A. W. Blomfield M.A. at a cost, exclusive of special gifts, of over £2,000: there is a remarkable monument to the family of De Carcazonett, erected in 1749, and one erected by the officers of the 31st (Huntingdonshire) Regiment, now forming the first battalion of the 70th (East Surrey) Regiment, to the memory of their comrades who fell in the Crimea war. The church has sittings for 550 persons. The register of St. Mary's dates from the year 1593 and that of St. Benedict from 1574. The register of the united parishes begins in 1692. The living of St. Mary is a vicarage, with the rectory of St. Benedict annexed, the rent-charge £12, net yearly value, including a bequest left by George Sayer for reading daily prayers, about £210, with 21 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Miles Atkinson, jun. M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford.

A lectureship, yearly value £60, was founded by Mr. Fishburn in 1625, under the patronage of the Mercers' Company: the founder was a native of this town, born of poor parents, but having afterwards made his fortune in London, he bestowed this gift upon the inhabitants and left other charities: the Rev. John William Barke M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge, chaplain to the Earl of Tankerville, is the present lecturer, and preaches every Sunday afternoon at All Saints and on alternate Sunday evenings at St. Mary's.

The Catholic chapel of St. Michael the Archangel, situated at New Town, is a commodious iron structure capable of holding about 90 people and was erected in 1872: the Rev. Patrick Duffy is the resident priest: the Presbytery was erected in 1879.

Trinity Nonconformist church, in High street, which serves for the united church of Baptists and Congregationalists is a large and imposing structure of brick and Ketton stone, with dressings of Bath stone, in the Early Decorated style, erected in 1853, at a cost of nearly £12,000, and opened September 16, in that year, and consists of apsidal, chancel, nave, aisles and a tower with spire, reaching a total height of 181 feet: the total length of the building being 114 feet: in the basement, besides eight good class-rooms, library, warming chamber and lavatories, there is a large school-room 60 feet by 34 feet. The church will seat about 1,000 people.

The Wesleyan chapel, in High street, is a brick building capable of seating about 280 persons. The brethren have a meeting-room in High street.

There are four churchyards in Huntingdon, now closed by Act of Parliament, which are ornamented with borders and beds of flowers.

The Cemetery, situated in New Town, is tastefully laid out and beautifully planted with shrubs and flowers: the two chapels form a single group of buildings, and are constructed of Norfolk rubble with stone dressings: at the north-west angle is a small bell-turret with spirelet: there is also a porter's lodge and committee-room: the chapels and other buildings were erected and the grounds laid out from the designs of Mr. Robert Hutchinson, architect, Huntingdon: the cemetery is under the control of a burial board of 9 members.

St. John's Hospital was founded in the reign of Henry II. by David, Earl of Huntingdon, afterwards King of Scotland, for the maintenance and relief of poor people and the support of a Grammar school: the charity now consists of eight almshouses for eight widows, each of whom receives five shillings per week.

The Grammar School, originally the chapel attached to St. John's Hospital, was beautifully restored in 1878 by Dion Boucault esq. at a cost of £900, in memory of his son, killed in the Abbots Ripton railway accident and interred in the Huntingdon cemetery: the building had been encased in brick, probably in Oliver Cromwell's time, and when this was removed a very handsome Norman doorway was discovered: the chapel must have been of much larger dimensions formerly, as traces of north and south aisles were discovered: the alterations were carried out under the superintendence of Mr. Robert Hutchinson, architect and town surveyor: the Grammar school house has also been restored and enlarged: the master of the hospital is entitled to retain £50 out of the funds of the hospital for his own use, and has to pay £100 yearly to the head-master of the Grammar school: this school has produced many men of political or ecclesiastical eminence: Oliver Cromwell received his early education here, and the house in which he was born stood about 200 yards from the school: the Rev. Thomas Hodgson M.A. is the head-master.

The Town Hall is an edifice of brick of two storeys; the ground floor contains civil and criminal courts, where the assizes, quarter sessions and county courts are held, and in the upper portion of the building are comprised a council chamber, grand jury room, and a fine assembly room with two ante-rooms adjoining: in these rooms are some fine pictures, including full-length portraits of George III. and George III. with their queens, said to be by Allan Ramsay; John fourth Earl of Sandwich by Gainsborough; the late Sir F. Pollock by Pickersgill; General Peel by Sir F. Grant; and also a portrait of Sir Lionel Walden, who founded a school in this town, by Sir Godfrey Kneller.

The Corn Exchange, a building of red brick with stone dressings, the property of the Earl of Sandwich, is for the use of the merchants and farmers attending Huntingdon market, from the designs of Mr. Hutchinson, the county and borough surveyor: it consists of a hall 65 feet long and 34 feet wide, with open-timbered and glass roof, a gallery at one end and two committee rooms at the other end: the market day for corn is on Saturday.

H.M. Prison, occupying an open situation near the north end of the town, in the parish of Great Stukeley, is the only prison in the county, and was completed for the reception of prisoners in the year 1828: it is surrounded by a boundary wall 18 feet in height, and consists of a central building containing the governor's office, chief warden's apartments, magistrates' room and chapel, three wings radiating from the centre, and a range of buildings in front, comprising the principal entrance, the governor's house and the turnkeys' apartments: the north-west and north-east wings are occupied by male prisoners and the south-west by females: there are also spacious airing yards: the prison will hold altogether about 100 criminals.

The Militia Barracks, situated near Ambury hill, and erected in 1852, form a quadrangular pile of buildings, constructed of brick with red dressings, from designs by Mr. Robert Hutchinson, of Huntingdon, and comprise armoury, magazine, stores, hospital and apartments for the staff of the Militia, 5th battalion King's Royal Rifles, consisting of the sergeant-major, quartermaster-sergeant and eight other non-commissioned officers, the residences being arranged in flats: there is also a spacious drill ground and sheds, affording ample space for 400 men on parade.

The Literary and Scientific Institution, established in 1841, has a library of 2,400 volumes, reading, conversation and billiard rooms: there is also a collection of curiosities and philosophical apparatus, formerly the property of the late R. Fox esq. surgeon, of Godmanchester, who was the founder of the institution: the collection was purchased by subscription after his death and placed in the building as a testimonial to his memory.

The Socrates Lodge of Freemasons, No. 373, holds its periodical meetings at the George hotel.

Huntingdon has two extensive breweries, the principal of which, situated in the High street, is in the occupation of Messrs. Marshall Brothers; there is also an iron foundry, and works for the manufacture of patented perforated bricks, besides an oil mill, and a large flour mill, between the river and the Great Eastern railway, belonging to Messrs. Browns' and Goodman; Wood and Ingram's nurseries in St. Germain street and the adjoining village of Brampton and at St. Neots are about 100 acres in extent, and contain an immense stock of fruit and forest trees, ornamental trees and shrubs, evergreens, roses, stove and greenhouse plants of the choicest kinds, the market for which has to be found not merely in this and surrounding counties, but in nearly all parts of the world: they were established 150 years ago by a Mr. Wood of the same family who raised the celebrated Huntingdon elm: in addition to their large nursery business, this firm has an extensive agricultural and horticultural seed trade, and has erected a range of warehouses for its development.

Fairs are appointed to be held on the Saturday before Michaelmas day, the third Saturday in November, the Tuesday before Easter and the second Tuesday in May, but are now very little used.

The Archdeaconry Library, in Princes street, founded by Archbishop Wake when Bishop of Lincoln, about 1716, and consisting of about 600 volumes, is for the use of the clergy of the archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and was originally kept at Buckden Palace, the ancient seat of the bishops of Lincoln.

There are charities amounting to £47 for distribution in bread, fuel and clothing let by several donors.

The Town and County Hospital, erected in 1853 and enlarged in 1863, occupies a prominent site upon the Common, near the Great Northern Railway station: it is of brick and stone, and has been enlarged for the benefit of the outdoor patients, a large waiting hall, with consulting rooms for the medical men, dispensary and committee room, form a wing to the original buildings: the interior is well arranged and contains 42 beds, the yearly average number of in-patients is about 230, and of out-patients 840.

The Huntingdonshire Agricultural Society, supported by annual subscriptions of ten shillings and upwards, is in a flourishing state, and prizes are awarded annually to exhibitors of live stock and for the best ploughing and draining.

The Huntingdon County Cricket Club, which includes among its members many of the resident gentry, meets here; the cricket ground is about six acres in extent, and is kept in excellent condition; there is a handsome pavilion, presented to the members by Messrs. Marshall Brothers, the extensive brewers of this town; the club is managed by a committee.

The race-course, situated about five minutes' walk from the market place, is over two miles in circumference, and is surrounded by the Ouse: the races take place in July and extend over two days.

Henry of Huntingdon, the chronicler, archdeacon of Huntingdon in 1145 and canon of Lincoln, was born in Huntingdon, and the poet Cowper resided here from 1765 to 1767, when he removed to Olney, in Bucks.

The entire area of Huntingdon is 983 acres; rateable value, £19,240; the population of the four parishes in 1881 was viz.: All Saints, 403; St. Benedict, 724; St. John, 1,668, including 191 officers and inmates in the workhouse, and 52 in the Militia depot; St. Mary, 1,433, including 37 in the County Hospital; total population of the municipal borough in 1881, 4,228, and of the parliamentary ward, 6,417.

HUNTINGDON, the seat of the Earl of Sandwich, lies in the parishes of St. Mary and St. John, Huntingdon. The mansion is a very fine building of stone in the Elizabethan style, and was chiefly erected in that reign on the site of the ancient Benedictine nunnery of St. James (removed here from Eltesley, Cambs. in the reign of William I.) by Sir Henry Cromwell, who had the honour of receiving Queen Elizabeth here in 1554. Sir Oliver, his eldest son, uncle to the Protector, entertained King James I. while on his way from Scotland to London to take possession of the throne of England in 1603. The courtyard is entered by a very fine and ancient arched gateway.

OLD HURST, formerly Woldhurst, is a parish, situated on the road from St. Ives to Ramsey, 4 miles north from St. Ives, in the union of St. Ives, hundred of Hurstingstone, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church or more properly the chapel of St. Peter is a small edifice in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave and a western tower containing 2 bells: an ancient screen which separated the chancel and nave has been restored, and the jambs of the east window have been beautifully painted with representations of angels, and dossal hangings have also been presented: a beautiful pillar piscina of pure Norman work was found during the restoration embedded in the wall and has been restored to its ancient place; the doorway is particularly fine, as also are the windows on the south side: the seats for the choir are very ingeniously formed by lowering the sill of the chancel windows: the whole church was restored in 1868, at a cost of £400, under the direction of W. White esq. architect: the church was formerly larger, the pedestal of one of the pillars of an aisle arcade now lies in the churchyard. The register of baptisms dates from 1682; marriages, 1653; burials, 1691. The living is a chapelry annexed (together with Wood Hurst) to the vicarage of St. Ives, in the gift of Adams Joseph, Stag & Hounds F. H.
 Beutley George, pig jobber

WOOD HURST is a parish 4 miles south-west from Somersham station, 4 north from St. Ives, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church or more properly chapel of St. John Baptist is a building in the perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, south aisle and a wooden turret over the western gable containing 3 bells: the chancel was rebuilt by the late Sir J. H. Pelly bart. impropror and lord of the manor, and the whole church was restored in 1871, at a cost of £500: a painted reredos representing the Crucifixion with figures of St. Mary and St. John was added in 1879. The register of baptisms dates from 1682; marriages, 1680; burials, 1690. The living is a chapelry annexed (together with Old Hurst) to the vicarage of St. Ives, in the gift of the Ansel family, and held since 1866 by the Rev. Charles Dashwood Goldie M.A. late scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge; the value of the portion of the joint benefice belonging to Wood Hurst is a corn rent, equivalent to 210 bushels and three-tenths of a quart, paid to the vicar by the impropror. Here is a Union Baptist and Congrega-

KEYSTON is a parish and village, 4 miles south-east from Thrapston, 7½ north-west from Kimbolton and about 2½ miles north-east from Raunds station on the Midland railway, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situate on the Northampton border of the county. The church of St. John the Baptist is a building of stone, of the fourteenth the Ansel family, and held since 1866 by the Rev. Charles Dashwood Goldie M.A. late scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge; it augments the value of the joint benefice by the rent of 57s. 11s. 20p. of land lying in the parish. "The most remarkable thing near to Old Hurst," says Gough's Camden, "is a very large square stone as you go to St. Ives, with a very ancient inscription not now legible; it is supposed the hundred of Hurstingstone took its name from this town and stone." In the county maps this stone is called "the Abbot's chair;" by some antiquaries it is considered to be part of the base of an ancient cross; local tradition asserts that Mother Shipton in the time of Henry VIII. uttered some of her prophecies from this chair. James Montagu esq. of Elm, Isle of Ely, who is lord of the manor, and Trinity Hall, Cambridge, are the principal landowners. The soil is a stiff clay; subsoil, yellow clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and peas. The area is 1,350 acres; rateable value, £1,152; population in 1881 was 124.

KIMBOLTON is a parish and market town on the Bedfordshire border, 11 miles west from Huntingdon, 8 north-west from St. Neots and 63 from London, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situated on a stream named the Kim, running into the Ouse: the Kettering and Cambridge branch of the Midland railway has a station 2½ miles north-by-west from the town; the Duke of Manchester takes the title of Baron Kimbolton from this town; the streets are lighted with gas. The church of St. Andrew is an edifice of stone chiefly in the Early English style, consisting of chancel with north and south chapels, clerestoried aisle of four bays, aisles, south porch and a western tower, surmounted by an octagonal broach spire relieved with three tiers of dormers on the cardinal faces and containing a clock and 5 bells, three dated respectively 1634, 1660 and 1713 and all having inscriptions: the oldest portion of the edifice are the piers of the aisles which are of Transition Norman work: the window tracery generally, the oak roofs, the screens which divide the chapels from the aisles and the exterior embattled parapets are of the Perpendicular period: in the south chapel is a plain double piscina, and on that side of the chancel arch is the staircase of the roof-loft; on the opposite side of the arch and facing the nave is a singular canopied shrine: in the south porch and near the north door are mutilated holy water stoups: the corbels of both the exterior and the interior and the bosses on the roof of the south aisle exhibit numerous grotesque carvings: to the walls of the chancel are attached several examples of ancient armour and banners and escutcheons bearing the arms of the Montagu family, dukes and earls of Manchester: in the south chapel is a fine mural monument of black and white marble, beneath which is a table tomb, with a large cushion or pillow; the tablet is inscribed to Henry, 1st Earl of Manchester, who died in 1644; and was successively recorder of London, king's serjeant-at-law, chief justice of England and lord high treasurer, and also author of the well-known "Manchester Al Mondo": on each side are other marble monuments to Anne Lady Mandeville, daughter of Robert (Rich) Earl of Warwick, dated 1641, and Essex, daughter of Sir Thomas Cheeke, dated 1653; two of the wives of Edward, 2nd earl of Manchester: in the opposite chapel is an ancient mural tablet to George Montagu M.P. for Northampton (undated) and near it is a stained window with the arms and motto of the Montagu family, dated 1857; beneath this chapel is the family vault: in the south aisle is another stained window, erected by the parishioners in 1868 to their late vicar, the Rev. Thomas Ainsworth: there are some windows containing fragments of ancient stained glass: the church was restored in 1831-2, at a cost of more than £900, and was re-opened 27th October, 1832, by the Bishop of Ely. The register dates from the year 1547. The living is a vicarage, tithes rent-charge £70, net yearly value £122, including 112 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Manchester, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Robert Kate Vinter M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Baptist chapel. The Moravians founded a chapel here in 1823, and there is a Wesleyan chapel. The Cemetery, situated to the north of the town, and opened in the year 1858, is surrounded by a substantial brick wall, and contains two acres of ground, handsomely ornamented with evergreen shrubs: there is also a good lodge for the porter: it is under the control of a burial board of nine members, who meet at the Board room at the cemetery. The Grammar School, founded in the year 1600 by Henry Balge, fuller, and William Dawson, baker, both of Kimbolton, is endowed with lands producing £220 yearly: the original building was pulled down in 1874 and spacious and handsome premises, with a residence for the head master, erected on the Tilbrook road in 1877, at a cost of £3,500; the Duke of Manchester, ex-officio (chairman), four representative and four co-optative members constitute the Board of Governors; the new premises are arranged for 80 boys, of whom 30 may be boarders; the number now on the register is 33; no scholars are now educated free. An almshouse existed here prior to 1608; the late buildings erected near the churchyard by the inhabitants of Kimbolton in 1701 were pulled down in 1877 and others more commodious erected in their stead in the Grass yard for four poor women, each of whom receives a small sum at Christmas, besides participating in the general charities. The market day is on Friday, but the market is very inconspicuous; there are also four fairs held viz. Friday in Easter week for toys, Friday in Whitsun week for toys and Friday after Old Michaelmas for toys, and 11th of December (old St. Andrew's day) for cattle: also a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the 23rd of September or on the Wednesday nearest to it. The donors of the principal charities, with the dates, amounts and the purposes for which given originally are as follows:—Thomas Loving, in 1557, 6s. 8d. yearly from land in New town to be distributed in bread on St. Thomas' day; William Allen, in 1630, 30s. rent-charge on the Sun inn, now Kimbolton house, distributed in bread at Epiphany; Nicholas Bull, in 1608, 3s. 4d. twice yearly, viz. on Christmas and Easter eves, derived from land at Stonely, for the inmates of the almshouses, and 20s. yearly to the poor of Stonely and 10s. yearly to the poor of Kimbolton, distributed in small sums and in bread; William Peacock's gift (undated), of £2 10s. yearly, being the interest of £50, to the poor of the almshouses at Christmas: the Hon. Eleanor Montagu, in 1695, £50, and Anne, Countess Dowager of Manchester, in 1698, £40, invested in land in Kimbolton and producing about £7 yearly, for distribution in bread; William Love, in 1699, £10, the interest for bread; William Ashton, in 1722, £50 in land at Stonely, producing £3 10s. yearly, Lady Elizabeth Montagu, in 1735, £12 10s. and Lady Doddington Montagu, in 1774, £31 10s. the interest of these sums, £2 10s. to be distributed in bread; William Desbrowe, in 1716, a rent-charge on land in Kimbolton, of £5 yearly, for keeping his tomb in repair, 10s. for a sermon on the 1st of September, and the residue to be distributed from the tomb in sums of 6d. each to poor persons on that day; William Coleman, 20s. rent-charge on a house in East street, 10s. for a sermon on St. Thomas' day and the residue to be given in sums of 1s. each to 10 poor widows; John Cannon, in 1781, the interest of £130 to teach nine poor boys of Stonely to read, and the interest of £50 to keep his tomb in repair, 10s. for a sermon on the 6th of January, and the overplus to be distributed in bread on that day; this produces about £9; Thomas Spackman, in 1782, a rent-charge of 20s. yearly, from land at Stonely, to keep his tomb in repair, the residue to be distributed from the tomb on the 8th September; a former Duchess of Manchester (date unknown) gave £200, which was invested in land at Stonely, and the interest is given to the poor; John Day, in 1836, £100, the interest to keep his tomb in repair, and the residue to be distributed in bread on Christmas day or the following Sunday; Thomas Day, in 1882, gave the interest of £100 to be distributed on St. Thomas' day; Miss A. Welstead, in 1882, bequeathed £100, the interest to be distributed to the poor in coal at Christmas. The ancient charities, some of which are now lost or diverted, produce about £15 yearly, the bulk of which is distributed on St. Thomas' day and at the Epiphany; bread is given away every Sunday; and on January 6th yearly, about 250 fourpenny and twopenny loaves are distributed. Kimbolton Castle, the seat of the Duke of Manchester, formed part of the marriage dowry of Queen Katherine of Arragon, and at her death it reverted to the King, who gave it to Sir

Richard Wingfield "for a consideration;" Sir Richard Wingfield was related by marriage to the Buckingham family, to whom the castle formerly belonged, and also to the Montagus: the castle, restored by Sir John Vanbrugh, by the order of Charles, first Duke of Manchester, is a substantial square building of stone, with embattled parapet, and a courtyard in the centre: the principal entrance is by a flight of steps leading up to a portico, supported on four pillars: the collection of pictures comprises some fine examples of Mabuse, Holbein (several of which belonged to Queen Katherine), Marc Giarrai, Rubens and Vandylke; and of modern masters, portraits by Kneller, Reynolds, Lucy, Kaulbach and Desanges; a fine portrait, by Desanges, of the present Duke, William Drogo, was presented to his grace by the Huntingdonshire Volunteer Cavalry (now disbanded), of which corps his grace was the principal supporter: the library is very extensive and comprises some valuable and ancient and modern manuscripts, its principal treasures are noted by Dibden in his Library Companion and other of his works: the park is extensive and well wooded, and noted for its splendid herd of shorthorn cattle. The Duke of Manchester is lord of the manor. A court leet is held annually by a representative of the Duke. The Duke of Manchester, Wm. Freeman and George Chapman esqs. the trustees of the late Wm. Chapman esq. and Edward Leonard Welstead esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, blue clay and gault. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The parish contains 4,726 acres; rateable value, £8,093; the population in 1881 was 1,220.

STONELY is a hamlet to Kimbolton, half a mile east: here was a priory of seven black canons of the order of St. Augustine, founded by the Bigrammes, or according to Leland by William Mandeville, Earl of Essex, in 1180, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary: it stood within the great manor of Kimbolton (once a hundred), which was the land of Earl Harold, the last Saxon King; after, by grant, it came with the chase of Swineshead to Fitz Peter, from whom, by Magnaui, to Bohun (who, in the time of the tumultuous barons, built there a foreceter), and so to Stafford, by whose attainder forfeited, it was given by Henry VIII. to the family of Wingfield. A field in the neighbourhood is still called "Bigrammes," or more commonly "Beggarmes."

NEWTOWN is a portion of Kimbolton parish, on the north. WORNDITCH is a hamlet half a mile west. Parish Clerk, William Ibbs.

ORTON LONGVILLE (or OVERTON LONGVILLE) is a small village and parish in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, on the borders of Northamptonshire and on the main road from Peterborough to Oundle, 1 mile east from the Overton station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway and 2 south-west from Peterborough; it is bounded on the north by the river Nene, which is navigable for barges from Wisbech to Northampton. The church of Holy Trinity is a building of stone, chiefly in the Early Decorated style, and consisting of chancel, with spacious north chantry, clerestoried nave of three bays, aisles, south porch and a plain tall western tower containing 2 bells: the chancel has a low side window, now blocked, recesses with stone seats on both sides and a trefoiled piscina: the chantry, restored in 1861, retains a piscina and two niches; here also is the effigy of a knight, with the chain hauber and gorget of about 1330, and there are numerous costly monuments, including an elaborate mural monument covered with shields and having a table beneath it inscribed to Elizabeth (Reyner), wife of Henry Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, 1629; Mary, her daughter, wife of Sir William Armyne, 1674, and Talbot Armyne, 1630; another mural monument is to Sir Charles Coxe bart. of Bruern, Oxfordshire, 1781; there is also a very beautiful memorial of white marble, with a graceful female figure by Chantry, to Lady Mary Seymour, 1825, and a massive altar-tomb of black marble to Charles, tenth Marquis of Huntly, 1863; one of the shields thereon is inscribed to Lord Bertrand Gordon, who died at Sydenham in 1869, and another to Lord Lewis Gordon, lost in H.M.S. "Captain" in 1870: the fine stained east window of this chantry was erected to the tenth Marquis of Huntly by his tenantry: on the south side of the chancel arch is a hagioscope and on the north the roof lead door: in the north aisle is a fresco painting of St. Christopher in rare preservation, a half-length, larger than life, and very distinct: in the south aisle is a tablet to William Yarwell, 1597, who gave to the poor of this parish, Botolph's bridge and Cowbit, and 30s. yearly for ever: previous to 1721 there was a church at Botolph's Bridge, but in that year the livings were united and the materials of the old church, which had been long in ruins, were utilized to enlarge and repair the church of this parish: the south porch is dated 1675; the organ was presented in 1806 by Countess Galloway: the church was restored in 1840. The register of Botolph's Bridge extends from 1556 to 1680, but it is very imperfect: that of Orton Longville begins in 1559. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £320, with residence and about 120 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Marquis of Huntly, and held since 1863 by the Rev. John Watson M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The charities, amounting to £11, are distributed yearly amongst the poor in coals and money. Lady Mary Armyne's charity, 1654, a rent charge of £22 from lands in the parish and elsewhere, is for eight beds men and women, who receive 5s. each yearly: the Marquis of Huntly owns these lands, and the rector has the selection of the recipients. Mary Walsham, in 1744, gave £100, the interest for coals. William Yarwell, in 1597, gave land in Cowbit, Lincolnshire, the interest, 10s. yearly to each of the parishes of Cowbit, Botolph's Bridge and Orton Longville, to be distributed on Good Friday and St. Thomas' day: Charles Jeffery, in 1842, left £100, the interest for the poor. Orton Hall, the seat of Maria A. Marchioness of Huntly, is a handsome building of stone in the Tudor style, situated close to the village and church. The Marquis of Huntly is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is gravel; subsoil, strong clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas and beans. The area is 2,400 acres; rateable value, £4,470; the population in 1881 was 261.

ORTON WATERVILLE (or OVERTON WATERVILLE, otherwise CHERRY ORTON) is a small village and parish, in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situated on the borders of Northamptonshire and about half a mile south of the river Nene and a quarter of a mile south from the Overton station on the London and North-Western railway. The village lies a little off the road from Peterborough to Oundle, 3 miles west from the former and 9 north-east from the latter. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone and rubble, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, aisles, south porch and an embattled tower with crocketed pinnacles containing 4 bells: the edifice is chiefly in the Early Decorated style, the arches and much of the window tracery being especially fine: the chancel is much debased, but has a fine low-side window, and near it a semi-circular recess with stone seat: the porch and lower stages of the tower, which is very massive, are Early English, the upper stage Perpendicular: at the east end of each aisle is a piscina and brackets: the beams of the nave roof bear the dates 1753 and 1832: the font consists of an octagonal basin on a cluster of five shafts: the pulpit is a magnificent piece of oak carving of the sixteenth century in the Renaissance style, with richly wrought panels, exhibiting figures and foliage in high relief: in the north aisle is a brass inscribed to John de Herlington 1408. The register dates from the year 1538, but are imperfect from 1748 to 1754. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £300 derived from rent of land with residence (the tithes having been commuted for 280 acres of land at the enclosure of the parish in the year 1810), in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and held since 1837 by the Rev. PAPWORTH ST. AGNES is a parish in the hundred of Papworth and Toseland, union of Caxton and Arlington, partly in this county, but principally in Cambridgeshire, and particulars will be found in "Kelly's Directory of Cambridgeshire."

GREAT PAXTON is a village and parish 3 miles north-east from St. Neots, on the main road to Godmanchester and Huntingdon, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The Great Northern railway runs through the parish; the nearest station is Offord, 2½ miles north; the river Ouse bounds the parish on the west. The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient building of stone and pebbles, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and an embattled tower containing a peal of 5 bells: the interior was restored in the year 1880, at a cost of about £1,000, under the direction of Mr. Ewan Christian and Mr. G. C. Streetfield, architects, of London. The register, partially including Toseland, dates from the year 1583. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Little Paxton and Toseland annexed, tithe rent-charge £4, joint net yearly value £270, including 94 acres of glebe, at Great Paxton and

POND'S BRIDGE is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1866 from portions of the parishes of Stanground, Ramsey, and Whittlesea, surrounding the border line of the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, 6 miles south-east from Peterborough and 3 south from Whittlesea, 3 north-west from Ramsey St. Mary Station on the Great Northern railway and 6 north from Ramsey. The church of St. Thomas, erected by subscription in 1866, is a building of stone in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, south transept and a bell turret on a buttress at the north-west corner, containing 1 bell; in the chancel are a piscina and sedilia and four stained windows; the font consists of an octagonal basin upon four pillars of alabaster, and is richly carved; there are 300 sittings all free. The register dates from September, 1871. Up to July 14th, 1867, the baptisms solemnised in the licensed school room at Pond's Bridge are entered in the register of Ramsey St. Mary's, but from July 14th, 1867 (inclusive), up to August 13th, 1871 (inclusive), such baptisms are in the register of Whittlesea St. Mary's. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £39, net yearly value £146, with residence, in the patronage of the bishop of Ely, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Robert Wells Cross M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is a mission room in connection with the church, 2½ miles from the church, in which services are held. The principal landowners are Edward Fellowes esq. D.L., J.P. of Ramsey Abbey, John Wallbank Childers esq. of Cantley, Doncaster, and the Ven. Lord Saye and Sele M.A. of Broughton Castle, Banbury. The soil is black loam; subsoil, peat. The chief crops are wheat, oats and potatoes. The area is 5,500 acres; the population in 1881 was 658.

Letters by foot post, through the Ramsey post office, received at about 9.45 a.m. returning the same time. Whittlesea is the nearest money order & telegraph office.

Pond's Bridge Parish School (mixed), built in 1872, for 100 children; average attendance, 102; Miss Mary Rigby, mistress; in the school is a stained memorial window, formerly in the old mission room, & erected to Samuel Staffurth, of Ramsey, who built the first school in this district in 1844; he died in 1858, & the window was placed by his widow

RAMSEY (or RAM'S ISLAND) is a market town and a polling-place for the county, 69 miles from London and 10 north-east from Huntingdon, situated at the foot of a hill on Bury brook and on the borders of the Fens, in Huntingdonshire hundred, Huntingdon union and county court district, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Ely. The long street called the Great White or Whyte runs north, and the other, called High street, runs east and west, cutting the south end of the Great Whyte forming with it the letter T. At the north end of the town is the Ramsey and Holme Railway Company's station; this railway forms a junction at Holme with the Great Northern main line. The town is governed by a local board of 12 members and is lighted with gas, supplied by the Ramsey Gas Light and Coke Company Limited. The Church of St. Thomas-a-Becket is a spacious and elegant structure, in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, nave of seven bays with clerestory, aisles and an embattled western tower containing a clock and 6 bells: the chancel is the most ancient part of the edifice; there are the remains of Norman piers and arches in the walls; on the south side of the chancel is a double piscina under one arch, and opposite this is a richly ornamented monumental tomb to William Henry Fellowes esq. of Ramsey Abbey, who represented the borough and county in Parliament for the period of 34 years, and died 23rd August, 1837, and on the south side of the chancel there is also a tablet to the memory of Mrs. Emma Fellowes (relict of William Henry Fellowes esq.), who died 27th January, 1862; in the north aisle are monuments to Carina Day, daughter of the late Peter Descou, who died in 1867, and left £12 yearly to 12 women in the neighbouring almshouses; another to James Smith esq.

surgeon, who died in 1848: in the chancel is a fine lectern of wood, with a brass-bound and chained copy of "Dean Comber on the Book of Common Prayer," and a black-letter copy of "Erasmus' Paraphrase of the Gospels;" the organ was built in 1862 at a cost of £300, raised by subscription: the church was entirely re-pewed and the interior restored in 1844, the interior at the sole expense of Edward Fellowes esq. who also filled the windows of the chancel with stained glass: the exterior work was accomplished by public subscription: the font, hewn out of grey granite from a quarry in Northamptonshire, consists of an hexagonal basin, supported upon a central column of freestone surrounded by six smaller ones of marble: at the east end of the churchyard stands the shaft of an ancient cross. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £450, in the gift of Edward Fellowes esq. D.L., J.P. and held since 1875 by the Ven. John Wise M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge, formerly archdeacon of Colombe.

The Cemetery situated near the town, in Wood lane, covers three acres, of which three fifths are consecrated, and has two chapels. The cost of laying out the ground, drainage and erection of the chapels was about £11,760, and the purchase money for the land £450. The cemetery is under the control of a burial board of 9 members, formed in 1858.

The Catholic church of The Sacred Heart, situated in the New town, and erected in 1863, is a building in the Gothic style; service is now only held occasionally by the priest from Huntingdon.

There are several chapels for Baptists, Particular Baptists, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans.

The Abbey Rooms, built by Edward Fellowes esq. in the year 1877, at a cost of over £1,200, consist of entrance hall, library used chiefly for small meetings, a large room capable of holding 400 persons, with a fixed platform at one end, and 'two retiring rooms, with kitchens and necessary out-buildings.

The Ramsey Institution, situated at the top of Great Whyte, and erected in 1846, belongs to a company of shareholders, and is used for public meetings, lectures, and concerts.

The Police Station, situated in Great Whyte is a building in the Italian style, erected in 1854 after a fire which consumed 13 houses.

The Ramsey Book Society, established in 1807, possesses upwards of 1,300 volumes.

The weekly market is held on Wednesday; pigs are the chief stock, and the annual fair for cattle on the 22nd July. Manorial courts are held annually in April or May.

The rents and interests of certain lands and moneys, amounting to about £80, are yearly distributed among the poor at Christmas. There are also 31 cottages belonging to one of the charities, some few of which are let at a nominal rent and others free to poor parishioners. Almshouses for 12 poor women were built in 1837 by Miss Urania Fellowes and Edward Fellowes esq. on the site of six then pulled down.

This town became infected by the plague in the year 1666 by means, it is said, of a piece of cloth, sent from London for the purpose of being made into a coat for Colonel Cromwell, cousin of the Protector, who, with the tailor and all his family and about 400 persons, died of the infection; his burial is recorded thus in the parish register—"Col. William Cromwell, Gentleman, 3rd younger son of Sir O. C. departed this life Febr. 23. 9 in 3rd morning & was buried Febr. 24. 9 of clock at night 1665-6." At the head of the entries for the next year is written:—"1666. Ramsey visited with y^e plague this year." On the 21st May, 1731, a disastrous conflagration consumed upwards of 80 dwelling-houses of the town, besides shops, barns and other out-buildings.

In the middle ages Ramsey became a place of considerable consequence on account of its rich Benedictine abbey, founded in 699 by Alwin, Allderman of all England and Earl of the East Angles, and dedicated to SS. Mary and Benedict. The abbey, which had the distinction of being "mitred," stood at the upper end of the town, and occupied a tract of solid ground, two miles in length, surrounded by the Ouse, and melancholy marshes; the beautiful Perpendicular gatehouse and refectory remain: Queen Isabella was here for a fortnight in 1399; at the dissolution there were 9 monks, and revenues estimated at £1,715; it is now the seat of Edward Fellowes esq. D.L., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner.

The area is 16,562 acres, chiefly fen land; rateable value, £29,551 10s. 4d.; the population in 1881 was 4,617.

FORTYFET BRIDGE (2 miles north-east), RAMSEY HOLLOW, HEEN DROVE, UGG MERE (2 miles north-west), and MIDDLEMOOR are in this parish.

Parish Clerk, Charles Vessey.

RAMSEY ST. MARY'S is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1858 out of Ramsey, a miles north-west from Ramsey and 7½ by rail from London, in Huntingstone hundred, Huntingdon union and county court district, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely; here is a station of the Ramsey and Holme branch of the Great Northern railway. The church of St. Mary, erected in 1858, is a very elegant building of stone in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel, with vestry on the north, nave of five bays, aisles, south porch and a tower with spire west of the north aisle, and containing a clock and 2 bells: the main entrance is under the tower, the lower stage of which forms a sort of north porch: there are several stained windows, two being memorials to the late Mrs. Emma Fellowes, who founded the church and also endowed it with £150 yearly, to which the Ecclesiastical Commissioners added £50 yearly. The register dates from the year 1850. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £200, in the gift of Edward Fellowes esq. D.L., J.P. and held since 1875 by the Rev. William Harpur. There are

ST. IVES.

St. IVES is a municipal borough, head of a poor law union, a parish and polling place for the county, situated on the north bank of the river Ouse; it was anciently called Stepe, and by that appellation is mentioned in Domesday Book. It acquired its present name from Ivo, a Persian bishop, who, it is said, travelled through England preaching and at last came here, where he died about the end of the sixth century. St. Ives was incorporated as a borough in 1874. The corporation consists of a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors, who also act as the Urban Sanitary Authority. It is 59 miles from London, 5 east from Huntingdon on the road to Lynn and 14 north-east from St. Neots, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, county court district of Huntingdon, in the rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The Midland and Great Eastern railways have a station here, and a line from Ely, via Haddingham and Sutton (Cambridgeshire), to St. Ives was constructed by the Great Eastern Company, and was opened for traffic in 1878.

The church of All Saints is an edifice of stone in the Norman and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, north and south porches and a western tower with spire containing 8 bells and a clock with Handel's chimes: there are several stained windows, and in the south aisle is a double piscina in the Transition Norman style: the spire was rebuilt in 1879, at a cost of £800, defrayed from the town estate and public subscription, the architect being A. W. Blomfield esq. M.A.: there are memorial windows to the Rev. Yate Fosbroke esq. M.A. 26 years vicar, erected in 1867 by parishioners; the Rev. Thomas Smith M.A. and Ann, his wife, 1802, erected in 1863 by Mary Ann Smith, their only daughter; Thomas Earl, late of this town (1858), erected in 1861 by his widow and children; and to Wright Ingle, 1855, and Elizabeth, his wife, 1857; there are others to the Houghton and Britton families, and to Benjamin Green esq. 1860: the church has sittings for 680 persons. The churchyard was enlarged by the addition of one acre in 1859. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from 1561: burials, 1563. One feature of historic interest is the occurrence in 1634 of the signature of Oliver Cromwell, who was then a resident at St. Ives, in a parochial book of accounts. The living is a vicarage, with Old Hurst and Wood Hurst chapelries annexed, tithe rent-charge £68, net yearly value £216, including 124 acres of glebe and 78 acres in hand, and residence, in the gift of B. F. Ansley and G. J. Ansley esqrs. and the trustees of the late G. Ansley esq. and held since 1866 by the Rev. Charles Dashwood (oldie) a late scholar of St. John's College Cambridge.

Abbot Ednoth, in the reign of King Edgar, A.D. 970, erected a church on the site where the remains of Ivo, the Persian bishop, were said to have been found and afterwards removed to Ramsey Abbey; and in the year 1070 the priory was built by Earl Adelmar, who placed some Benedictine monks from Ramsey in it and granted them various possessions and privileges. In the year 1207 the church and priory offices were burnt, but, being rebuilt, continued in subordination to Ramsey till after the Dissolution, when, in the 26th of Henry VIII. the site of the priory was granted to Sir Thomas Ansley. A handsome Gothic house, now occupied by Frederic Warren esq. was erected on the spot in 1872. Some portions of the walls of the priory barn still remain in the garden.

The County school was established in 1869 as a public middle class school, and is well situated at the west end of the town. There are house exhibitions amounting to about £200 yearly. The present head master, W. H. Holman, was appointed in 1883.

The Free Church, situated on the south side of the Market hill and built in 1864-5 by the Congregational Dissenters, at a cost of £6,000, including site, is an edifice in the Decorated style, with a tower and spire 156 feet in height: there are several stained windows, that in front being the gift of John Warner esq. of this town: a clock has been placed in the tower at the cost of the inhabitants generally: connected with the church are school-rooms, a lecture-room and committee-room.

Here are Baptist, Congregational, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels, also a Friends' meeting house.

The Cemetery, situated on the northern outskirts of the town, and covering 2 acres, was opened for interment in 1848. The property is vested in a company of shareholders, whose capital, £1,000, was raised in two hundred £5 shares and is under the management of a committee chosen annually.

St. Ives has a market every Monday for cattle, the market is divided, one sale beginning at 3 a.m. and closing at 5 a.m. the second commencing at 11 a.m. and closing at 2 p.m. sheep and pigs; this market was granted by charter of King Edward I. about the year 1290. There are also two well-frequented fairs held annually on Whit-Monday and the 11th October, for the former of which a charter was granted in the year 1110 by Henry I. who privileged it to continue from Whit-Monday till the Monday following and all that day; at these fairs great quantities of cattle, sheep and general wares are disposed of, and at the Michaelmas fair much cheese is sold.

The Corn Exchange, situated in the centre of the town and erected by a committee of shareholders in 1864, is now the property of the St. Ives Corn Exchange and Public Hall Company Limited: the average attendance of merchants and farmers on market days exceeds 500; the building is also let for public meetings and concerts.

The Gas Works are situated on the London road, and the Police Station, which is on the south side of the Sheep market, adjoining the National schools, has a residence for the superintendent. A new building was added in 1884 for the purposes of the Petty Sessions, which are held on Mondays and Fridays; this comprises a lofty room, magistrates' room and a spacious waiting room for witnesses; the work was carried out under the supervision of Mr. R. Hutchinson, county surveyor, at a cost of £600.

The Public Institution, situated in the Crown yard, erected in 1848, at a cost of £1,000, has a large hall, 60 feet in length, 30 in breadth and 18 in height: it is now used as a Liberal club.

The St. Ives Union Benefit Society, established in 1836, holds its meetings in the old Independent chapel, its object is to provide for its members in times of sickness; it has now (1885) 104 members.

The St. Ives Mutual Improvement Society and Reading-rooms, in Vine court, were opened in 1853; there is a library of over 600 volumes, and in the reading-room will be found the daily and other papers and standard periodicals; there are now (1885) about 100 members.

The Church Institute, established in 1868, has been removed to a central position in the town, and now occupies an old timbered house of the fifteenth century; the upper room is panelled with oak and beautifully carved, and there is also here a coffee room connected with the Church of England Temperance Society, and also lodging-rooms for poor lads: there are now (1885) 40 members.

The St. Ives Literary Institute, established many years ago as a Young Men's Christian Association, is situated close to the market-place, and consists of reading, lecture and billiard rooms, a class-room and good library of 700 volumes; there are now (1885) 160 members.

The St. Ives Friendly Institution was established in 1837, with a view to provide for its members in times of sickness; it has now (1885) 114 members; the balance in hand at the close of 1884 was £2,398.

Thomas Cordell bequeathed £20 yearly, Robert Langley left in 1856, £40 yearly, Thomas Sharp devised, 1697, a piece of land, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, sister to Thomas Sharp, left £20—these sums are distributed among the poor; the town estate, consisting of a messuage in the Sheep market, workshops and drying sheds, contiguous six cottages in Poor Folks lane, an ozier holt, reeds and rush beds near same piece of land called Town Close, 2A. 36P. with the buildings, town lay, 1A. 14P. allotment in Kingsbrook field 3A. 2A. the proceeds of which are to be laid out for the rearing of the church and the surplus to be divided among the poor; Robert Wild, of Oundle, Northamptonshire, left by will £50, the interest of which is for Bibles, to be distributed by the vicar; Mrs. Proby, widow of Thomas Proby esq. left £15 yearly for the vicarage; Wright Ingle left by will, in 1862, £200, the interest of which is to be divided on the longest and shortest days between four poor widows, also £100, the interest to be devoted to the repairing of the tombs, tablets and memorial windows erected to any member of the Ingle family.

Close to the river on the Fenstanton side stands one of the extensive flour mills belonging to Messrs. Brown and Goodman.

One of the most ancient and interesting specimens of domestic architecture in the town is the residence of John Wadsworth esq., close to the river and bridge; it contains some very fine oak panellings, and with its many gables presents a most picturesque appearance.

A great part of the town was destroyed in 1680 by a fire, which broke out at the end of White Hart lane, on the 30th April in that year; the wind being very high it crossed the Sheep market, consuming everything in its way down to the waterside, and laid in ashes houses belonging to 122 families, besides goods, corn and malt, the whole loss amounting to upwards of £13,000.

The lower parts of the town, built directly on the Ouse banks, have been frequently overflowed; this was particularly the case in November, 1823, when a very high flood occurred, in which a considerable quantity of property was destroyed; destructive floods also occurred in 1875, and during the six years following, which have been very detrimental to the trade of the town. Over the river is a stone bridge of six arches, said to have been erected by the Abbots of Ramsey; two of the arches were rebuilt in 1716, by William Duke of Manchester, who also widened the wharf in 1724; near the centre, over one of the piers, is an ancient building, the lower part of which was anciently a chapel, but is now used as a dwelling-house: adjoining the bridge on the south side is a brick causeway on arches erected in 1822, reaching a considerable distance, the arches affording a free passage for the water during the overflowings of the river.

Slepe Hall, once the residence of Oliver Cromwell, has been taken down and a number of houses built upon its site.

The Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and Mrs. Ansley, the trustees of the late William Medland esq. Mrs. Lawrence and the trustees of the late John Green esq. are the chief landowners.

The area of the parish is 2,111 acres; rateable value, £13,024; the population in 1881 was 3,002. Parish Clerk, Whettnall Stevens.
